The HIT
OF THE SEASON

In the past season every first-class flower store the country over had calls for bouquets made up with a certain small pink rose. In some stores it was sold under the name of

MIGNON in others as SWEETHEART

The real name of the rose is

and we believe we supplied all the cut buds except for one lot grown in the east from plants obtained from us last year. We shipped cut buds to New York, Chicago and many other cities. The rose was the hit of Fifth avenue and its fame spread throughout the country, resulting in a demand for the buds in every store that caters to the good trade. It is in great request for corsage bouquets, Colonial bouquets, boutonnierns, etc. Appreciating that because of our distance from the largest markets we can not handle the demand for cut buds, we have prepared to supply young plants to growers who know a money-making novelty when they see it.

ASSETS AND LIABILITIES

A good field of Giganteum in Japan is an asset to the consumer who gets the bulbs—a bad field is a big liability. It don't matter how cheap you buy bad bulbs—you lose just the same. Therefore the first requisite in buying lily bulbs is to get stock from the best fields—when you are sure of that you may dicker on price if you want. Good fields bring good prices, naturally, so don't ever let a salesman sell you lily bulbs just because they are cheap. It never pays. Horseshoe Brand Giganteum come from the very best fields in Japan—when you insist upon that brand you are safe in dickering on price, but otherwise you are skating on thin ice. Many growers know by experience which has cost them money—let others profit by their experience. When you buy lily bulbs ask for Horseshoe Brand—no other brand will average higher. Send for catalog with prices.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Getting Ready for Carnations

Cleaning out and refilling benches and beds, with the accompanying hard labor, fortunately do not come under the heading of every-day work. It does not pay to put off the start until the last minute. There is sure to be some repairing of beds or benches needed, and usually we find more than we expected. Clean up thoroughly under the benches, in the walks, in fact from end to end. If the house is entirely empty it is a good plan to fumigate it thoroughly with sulphur before replanting, but be sure there are no plants in the house which you want to keep. This is perhaps the strongest point in favor of detached houses. You can fumigate one house without doing the same to the whole place. When refilling the beds put a layer of half-rotted cow manure on the bottom about one inch thick. Some growers object to this, but we have always found it a good practice. On top of this fill in the soil. Level the soil as you fill the beds and see that the beds are well filled along the edge. If leveled, the soil dries out better over the whole bed and can be watered evenly when wanted for planting.

Greenhouse Building

Whenever the demand for any commodity exceeds the supply thereof, it naturally follows that producers will strive to equalize conditions by providing additional facilities to bring forth a more ample output in the future. Now is the time to get building figures and estimates from the different greenhouse construction firms advertised in HORTICULTURE. To build new greenhouses nowadays is not at all a laborious undertaking. The greatest part of the most particular work is done by the mill. It is easily and quickly framed and set up. It is real fun to build a new greenhouse, and a delight to conduct gardening operations in a new, well-planned house. My advice is to build large enough, while you are at it; to build plain and simple but substantial; to avoid all frills and unnecessary ornamentation; to have your plans well and thoroughly thought out in every detail before you order the material and to let this be of the best and most durable that can be had.

Miltonia vexillaria

When this summer-flowering orchid is through flowering the plants should have any necessary repotting done. They do well in pans or pots, which should be half-filled with broken crocks and lumpy charcoal. A good compost is osmunda fern fiber mixed with a little live sphagnum. Place them in as cool a house as you may have; there is no better place for them than a north house. After repotting you will need to use extreme caution in watering at the roots; only just keep the plants moderately damp until they have formed plenty of new roots. Where you can, use blinds or lath shadings that can be removed when the powerful sun has gone. These orchids like plenty of ventilation both day and night up to the fall. Keep them well syringed overhead during all bright weather. Miltonias are very partial to thrips so to keep the plants absolutely clean they should be sponged or dipped with fir tree oil or Aphine about every two weeks.

Pansies for Next Winter

There is quite a good demand for pansy flowers during the winter months. To have nice large plants by next fall, it is not a bit too early to sow some of the best varieties now. Sow broadcast in a cold frame where the soil has been worked and raked until it is fine and mellow. Sow not too thickly, cover with fine soil and press firmly all over with a board, then water gently with a fine rose. Keep shaded until they begin to come up. Pansies will grow and do much better when planted early if kept shaded with cheese cloth until the overdrying and powerful mid-day sunshine passes, when it can be taken off. When the seedlings have made enough growth so they can be nicely handled they can be transplanted into other frames. The soil should be made rich and quite a bit of leaf mold mixed in. They can be planted from 6 to 8 inches apart each way and with timely waterings and attention they will make large clumps by October.

Young Ferns for Dishes

Young ferns that are of good size and are in flats can now be potted into 2-inch pots and will make fine stock by October. Give a liberal and rich compost, say three parts of fibrous soil, one part each of leaf mold and well decayed cow manure and enough of sand to make it porous. To keep them from drying out the pots should be plunged to the rims in a couple of inches of fine coal ashes or sand spread on the benches. Give only enough shade to break the direct rays of the sun. Give plenty of ventilation to keep the atmosphere as cool and moist as possible. Look over your plants morning and afternoon so they will not become dry at the roots. To encourage a good stocky growth they should have an occasional spreading out as the plants begin to crowd one another.

Sowing Late Annuals

Now is a good time to make a sowing of annuals which will flower during the early fall. Of course there is some risk but it pays sometimes where we do not have an early frost. Make a sowing of all such annuals as candytuft, clarkias, coreopsis, calendulas, Shirley poppies, larkspurs, lupines, etc. Sow where they have water handy so they can be kept moist during their growing period. With good cultivation and plenty of water it is surprising what rapid growth they will make.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Violets; Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and Cincinnati; Rambler Roses; Ferns from Spores; Mignonette; Propagating Ivies.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

George H. Penson

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Penson. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Layering Strawberries

In some localities this work will have been on hand for some little time yet there are others who will only just be ready to proceed, such is the territory covered by HORTICULTURE. Before commencing the job let your mind travel back to last January and the three succeeding months; study up the growth and crops produced from the forcing strawberries; were there any trials made? If so, did any one surpass the standard variety that has occupied the forcing house or shelves as the case may be for the past few seasons? If so, increase the number to be grown this season. Also if any new varieties have come into prominence during the past season give a few of them a try-out in the pots this time. At the time of layering, a complete list should be made up of the varieties to be grown and the requisite number, which makes the job so much easier for the one who is doing it. Most establishments will have a favorite variety for forcing and if this has proved itself worthy of the place entrusted to it continue to grow it with a few try-outs. These latter are always interesting if not always profitable. With us Marshall is a prime favorite.

Have sufficient three-inch pots clean and also enough soil sifted through the half-inch sieve. It is essential the pots be clean, so they will turn out good at the time of potting up. The soil is not so particular—anything sweet the plants will root into freely. Young plants that have not fruited this year will be found to possess the strongest runners, which should always be selected for pot work. The best method of procedure is to clean the stock plants first, remove all weeds, bad leaves and also any runners that are too old. It is useless to put in any that are dry and hard. Those remaining should be drawn to one side of the plant so that the small pots can be placed close together to facilitate watering and also to, in some degree, prevent a rapid drying out. Those pots that are unfortunate enough to be on the outside can have some soil or straw mulch that has been on the bed drawn up around them which will help to keep them evenly moist with the others. The work itself is easy after all the preparatory work is done. Have the pots placed in position, select the layer for each one, remove any more plants that may be on the same wire, (or rhizome) see that this wire will reach to the bottom of the pot, leaving the crown of the plant to be level with the top of the soil. Fill in the soil on top of the wire which will keep it in position until such time as the roots push out to perform their duties. See that the pots are stood level to retain the water which must be given them frequently to keep the soil moist for the roots to grow into. When the pots are nicely filled with roots cut the wire and transfer them to a convenient place to await the final potting.

Rivers Orange Nectarine

When we are confronted with the problem of selecting varieties to do us service, whether it be to replace old and wornout stock, additional pot-trees or the planting of a new house there will generally creep in one or two of some variety which we have a personal liking for in addition to what might be called its face value. After weighing up the merits and demerits of most of the varieties of nectarines grown, Rivers' Orange always finds a warm spot on account of its flavor. It is different from most of the others; the fruit is inclined to be small when compared with such varieties as Early Rivers or Newton but the eating is not to be surpassed if my palate could judge. Others may not be of the same opinion yet no one to my knowledge has ever turned it down. Those who are not acquainted with this variety will do well to "get next to it" as it is a most delightful thing and something different from the general run of things when you talk of flavor. It is described by the raisers, Messrs. T. Rivers & Son, as medium in size, melting, with the rich saccharine flavor of its parent, Pitmaston Orange.

Do It Now

To speak of ordering stock for next fall or winter delivery may at first glance appear to be away ahead of time but think it over. Some of the crops are already gone, those remaining can be gauged very well as to what the actual results will be. Trees not giving satisfaction are best replaced. It so happens that once in a while a tree does not come up to its reputation, or a singularity may be that a certain variety refuses to grow as it ought to do. These and other conditions can be taken into consideration and the order placed at once thus ensuring a sure delivery or an early notification that the particular size and quality you require are not in stock. Orders are generally filled in rotation as they are received,—see what it means to have stock selected before it has done growing. HORTICULTURE is willing to assist anyone in making selections, being governed by the performances and crops of said varieties growing under glass in America.

We would call attention to Mr. Penson's note on "Pears in Pots" in last week's issue, and "Propping Apples" which starts off with "Apples can be treated in a similar manner," meaning similar to the pears. The article on pears should have come in first, followed up by the apples, in which case that first sentence would be intelligible. The paragraphs were inadvertently transposed.—Ed.

Edwin Jenkins is taking a few weeks' vacation, at the end of which he will resume his notes on outdoor vegetables and fruit.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Mulch for the Outside Roses

With the real hot summer weather here, and the sun's hot rays bearing down upon the earth almost perpendicular, it stands to reason that the tender rootlets of all the roses ought to have protection of some kind that will keep the soil cool and help hold the moisture so that when the plants are watered once every two or three days no trouble will be experienced in keeping the plants wet. If good blooms are wanted on all the outside roses, use a little bonemeal around the plants first after which a coat of good manure can be applied, this to be followed by a mulch of hay, or any coarse material that may happen to be available.

Weeds Around the Place

Never tolerate tall weeds all around. These not only make the place look unsightly, but are a nuisance. Never allow any weeds on your property to go to seed if you can help it. Not only will your place look much better, but you will find that you will have less and less of weeds as the years go by. Of course your neighbors may be careless and let their gardens all go to weeds, but that excuses no one at all for neglecting his own grounds. Cut all the weeds and burn them.

Painting

If this is not under way as yet, be sure to make the preparation and surprise the houses with a coat of nice paint this summer. The best time to do it is right after the houses are planted. It is then that the least water is used around the houses, and they are drier then than at any other time of the year. The paint will also dry much better and but little if any drier will be required to set the paint. So much the better for the more linseed oil and the less of other liquids in the paint it will wear better. Be sure to sandpaper all the rough places, and to scrape all the old loose paint away, for if this is left on the new coat will soon come off with the old.

Putty

Do not be afraid to use plenty of putty and have the houses tight for the coming season. It is all very well to say they grow just as well. Two places were built right across the street from one another about twenty years ago. One was painted through every two years, and the other never painted right in the first place. Now the latter is all ready for the junk heap, while the former is as good as new, with little repairing. Now then, does it pay to paint? Or does it pay to do anything?

The Sun and the Pots

Do not allow your pots to be stacked up on the south side of the greenhouse, where the sun will be baking them as hard as iron. Pots that are very hard are very easily broken for they loose their elasticity, and become very brittle. Keep them in the shade as much as possible, until the planting is over when they can be washed and put away properly.

FUMIGATING AND SPRAYING CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Mr. Farrell.

Dear Sir:—To settle an argument, will you please inform me whether you think that two hours is sufficiently long enough to leave fumigation in a 'mum house, making the same strong; or the ordinary and leaving the house closed all night; also what time of day you advise for spraying? We look to you to put the finish to our controversy, as we are all young and consequently "know-it-all."

Sincerely yours, J. D.

Morristown, N. J.

When we enter into this argument we have to consider that the chrysanthemum is a cool-blooded and air-loving subject, so to close the house up all night is entirely wrong, as it only tends to create a superabundance of heat and moisture in the atmosphere of the house which is very detrimental to this class of plants. Chrysanthemums, at this season of the year, should have all the ventilation possible, both night and day. When fumigating it is never wise or sane to think of making one strong fumigation in order to kill the pests, as this is bound to work injury to the plants. The experienced grower's way is to start when the sun is off his plants and leave the house shut up for about three hours, after which he puts on ventilation. After using an ordinary fumigation, if he finds they are not all killed he gives them another dose the following night, which generally completes their destruction. By following up these light fumigations once in every ten days you will be able to keep your plants clean. Spraying or syringing can be done two or three times a day, but doing the last one about 2 o'clock in the afternoon so the plants will have time to dry before night. As fall approaches you can cut this down to one in the morning. Syringing should only be done on bright days and when the flowers show color it should be discontinued altogether.

JOHN J. M. FARRELL.

DISEASE OF PANSIES.

Mr. John J. M. Farrell.

Dear Sir:—We are losing hundreds of pansy plants like the enclosed. Can you tell me the trouble and give remedy?

Very truly, C. W. B.

Rye Beach, N. H.

In answer to the foregoing inquiry, judging by the appearance of the sample of pansy sent, I should say that they are suffering from some of the species of fungi common to most plants. Without further particulars as to the mode of cultivation, etc., it would be hard to give a definite remedy, as such diseases can be brought on by a number of causes. It may be that your plants are planted in an uncongenial soil, which gives the roots a check to such an extent that they cannot take up the required nourishment to keep them in a healthy state. If such is the case it would be impossible to help them out. The only thing to do would be to avoid using the same piece of soil a second time. For pansies to do their best, new ground should be used often or in rotation with some other crop that had different food requirements. When the disease is brought on by other causes it can be stopped by spraying with some good fungicide and there is nothing better than the ammonical copper carbonate solution, which can be made as follows: Copper carbonate, one ounce; pure ammonia, one pint; put in a bottle and allowed to dissolve. This can be used from one ounce to one ounce and a half, to a gallon of water. Spray about every ten days. Fungicides, in the treatment of fungous diseases of plants, are as a rule preventive remedies, and their successful use depends very largely on early and repeated applications. By attending to all conditions that are sure to produce a healthy growth, such as avoiding overdryness at the roots, careful waterings and keeping your plants clean of all decaying matter, etc., you should soon overcome this trouble.

The June shows

The month of June seems to be rapidly gaining in importance as an exhibition month and in many respects makes a close second to November. Roses, strawberries, peonies, sweet peas and the great variety of showy shrub and herbaceous material available for June showing are a prime incentive to competition and display. While there is no question of the public admiration for these lavish products of the early summer yet it is plain that conditions at this season can never be favorable to the popular success of any exhibition with paid admission and the incurring of any great pecuniary responsibility in installing or conducting such affairs in June is not to be considered, except in the case of institutions financially able to assume the expense regardless of the income from attendance. The free show backed by subscriptions to cover its prize schedule and other expenses will in most cases prove the safest course and insure the greatest good to the greatest number. Education, not income, is the raison d'etre for the June show.

Volume XVIII

With this number HORTICULTURE begins a new volume. The volume which closed with the issue of June 28 comprised 976 pages, which with a number of 4-page inserts brings the dimensions up to approximately 1000 pages, the largest volume HORTICULTURE has put out thus far. The index to same, which accompanies the present issue is an impressive presentment of the vast amount of really valuable matter which we have been enabled to gather together in the space of six months and to deliver to our readers for the trifling sum of half a dollar. There are papers in the field more voluminous than HORTICULTURE but none, we believe, that strive so hard for quality or that give in the aggregate, after the frivolous stuff has been sifted out, a greater amount of reading matter of permanent, practical value. It will be our aim in the volume now starting to enlarge and improve upon the past and the same editorial policy in the selection of the best reading matter obtainable, together with fresh news matter in condensed form, will be continued. The beginning of a new volume is a good time to start a new subscription. Haven't you a friend who might like to subscribe for the coming year? Send us his address and a sample copy will be promptly forwarded to him.

The convention draws near

We present in this issue a practically complete program for the S. A. F. convention at Minneapolis, now only seven weeks away. A perusal of the program will convince the reader that the national society is rapidly growing into new methods, getting away from the mass meeting stage and systematizing its work in a manner befitting an organization numbering fifteen hundred and rapidly growing in numbers and influence. The steady gravitation of the various special one-flower societies to the central body is very evident and the resultant subdivision of the meetings will, no doubt, be cordially welcomed by the convention attendants. The only people who will now feel obliged to sit out every session are those hard-worked slaves—the trade paper men, and this is largely their own fault, in the strenuous rivalry and needless struggle to gather in and print "immediately if not sooner" every detail of meetings, exhibition and pastimes. The program, as presented, is very comprehensive and any florist who cannot find something in it of direct interest to himself must be a pretty poor stick. We believe the time will soon come when any florist worthy of the name will be ashamed to acknowledge that he is not a member of the S. A. F. or any one of its affiliated bodies.

A gold medal was given to John Mahan for rock garden. Certificates of merit were awarded to John Mahan for rhododendrons, Wm. Tricker for aquatics, Thos. Brooks for New English sweet peas, A. N. Pierson for general display and Mrs. Moody rose.

Some of the leading winners in the other special and regular classes for plants and cut flowers were:

Mrs. W. G. Weld, gard. Paul Volquardson; Mrs. F. Vanderbilt, gard. David Hay; H. A. Taylor, gard. Wm. Mackay; Mrs. H. D. Auchincloss, gard. John Mahan; H. H. Rogers, gard. Jas. Garthly; Mrs. T. O. Richardson, gard. Jas. Robertson; Mrs. W. W. Sherman, gard. Andrew Ramsay; Miss Fannie Foster, gard. C. M. Bugholt; Vincent Astor, gard. James Boyd; W. Waldorf Astor, gard. Hugh Williamson; Mrs. Alfred Tuckerman, gard. E. Kempanear; D. B. Fearing, gard. J. Baumgartner; W. B. Greene, gard. Samuel Speers.

In making arrangements for the exhibits on the show grounds, the Garden Association failed to provide proper protection for the tender exhibits classed in the schedule and on this account many excellent specimen greenhouse plants intended to be there were not shown. The Association was fortunate however in securing as manager of the show, Joseph Manda of West Orange, N. J., who after much hard work seemed to make the best of the material available. The only classes well filled were the rose and sweet peas and the quality in both was excellent especially the display of sweet peas by William Gray who by this won the silver cup offered by the Aphine Manufacturing Co., for the most meritorious exhibit by a member of the National Association of Gardeners., After the close of the show president A. S. Michell of the Horticultural Society invited the visitors and a number of local gardeners to the Bellevue Hotel where an excellent dinner was in readiness which was generously provided for by Mrs. W. S. Wells a member of the Garden Association.

After dinner had been done justice to President Meikle opened the speech-making session with appropriate remarks and calling on Mr. Manda as the first speaker, who responded with a spicy account of his experiences as manager of the show. Other speakers were L. Oesternei, William Tricker, J. E. Lager, O Schultz, A McLellan, J. Hart, J. T. Allen.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

J. B. Pilkington, of Portland, Oregon, will be president of the American Association of Nurserymen for the coming year. He was unanimously elected at the closing session of the annual convention at Portland, June 20.

While Mr. Pilkington was not an active candidate for the honor, the sentiment of the convention early swung his way and his election was a tribute to his service as a member of the association of many years' standing, who had always taken an active part in promoting its best interests. Mr. Pilkington is credited with having not only brought the convention of the American Association to Portland this year, but with having persuaded the Pacific Coast Association to hold its convention at the same time and place, thus making possible the unity of action that characterized the joint conventions. It was the first time that the American Association had ever met west of the Rocky Mountains and the first time that it had ever met in joint session with the Pacific Coast Association, next to it the most important organization of nurserymen in the country.

Mr. Pilkington succeeds Thomas B. Meehan, of Dresher, Pa., who had some supporters for re-election. Mr. Meehan was not an active candidate and his friends joined in making Mr. Pilkington's nomination and election unanimous when the strong sentiment in his favor became apparent.

A tribute to the years of faithful service of Secretary John Hall, of Rochester, N. Y., was rendered by his re-election without opposition. Other officials elected are: Vice-President Henry B. Chase, of Chase, Ala.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.; Executive Committee, three-year term, Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa.; two-year term, J. H. Dayton, Painesville, Ohio; one-year term, P. A. Dix, Roy, Utah.

Cleveland was unanimously selected as the 1914 meeting place, and it was decided to hold the convention the last week in June, because it will be easier for delegates to leave their nurseries at that time than earlier in the month.

San Francisco will make a fight for the 1915 convention, and to pave the way for the contest that city withdrew as a candidate for the 1914 meeting, which was also wanted by Niagara Falls, Cedar Point, Ia., New Orleans and Milwaukee.

An amusing feature of yesterday's session occurred when Secretary Hall, in reading the names of members who had died since the previous meeting, pronounced that of John C. Chase, of Derry, N. H. The delegates rose in token of respect for the dead, and just as they were sitting down again, Mr. Chase, who had disrespectfully remained seated, arose and denied his demise. He declared that he was present in the flesh, and that the Chase who had passed on was his cousin, Benjamin Chase, with whom he had always been associated in business. A stenographer's error in transcribing the names was responsible for the mistake. Portland Oregonian.

EXHIBITION AT AMHERST, MASS.

The Florists' and Gardeners' Club of the Masschusetts Agricultural College, which is composed largely of members of the floricultural classes, held an exhibition of cut flowers during Monday and Tuesday, June 16th and 17th of Commencement week. This exhibition was largely attended by town's people and Commencement visitors and proved an attractive feature of the week. A large number of named varieties of peonies were on exhibition from the trial plots at the college, also many of the herbaceous perennials which are in flower at this season. The college also exhibited varieties of carnations, roses and sweet peas. This exhibit was supplemented through the generosity of many of the commercial and private growers of the vicinity. The A. N. Pierson Company of Cromwell, Conn., sent splendid vases of Dark Pink Killarney, White Killarney and Lady Hillingdon roses. W. H. Elliott of Madbury, N. H., and Brighton, Mass., sent vases of American Beauty, Christine Miller, Mrs. Taft and Lady Hillingdon roses. Patten & Company of Tewksbury sent a vase of Princess Dagmar carnations and O. D. Allyn, a rose enthusiast of Holyoke, Mass., showed thirty-six varieties of hybrid perpetual and hybrid tea roses. S. A. Wilde of Taunton, Mass., sent forty varieties of outdoor roses and sixty types and varieties were received from Elizabeth Park at Hartford, Conn.

The past year has been a progressive one for the Department of Floriculture. There were eight members in the graduating class and all of these have secured desirable positions.

PHILADELPHIA SWEET PEA SHOW.

The annual sweet pea show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held on June 26th. There was a very creditable exhibition in the competitive classes. The premier display was put up by Wm. Comfort, gardener for C. H. Clark, Jr. They were the best grown and most perfect flowers in the competitive classes. His collection included among others, the following popular varieties: Ramona, blush; Etta Dyke, snow white; Master piece, pale mauve; Queen Victoria; othello, maroon; Tennant, deep mauve; America, pink and white striped. Other growers who distinguished themselves in the competitive classes were R. Abernethy, gardener for Thos. McKean; Axel Lindroth, gardener for Rudulph Ellis; Thos. Roberts, gardener for Hon. Edward D. Morrell; Charles Weyand, gardener for G. H. McFadden, Jr.; Hugh Scott, gardener to W. W. Frazier; Joseph Hurly, and David Aiken.

In the non-competitive department the banner show was put up by Burpee under the superintendence of that veteran sweet-pea expert George W. Kerr. About two hundred vases were staged and although the date was a little late for Fordhook at its best, the showing was magnificent. Seven first class certificates were granted new varieties also a special award for the exhibit as a whole. Among the varieties certificated were the following: King White, one of the greatest whites since Dorothy Eckford; always four to the stem when in good form; will be sent out in 1914; Illuminator, a brilliant orange scarlet, very pure self, immense in size, and perfection in form, will be sent out in 1914; Wedgewood, azure blue a very beautiful variety; Floradale dairy, a new yellow seedling raised at Lompoc, California, will not be sent out for some time; when at its best produces a large number of duplex flowers, remarkable also for its wavy standard. No other variety has this feature so pronounced; Orchid, probably the finest mauve in cultivation. Was sent out 1913 and has proved universally popular, throws a very large proportion of 4-flower sprays, no variety extant more free flowering; Frank Cartwright, a softer shade of salmon rose than Illuminator, a most beautiful variety; Burpee's New Giant Mauve, a lighter shade than Orchid described above.

In addition to the sweet peas there was a good display of hardy perennials, the Newbold collection of which the veteran John Nisbet had charge deservedly getting the first prize. Joseph Hurley won first in the Japanese iris exhibit with a splendid lot of flowers in beautiful and distinct colors. Gloxinias were also an attractive feature, Axel Lindroth getting the coveted first place.

SEED TRADE

Charles Massie of Northrup King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn., was elected president of the American Seed Trade Association at its meeting in Cleveland, O., last week.

H. A. Bunyard was in Boston last week, arranging for the annual meeting and exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society to be held there July 12 and 13.

W. Atlee Burpee, Mrs. Burpee and two sons sail on the Minnetonka of the Atlantic Transport Line on July 5, for a short European trip. Howard M. Earl sailed for Denmark on the S. S. United States on July 3. Mr. Earl expects to be at his desk again about August 4.

Dutch and French Bulb Prospects.

Gt. Van Waveren & Kruijff, of Sassenheim, Holland, write that the crop of white Roman hyacinths is expected to be very bad, consequently prices are running up and orders for large quantities are not accepted.

As to Dutch hyacinths, the bulbs will be very small. The weather was very unfavorable, and made them die very early. The fields do not look in the same condition as they did the same time last year. Prices will be a trifle higher, especially on blue varieties.

Tulips. By the quantity of tulips that were planted last fall it was the general opinion of the Dutch bulb growers that prices this year would run low, but owing to the prospects of the crop at the present time being not at all favorable, it seems that the demand will surpass by far the quantity which will be offered on the market this coming fall.

Golden Spur and Double Van Sion narcissi will be higher in price, but all other varieties will be the same as last year.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The New London Horticultural Society held its annual Rose Show on the 24th inst, in its rooms. There was a good show of blooms including one large vase of Milady shown by A. N. Pierson of Cromwell, Ct. The attendance was good. Next meeting night is July 10th. H. LICKMAN.

The Cook County Florists' Association of Chicago held its regular monthly meeting, June 19th, at which there was a good attendance. The subject of a picnic was discussed and a motion to have one in July was carried, with John Zeck in charge of arrangements. After the business session the bowling prizes were awarded as stated in the last issue.

The schedule of prizes for the fourth exhibition of the American Gladiolus Society to be held in connection with the annual meeting of the society and the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists at Minneapolis, Aug. 19-22, has been issued and this, with full information regarding entries and rules, can be had on application to L. Merton Gage, secretary, So. Natick, Mass. Special prizes have been contributed by C. Betscher, B. Hammond Tracy, H. W. Koerner, Vaughan's Seed Store, E. E. Stewart, Peter Henderson & Co., W. Atlee Burpee, M. Crawford, A. H. Austin Co., H. F. Michell Co., Chamberlain & Gage, John Lewis Childs, Arthur Cowee and others.

The first exhibition of the Medford (Mass.) Horticultural Society was held on June 21 in the rooms of the old Magoun Mansion. There was an excellent display of cut flowers, five and six entries being in many of the classes. The quality of the outdoor roses and peonies were as fine as the writer has seen anywhere in New England, and the judges had a hard time in making decisions, competition being so keen. The principal prize winners were: Mrs. D. J. Puffer, Senator Wilton, B. Fay, Mrs. Lester Williams, Mrs. R. Linzee Hall and Mrs. Josiah E. Gates. The attendance was excellent, the rooms being crowded all the afternoon, and the committee in charge feel greatly encouraged for the future welfare of the Society. Mr. Casey of Melrose, Mr. Setson of Boston and Geo. F. Stewart of Medford acted as judges. The next show will be held in September, and intending exhibitors will please communicate with Mrs. D. J. Puffer, chairman of the Exhibition Committee.

GEORGE F. STEWART.

Medford, Mass.

A CORRECTION.

In the report of the American Rose Society judges at Hartford in our issue of last week a misplaced line caused the omission of mention of the rose Dr. Van Fleet, disseminated in 1910 by Peter Henderson & Co. This rose scored 80 points and secured a certificate of merit.

New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers.

The Seventh Annual Outing of this Association was held on June 24th and 25th, at the Hotel Kittatinny, Delaware Water Gap, Pa. A party of fifty-five boarded the special cars on the Lackawanna Limited, leaving Hoboken at 10.15 A. M., and arriving at the Gap at 12.05. After a hearty lunch the afternoon was spent in roaming through the woods and through the various promontories, from which beautiful views were had, and visiting the various lakes and waterfalls. In the evening the prize bowling took place on four very good alleys. The ladies bowled four frames and the four highest scores were as follows: Mrs. Baumann, 58, prize $5; Mrs. Schoelzel, 56, prize $3; Mrs. Schultheis, 48; Mrs. P. Wagner, 42.

The men scored as follows: Anton Schultheis, Jr., 150, prize $5; Anton Schultheis, Sr., 144, prize $3; William Schultheis, 127; William H. Siebrecht, Jr., 124. A dance took place immediately after the bowling and continued until after 1 A. M.

The following morning after breakfast, the party enjoyed a boat ride on the Delaware River through the Gap, and in the afternoon boarded special trolley cars for a trip in the one direction to Stroudsburg and in the other direction to Portland. The party left the Gap at 5.23, arriving in New York shortly after 7, all voting that the outing had been a thorough success, all having apparently enjoyed a very good time.

New York Florists' Club.

The New York Florists' Club happened to select the hottest day of the season for their annual outing, Tuesday July 1. It was broiling in the city and, although it was warm enough everywhere, yet the harbor breezes and the shade of Witzel's Point grove were a most welcome comfort on such a day and it was a record crowd that took advantage of the opportunity to enjoy them.

The coming of the Glorious Fourth on our regular mailing day compels us to get this issue out one day earlier than usual, consequently we are unable to give results of the games or other details of the outing but these will be fully recorded in our next issue.

The annual picnic of the Lancaster (Pa.) Florists' Club will be held at Hershey, Pa., July 15. The club will be the guests of Milton S. Hershey.

ROSE MME. CECIL BRUNNER.

The advertisement of that dainty little rose, Mme. Cecil Brunner, reminds of the time last spring when Mr. McLellan had a box of sprays of this variety sent to New York under the name of Mignon. The flowers came by express all the way from California in wonderful perfection and received unbounded admiration. The success of Irish Fire Flame last season is another convincing evidence of the popular leaning towards these dainty rose buds and the demand that is sure to develop as soon as the growers are in a position to supply them in quantity. They are mighty good stock to invest in.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

J. W. Grandy of Norfolk, Va., was in town last week.

Miss Rosie Diedrich, daughter of the late Bernhardt Diedrich, and Harry Helms, of Roanoke, Va., were married on Saturday last in Anacostia, D. C.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Company's branch in this city will remain closed all day on Sundays until the fall and the weekday closing hour will be five o'clock hereafter.

Fred H. Kramer has offered to donate a large flower bed and the necessary plants and labor to the town flower garden committee of the Anacostia Citizens' Association which is trying to beautify that section of the district.

Mrs. Mary McCabe, wife of M. J. McCabe, of Anacostia, D. C., and their son John, were thrown from a buggy on Sunday last when their horse ran away on Good Hope road. Neither were seriously hurt. The horse was caught only after the buggy had been demolished.

Charles Scarborough has left the employ of Gude Bros. Company for the [illegible] to his father's farm in New Jersey. Both his parents and his two sisters were last month more or less injured as a result of a collision between their carriage and one of the automobile fire trucks of Camden, N. J.

Z. D. Blackistone, William Marche and O. A. C. Oehmler, a committee of the Florists' Club of Washington have drawn up a resolution recommending the closing of all flower establishments at one o'clock on Sundays during the summer months. It is reported that a number of the florists will agree to such closing although at present it hardly looks as though all would [illegible] the movement.

CHICAGO NOTES.

Quite a number of florists are planing to go to Minneapolis in their automobiles.

D. E. Freres is recovering from what promised to be a severe case of blood poisoning in his hand, caused by a rose thorn.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Washburn left Sunday for their western trip, which includes a month with E. C. Washburn and family at Pasadena.

A. Cronis of Johnson & Cronis planned another trip to Greece this summer, but now says he will defer his visit till fighting there has ceased.

On vacations—Robt. Northam, store manager for George Reinberg; Al. Lehman of E. C. Amling Co.; Geo. Heidenrich of Bassett & Washburn; Jack Byers of Chicago Carnation Co.

Today, June 30th, the last of the stock and fixtures of the old firm of E. H. Hunt were moved from the old quarters at 131 N. Wabash Ave., where for so many years business has been carried on. All that remains now is a division of the proceeds between the creditors.

Al. Fischer has been fortunate enough to win another prize, this time a bride. Al. Fischer and Lillian M. Ellis were married June 25th, and have the best wishes of their friends. The bridegroom is one of the best known of the younger florists and his name for several years has headed the list of prize winners at the bowling contests. This year he won the Cook Co. Florists Association loving cup and several other large prizes.

A jury in Judge Pomeroy's court of the Circuit Court of Cook County at Chicago, has rendered a verdict in favor of The Foley Manufacturing Co., against the City of Chicago for $22,500. This suit was brought to recover damages caused by the C. B. & Q. R. R. in the elevation of its tracks, pursuant to the carrying out of the provisions of a city ordinance passed by the city council, compelling all the railroads to elevate their tracks, which deprived the plaintiff of the use of its switch track, which had permitted the placing at one time for loading or unloading as many as ten carloads and compelling plaintiff to load and unload its cars elsewhere at great loss and inconvenience, etc.

Visitors: Fred Hoekstra of Freyling & Mendel's, Grand Rapids, Mich.; C. B. Knickman of McHutchison's, N. Y.; W. W. Coles, Kokoma, Ind., Chas. Steidle, Olivette, Mo.

ABOUT AFFILIATION.

Apropos the most interesting talk of Messrs. Farenwald and Kasting before the New York Florists' Club it might well be stated that The Florists' Telegraph Delivery will be very much interested in seeing a modification of the dues for the S. A. F. in relation to the various other organizations. It is an essential requirement of The Florists' Telegraph Delivery that each member of that organization be represented in the S. A. F. There are about one hundred and fifteen members of The Florists' Telegraph Delivery now represented in the S. A. F. A reduction of rates for the parent body, say $3.00 for the first fee and $1.50 or $2.00 per year thereafter, would be the welcome solving of a problem. There are hundreds of retailers in the country who would doubtless be willing to join The Telegraph Delivery if it were possible to aid them in that way. No doubt, this will hold true with the Carnation, Rose and other societies and increase the membership much above the fifteen hundred now identified with the S. A. F. The interested members of The Florists' Telegraph Delivery might do well to bear this topic in mind so as to gauge the matter properly at the coming meeting in Minneapolis.

IRWIN BERTERMANN, Pres.,
Florists' Telegraph Delivery.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES.

Arthur Zirkman has just returned from a successful southern trip in the interests of M. Rice Co.

Samuel S. Pennock moved with his family, on June 28th, to Beach Haven, N. J., for the summer months.

Michell's and Dreer's (and probably the other seed houses) will close Thursday night to Monday morning—giving their employees three full holidays for the Fourth. The wholesale flower trade will be open Saturday as their trade is such that a three-days' close down would be rather disastrous.

Visitors: E. Howard Smith and wife, Hazelton, Pa.; George Morrison, Baltimore, Md.; W. C. Langbridge, representing J. B. Rice Co., Cambridge, N. Y.; John Savage, Gwynedd, Pa.; Henry Tischinger, Baltimore, Md.

SUMMER MEETING OF THE MINNESOTA HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

It is a very difficult matter to have a successful meeting in many of our western states. Not so in Minnesota. Under the efficient leadership of Secretary Latham there is always a large and enthusiastic attendance. The society serves splendid coffee, and the people bring their dinner and have a good time. The attendance was large. There was a very fine showing of peonies, irises and other perennials. Flowers bloom in exquisite beauty in the cooler moister atmosphere of this state than further south. There was a splendid showing of strawberries, some of them as large as crab apples.

We were saddened this year by the death of the last charter member of this great society of 3000 members—Lyman Eliot,—who for 45 years was foremost in the work of horticulture. He was a kind, faithful man, very lovable in his nature. No man has done more for the advance of horticulture in the Northwest. At the age of 79 he fell dead on the 19th of this month among his flowers. He died in the harness. He was a noble Christian man.

C. S. HARRISON.

Secretary Beneke of the St. Louis Florist Club reports that the kind invitation of Fred Ammann to meet at Edwardsville in July, has been accepted and that the nomination of officers wil take place here July 10th.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON The flower business of this section is down to lowest ebb—probably the dullest week of the year. All occasions calling for the use of flowers are at an end for the season. The growers are still sending in quite freely, however, and the markets are burdened with a surplus for which there is no use and sales are only made at prices that the street fakir is disposed to pay. In fact, it is not a question of prices with the wholesalers—it is only a question of making sales at all. Roses, lilies, carnations and sweet peas are all very plentiful. Summer conditions have come in more abruptly than usual. We hope the resumption of activity will be equally abrupt.

BUFFALO Conditions are much improved since last report and as the ending of June always brings on a little extra business, it was noticed the past week. There were rose festivals, weddings, school commencement work and other social entertainments, and all helped to consume a quantity of flowers. There was no shortage of roses, except possibly good Beauties, though the grand new Milady has taken its place as a leader among hot weather red roses and the demand was good with about enough to supply the demand. Good carnations sold well and there is still some good stock received. Plenty of lily of the valley, orchids, sweet peas, and also some excellent peonies. At the time of mailing report, candidum lilies are in heavy supply. The indoor lily glut has about passed. Prices are back to normal.

CHICAGO Summer heat and summer quiet prevails and Chicago wholesalers have their ice boxes full of stock of all kinds. It seems to many as if it were a fortunate matter that the May frost limited the quantity of peonies or there would have been a repetition of last year's experience with that flower. American Beauties are feeling the quiet more than at any previous week this year and the flower which has been all too shy the greater portion of the year is now piling up waiting for customers. Carnations are standing the extreme temperature better than could really be expected. Sweet peas are comparatively scarce. Roses are away ahead of the demand and quantity is fair. Of other things there is plenty of variety.

CINCINNATI The market is rapidly approaching its usual July condition. The rose and carnation cuts are both decreasing. Summer flowers are coming more into prominence each day. This is especially true of gladioli, many very fine spikes of which are being received. The lily supply is on the increase and includes many fine Giganteums and Rubrums. Many pond lilies are coming. The sweet pea season is just about over. Shipping them either in or out of town utterly impossible owing to the excessive heat.

ROCHESTER The state of the flower market this week is somewhat better than reported in last week's issue. Sweet peas in all shades with the exception of lavender, have been quite scarce, and this year there has been a decided call for these flowers for graduation bouquets. The heat of the past week has caused an influx of roses in a full open condition, with the result that there has been a drop in quality and prices. There are some good American Beauty roses. Carnations are fast going out of crop; they are very soft and quality poor. Easter lilies are very scarce and the same with callas. Lily of the valley is very choice and plenty of it. Rambler roses are in blossom, and also some good gladioli which are disposed of quite readily.

NEW YORK Last week's story of the market situation will fit for the present very nicely. The low tide limit has been reached and it is impossible to go lower. Growers have thrown out their old stock quite generally within the past few days and there is this one satisfaction to the wholesale dealers that they are not encumbered any longer with a lot of material for which no market exists. From now on the receipts will be very small for a time and the buyer will have to take what he can get and be thankful. It is to be expected that prices will now swing back to a normal range. What little stock is being sent in shows the enervating effect of the hot weather.

PHILADELPHIA Conditions in this market were about as good as could be expected for this season of the year, there having been a pretty good clean-up last week and no slashing of prices as was the case for several weeks previous. The receipts of roses were considerably less. The business in these was less also but not so much so as the receipts. The best American Beauties are now coming in from Eastern points and bring from 25 to 30 per cent. more than the locals. Maryland is, as usual, in the lead as the best summer rose in pinks. Richmond very much on the wane. Kaiserin and White Killarney are good and slightly higher in price, as the receipts have not kept pace with the demand. Mrs. Taft is holding the pace better than ever as a popular summer rose. There are still some Rambler sprays around, although they are all past locally. Carnations seem to have improved during the past ten days, both in quantity and quality, and compared with other years at this time are really quite creditable. Early asters are arriving; not very good so far, but that is liable to change any day now. Orchids sluggish, moderate in supply and quality good. Gardenias few and poor. Outdoor gladioli are now commencing; excellent quality, long stemmed, large flowering and nice, clear colors.

ST. LOUIS The less said about the market the better, stock of all kind is coming in poor and extra fancy grades are hard to obtain at present. The extremely hot weather with out any rain for some time has brought about these conditions. For the next two months summer dullness will prevail. A big cut of gladiolus from now on is promised. Asters are poor and sweet peas about done unless we get some good rains in the near future. Stock under glass will from now on be scarce. Prices are in keeping with the quality of the stock.

WASHINGTON Business has dropped off considerably and the supply of cut flowers has shortened up. The roses and carnations that are to be had are as a whole poor in quality. Cattleyas are plentiful and cheap. A moderate quantity of lilies are to be had and these are of good quality. Lily of the valley is quite scarce. Bronze galax leaves are not being received in sufficient quantities and the price has been advanced to $2 per thousand. The gladioli shown in some of the stores are A1.

"PEONIES FOR PLEASURE."

This book of "Peonies for Pleasure" gives information on peony history, soil and plants to use, how and when to plant, fertilizers and how to apply, and describes the most extensive planting of really valuable peonies ever gathered together under the sun; describes the old and new, as well as the plebeian and aristocrat of the peony family. If you want information on the plant that stands next to the rose in beauty, that is practically known to the amateur as simply a red, white and pink peony, then send for "Peonies for Pleasure."

We also issue a special wholesale price list of peonies for fall sales, 1913. Send for both of the booklets.

Our catalogue of everything you need mailed on application. Write for it today.

A NEW VOLUME

Vol. XVIII of HORTICULTURE begins with this issue. Now is the time to subscribe. If you are not already on our subscription list, send $1.00 for the coming year, or 50 cents to January 1, 1914.

BE CAREFUL. Horticulture offers no premiums for subscription and has no traveling exploiters. Any who so represent themselves are bunco men.

We do not need to dilate on HORTICULTURE'S worth. Its contents are sufficient evidence. The recognition it is constantly receiving in new subscribers shows the strong hold it has gained in the esteem and good will of the horticultural profession.

BRITISH HORTICULTURE.

A New Government Departure.

For many years widespread dissatisfaction has been felt amongst those associated with commercial horticulture that so little has been done by the state to further an important industry, compared with what is done by colonial governments. The fruit growers, nurserymen and market gardeners have been heavily assessed for rates and taxes, but they have received no compensating advantages from government aid. The recent establishment of a department of the Board of Agriculture to deal solely with horticultural matters has been welcomed by many leading specialists in this particular branch. Another encouraging step in the right direction is the appointment of a Parliamentary Committee by the Royal Horticultural Society. The committee will be able to represent the interests of the commercial section in any matters which are brought to the notice of the horticultural department of the Board of Agriculture. Several of the most influential men in the trade are assisting and there is every indication that the new department will prove of great advantage in focussing the requirements of the numerous commercial growers of Great Britain.

Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society.

The members of this flourishing society had their second annual dinner in London recently, under the presidency of Mr. J. S. Brunton, of the Horticultural Trade Journal. In responding to the chief toast, the chairman gave an encouraging account of the society, which numbers nearly 500 members. In proposing "The Visitors," Mr. W. Wells gave some interesting impressions of the International Show in New York and gratefully acknowledged the extreme kindness and hospitality received on all sides from his American confreres. The toast was appropriately acknowledged by Mons. Delanay, of Paris, and the Rev. J. Bernard Hall, secretary of the North of England Horticultural Society.

Show of Rhododendrons.

A brilliant show of rhododendrons was made by Messrs. J. Waterer & Sons, at the Royal Horticultural Society's Hall, in London, at the end of May. There was also an interesting display of plans and photographs of some important landscape work which the firm has carried out in Britain and in America. Messrs. Waterer have attained a foremost position in this particular branch of horticultural work. W. H. ADSETT.

We understand that there has been a change made in the management of Hitchings & Co.'s Philadelphia office. Herbert S. Gott, who has been part of the sales force at the New York office for some time, goes to Philadelphia to take charge of the office there on July 1.

OBITUARY.

Frank Wiegand.

Frank Wiegand, son of F. S. Wiegand, proprietor of the Chippewa Falls Greenhouses, Chippewa Falls, Wis., was drowned June 23d in Dead Lake, while attempting to rescue a companion. He was 21 years of age and a graduate of St. Charles School.

Jacob Freduchson.

Died Thursday, June 19, Jacob Freduchson, a native of Denmark, for some time employed in the landscape department of the Panama International Exposition, San Francisco. The cause of death was tuberculosis. Buried at the Cypress Lawn Cemetery, San Mateo, June 24. The deceased was a man of good breeding and a good fellow in every sense of the word. W. E. EGLINGTON.

Mrs. E. G. Uihlein.

Mrs. E. G. Uihlein, whose husband has contributed largely to the success of the Chicago flower shows by large exhibits of orchids, passed away June 27th. The funeral took place from the residence 2021 Ewing Pl., June 30th. Mr. and Mrs. Uihlein's summer house on Lake Geneva is one of its finest on the lake, the grounds comprising a park of great beauty. Their conservatories at Ewing Place are extensive and contain one of the most valuable collections of orchids in this country.

We have several more testimonials recently received from gardeners as to the efficacy of Pino-Lyptol in eradicating weeds from tennis courts, driveways and such places. It does seem to fill the bill as a labor-saving preparation.

The Fir Sawfly (Lophyrus abietis) has been inflicting considerable damage this year about Boston, the Colorado blue spruce being apparently a favored object of attack. The grub eats out the young growths at the tips of the branches in June.

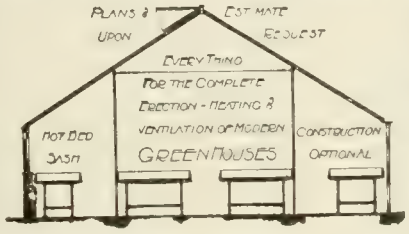
WHAT THE USERS SAY

Cast Iron Boilers Break Down



Have fired greenhouse boilers since 1885, both steam and hot water. Yours suits me the best. I have two of your boilers. At one time I had two cast iron boilers working together, and during a blizzard the rear section of one boiler gave out and the front section of the other sprung a crack a couple of months later. No more cast iron boilers for me. I came very close to freezing out in both instances.

Started Eight Years Ago with the Single House Below. Last Year We Completed the Balance Scheme.

The Wimpfheimer Group at Long Branch, N. J.

IT was along in 1904 that we built for Mr. Wimpfheimer the single wing house at the left. As a separate house it was complete in itself, and decidedly attractive.

In suggesting the location for it, we considered the possibility of additions, and at that time worked the plan out, much as you now see it completed.

To which you remark: "Why, that's a thing any good builder would do," which is only another way of saying there are precious few good builders.

Time and time again we are called upon to make additions to our competitors' houses, that, do our best, must result in a botch job. A botch, just because no careful planning ahead had been done.

Oftimes we have to install an entire new boiler, or rip out much expensive piping, both of which could have been avoided if planned right.

If you want a firm to do your work, who not only plans best for the present, but the future as well—you want Lord & Burnham.

Put your want in a letter and mail it to us.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Care of Violets

Of the leaders in cut flower stock, grown extensively for winter production, none probably requires a greater amount of watchful attention and judicious care during our hot and dry summer months than do the violets. The slightest neglect, the least delay or oversight, very often costs the grower dearly. Keep the plants well watered and clean. They should grow without a check and this necessitates faithful watching. Remove every runner. Keep the plants free from diseased or yellow leaves. Watch out for greenfly or other insects; don't wait until they pay a visit, but use fumigation and a weak solution of nicotine regularly to keep them away. A very important matter at this time of the year is to keep the surface of the benches loose by continual scratching. Do not wait for weeds to come, but go over the benches twice a week if possible.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and Cincinnati

From now on until fall this begonia will reveal a degree of vigor and rapidity of growth surprising and hardly looked for in the erstwhile fragile striplings. And this should keep the grower on the alert and fill him with anxiety to do his share in the making for a satisfactory finish. As heretofore, careful attention to watering, ventilation and shading is necessary, but sprinkling or syringing overhead and through the foliage, from now on, should be less heavy and frequent, a gentle spraying now and then, in the early morning hours preceding a hot day, being entirely sufficient. A repotting of the fast-advancing plants will be a part of the treatment, admitting of no delay. Better specimen begonias are raised by timely, short shifts, gradually working up to the final size than by long shifts, skipping several sizes at every transplanting. For the last shift a quantity of old, friable manure, easily broken up and pulverized to form about one-fourth of the entire bulk, should be added to the usual mixture of leaf mold, loam and sand. Be sure to give them ample drainage.

Rambler Roses

Crimson Rambler and other Ramblers want watchful care just now. That is, those grown in pots under glass during summer. We often get our hottest weather at the middle of July, and if the tender and unripened shoots of these roses suffer for water mildew will set in, which much weakens the growth and the strength of the eyes which will now be forming. From these eyes come the trusses of bloom that you are looking forward to next spring. Copious watering and daily heavy syringings must be given the Rambler roses. By the end of August they will have made all the growth desirable and can then be stood outdoors to ripen their wood. We then have canes and eyes that are bound to give a truss of bloom at every eye. By plunging the pots in a bench where there is some soil they will retain the moisture better.

Ferns from Spores

Every florist who grows ferns will not do wrong to make a good sowing now of any varieties that he may need. With care and attention it is remarkable how you can work up a fine lot of stock in this way. Pans well drained with lots of crock, on which some moss is spread, filled with a compost of fibrous loam, peat, and leaf mold in equal parts, with enough of sand to insure an open condition are the first requisite. The pans can be filled to within an inch of the top and firmly pressed all over. For the top layer use fine sifted compost, press even and give a good watering. The spores should be scattered evenly all over the surface. All that is needed then is to press the surface over and cover with a pane of glass. Place in a well-shaded house where they can have a genial moist atmosphere. Give common sense attention in keeping them in moist state.

Mignonette

There are several ways in which to start a good plantation of mignonette for next winter's cutting. I have found, after trying several methods, that to sow the seeds where the plants are wanted is still the best course. It is best for the plants and saves a deal of labor also. It is just as easy, with a little forethought and prudent management to have the benches in readiness now as at any time later on. If mignonette is to be grown on benches now taken up by chrysanthemums, it is best to start the seeds a month from now in 3 or 4-inch pots and to transplant into the benches when these are cleared off. A heavy but somewhat gritty loam generally enriched with old manure is a good soil for mignonette. Mark out spaces a foot each way. Let them be an inch or two deeper than the sourrounding level of the soil and thinly scatter six or eight seeds in each depression. Give a good firming and cover with 4-inch pots, these to be removed when the plants are peeping through the soil.

Propagating Ivies

Now is the time to think about the ivies that you may need for baskets, vases and veranda boxes. Any stock now in 3 or 4-inch pots can be planted out in a piece of rich ground where they will make fine growth by the middle of September, when they can be lifted and potted and placed in a frame where they will do fine for six weeks. These can be increased during the winter into stock of 2, 3 or 4-inch pots which make good material for spring sales. This will include vincas and English ivy.

Mr Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Bougainvilleas; Calanthes; Chrysanthemums; Cocos Weddelliana; Planting Carnations; Planning for Next Winter

A midsummer reverie

The usual midsummer dullness has settled on the trade and while there may be a slight activity in a few lines, seed business, nursery business and florist business are all in a state of "innocuous desuetude." The principals as well as the employees are away or preparing for their annual vacations. It is surprising what changes can be wrought in a few days away in the mountains where one gets "near to nature's heart." The feverish, hustling and planning gives way to a restful peace, a contented half-drowsy state of feeling which one never knows at seaside resorts excepting in very secluded and carefully chosen spots. Popular seaside resorts do not give rest. They undoubtedly bring change, and if change be what is wanted, with a continuance of excitement and activities, then these resorts are medicine. But in the mountains, amid the woods and lakes, one can hold communion with himself and take off the mask which we nearly all wear before the world, and if he will, can see himself just as he is, and if he has strength of character, can mark each blemish and fault, and resolve to square his life on the lines of a true man when he returns to the activities of the great bustling world.

Quarantine issue misunderstood

Judging from articles which have appeared in the daily newspapers and from comment in certain trade journals there appears to be much misconception regarding the purpose and scope of the gypsy moth and brown-tail moth quarantine notice recently issued by the Federal Horticultural Board. There would seem to be a desire on the part of some to convey the impression that a new and more stringent condition of quarantine against New England nursery and forest products had been imposed but this is not true. The law has not been changed in any material respect from that hitherto in force except that there has been a little extension of the territory quarantined owing to the discovery of the insects in localities outside of the boundaries originally established. So there is no cause for alarm on the part of those directly affected or for joy on the part of those who might think they see in this embargo on certain New England shipments a further business advantage for themselves over the New England dealers.

Where New England benefits

While it cannot be denied that the restrictive laws and regulations referred to in the foregoing seriously affect and hamper the interstate trade of the nurserymen, florists and others doing business within the quarantined territory, there is still another side to the question which should distinctly favor the New England nurserymen. It should be borne in mind that there are other pests than brown-tails and gipsies, among these the elm leaf beetle and San Jose scale, both scourges as bad as, if not worse, than the two notorious moths and for which New England is indebted to her neighboring States. The obligation imposed upon New England by the moth agitation has resulted in a tremendous public and private sentiment against insect pests in general. It is estimated that, in Eastern Massachusetts alone no less than 2,000,000 pounds of poison has been used in spraying during the past two months. The nurserymen have been among the most strenuous workers to get their plantations, as well as adjoining property "clean." Not only gipsy and brown tail but every other vermin have had to take their dose until, today, we believe it to be a fact that the Massachusetts nurseries are the cleanest on this continent, and the sooner the rest of the country gets this fact fixed in their mind the better it will be for their orchards and gardens when they come to buy stock. As to the embargo on forest greens, etc., that is a blessing, if it halts the wanton denuding of our mountain laurels and other native growths. The local call for this material will be as much as our fields and woods can stand. If the rest of the country is forced to look elsewhere for their supply of these things we can endure it.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

George H. Penson

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Penson. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Grapes Shanking

This is a subject which has taken up space in every horticultural paper devoting a portion of its columns to the work and general management of growing fruit under glass. It could rightly be called a vexed problem of grape growing as the causes are many and very divergent in character, being buried in the constitution of the vine itself. In attempting to discuss it much that has already been said on the subject must of necessity be repeated, as the chief causes of grapes shanking are repeatedly coming to our notice. Sometimes the troubles are to be combated singly while on the other hand it may be a combination of circumstances that we are up against. It is a well-known fact that vines which are "up to their work" as we sometimes remark, are less liable to shank than others that are cropped heavily. Shanking is a disease which finds opportunity to develop by the non-resistance of the berries attacked, weak in constitution and unable to help themselves a little,—a theory that is borne out by the fact that any seedless berries that may have been left in a bunch are generally the first to go. The old adage is still good here, a preventive "cure" being the best, yet in spite of all the care occasionally we find a few shanked berries. Lucky, too, if we can always say "berries" as sometimes a shoulder may go and again a whole bunch will shank so much that it is practically worthless. A very common way for it to act is to affect a few berries through the whole rod. Possible causes are so many that I shall only deal with some of these more frequently met with, the first in prominence being over-cropping. This in itself is responsible for much trouble. A vine is a very willing servant and at the time of reducing the crop it often seems a shame to take away so much of nature's bounty, but in the best interests of the vine and crop, it has to be done. Take into consideration the size of the bunches also, as a large bunch at the time of thinning will be correspondingly large at the time of cutting. Years of over-cropping will so weaken a vine that nothing short of a rest will recuperate it, which must take place with roots and foliage in normal condition. Irregularities of these two vital organs will soon result in the subject under discussion. Make the border right at the start; have the roots under absolute control in well drained soil; water with judgment at all times, taking into consideration the state of the vine and stage of growth. A swelling crop will need a much greater supply of water than a vine will require when resting. Make the border of the best soil procurable with other ingredients to help the roots later on.

Weakened foliage, damaged by insect pests or otherwise, upsets the whole routine of daily functions causing the vine to exist rather than grow. The first thing the disabled "parent" will do under these conditions is to cast off some of the seed (otherwise fruit) it is carrying. Thorough chills or checks will result in the same thing. Some varieties will shank easier than others but it is an unwelcome announcement on any vine. Vines that are continually requested to hold their fruit for a considerable time after it is ripe have a strain on them which may shank a few berries. Needless to say all shanked berries should be removed before leaving the hands of the man who cuts it. Where a rod is shanking a few berries all through have them removed periodically.

Figs

Continue to give the figs a liberal treatment until the third crop has been "harvested." These may be small in comparison to the preceding crops but they will be very sweet and to any one liking this historical fruit a treat will be in store for some little time yet. Plenty of liquid manure will help them along but see that the border is in a right condition to take it. To water a border or tub with stimulant when it is dry is detrimental; first soak it with clear water. Keep after Thrips, Spider and Co. with a well directed force of water.

Syringe or Spray

These are two words we are continually meeting with as we read over any kind of growing details, each denoting that water, insecticide or fungicide is being applied to the subject under discussion. It so happens at times that we find either word used which to a beginner must sometimes be bewildering. To syringe, draws our attention to the instruments that suck in water and expel it by force of hand. These instruments or tools are used exclusively in some establishments in the Old World today and from these the word is copied when using the hose pipe with force with the object of dislodging any insect pests that may be located there. When referring to spraying it is just what the first part of the word denotes, a sprinkling of water, applied in the interest of the plants, not necessarily to the detriment of pests. To spray certain kinds of plants over three or four times daily may be beneficial but to syringe them that often would be to nearly drown them. We speak of the spray from the sea, a gentle mist with no force and so should we not make a correct distinction between the two words in the horticultural world, as we have need of both in their respective places. When spraying with insecticide or fungicide the object is to get a fine spray or mist over all the foliage and wood. After this has done its work follow it up with a syringing of clear water.

LILIUM MYRIOPHYLLUM.

We have had occasion heretofore to favorably mention this promising introduction from China. Our cover illustration, from a photograph taken this week at the nurseries of R. & J. Farquhar & Co., indicates in a small way how well our predictions of its value have been verified, but no word description or picture can do it justice. One must see it to fully appreciate its character.

With the exception of a few small plants in the foreground which are in their second year from seed, the plants shown in the picture are all from the collected bulbs, many bearing upwards of a dozen blooms. There are several plantations of two-year-old seedlings many of which have thrown a flower, and in the frames one-year seedlings to the number of probably a quarter million are seen. So it is only a question of a short time until there will be plenty of stock to supply the trade.

We believe that as soon as this glorious new lily has been distributed among the florist trade it will quickly take its place as one of the most valuable introductions of recent years either as a garden ornament or a florists' pot plant or cut flower subject. As compared with the universally grown longiflorum the flower opens wider and the golden glow at the base of the petals is very pleasing. The blooms are 6 inches or more across and the individual petals usually from 2 to 2½ inches broad and have a more satiny surface than any other lily we have ever seen, while the outside is strongly tinted red, which shining through gives a faint flush of pink to the whole flower. The anthers are bright orange and a most remarkable characteristic is that they do not shed the pollen on opening, thus relieving of the tedious work of picking off the anthers as has to be done with all other white lilies in order to prevent staining the petals with yellow.

Consider further that this lily is absolutely hardy, healthy and adapted to field culture right here at home, easily raised from seed and blooming in the second or third year. If E. H. Wilson never gave the world another plant he has certainly won out as a benefactor to the American garden and to the American florist with this one discovery.

SEEN AT ORLEANS, MASS.

Wilton Lockwood whose garden at Orleans, Mass. was described in a recent issue of this paper, is proud in the possession of a plant of the genuine Lady Alexander Duff peony, but is watching it with much solicitude in fear that the flower is tending to become more double which would detract from its striking beauty. We noticed particularly a row of the fastigiate English oak Fordii at Mr. Lockwood's place. This tree gives the same effect on the landscape as is obtained with the Lombardy poplar, but is vastly superior in every respect. He has several which appear to have been raised from seed and consequently vary somewhat in habit. The best are some of the original stock obtained from Ellwanger & Barry, absolutely uniform in height and every other particular. These were 6 feet tall when purchased five years ago and are now 25 feet tall—a most rapid growth for an oak, and very desirable for anyone wanting quick results.

A VISIT TO BEVERLY.

The Garden Committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society visited the beautiful estate of Mrs. R. D. Evans at Beverly, Mass., on Tuesday, July 8. The owner is abroad but the superintendent, James George, adequately represented her in courteous attention and hospitality. A feast had been set out, the table being spread in the big bay house and the visit thus started off most entertainingly for the visitors.

This estate is superbly located overlooking the broad Atlantic and adorned with noble elms and conifers. An objective point was the extensive Italian garden laid out and planted last year by Messrs. Farquhar of Boston on the place where stood the summer cottage occupied for several seasons by President Taft. The garden has all the features customary in such plantations. Marble statuary, fountains, vases, stately bay trees, and thickly-planted beds with formal edging, etc. Especially effective were the serried ranks of delphiniums and campanulas and here and there a cluster of Lilium myriophyllum added sparkle and spicy aroma to the densely massed herbaceous groups. Tall standard specimens of Frau Karl Druschki roses were placed at regular intervals and at the time of the visit were veritable bouquets of great white blooms.

So pleased was the committee with what they saw that they awarded a gold medal to Mrs. Evans in recognition of her encouragement of horticulture and siver medal to Mr. George for the ability and cultural skill displayed.

SPOT ON GARDENIA LEAVES.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

I would like to know if you could tell the person of this spot and what it is that is on the gardenia leaves. We have a large house of florida and Veitchii. This spot started on the Veitchii and went all through the house. We have some nice young stock coming on and I see the spot is started on them. I will be very pleased to see your report in Saturday's Horticulture. D. C.

Newport, R. I.

I have examined the leaves sent in by Mr. C. and find them to be more or less seriously affected with a fungus known as Sphaerella Gardeniae Ell. This appears to be a parasite and is known to affect this plant in its native habitat, but we have never noticed any trouble in the north. While it is believed to be parasitic, we are by no means certain that the infection might not have been caused by some abnormality in the conditions surrounding the plants.

Practically all greenhouse diseases can be controlled by careful handling of the heat, light and moisture, especially the last, for if the spores of the fungus are present, and water is allowed to remain on the plants over night they will have a good chance to germinate and infect the leaves. Syringing on bright sunshiny mornings, when the plants will dry off quickly, does not give the spores a chance to germinate.

I should not advise spraying of any kind for this trouble.

Some Floral Novelties.

At a recent meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society, awards of merit were given to several interesting new and rare plants. Some details of these exhibits are appended. Papaver Perry's Unique is of miniature growth, of a striking crimson-scarlet, the black blotched petals being lacerated to nearly one half their depth. Paeonia arborea L'Esperance is an excellent semi-double, of a soft yellow tint, with a crimson base, and should prove a useful acquisition to this attractive section. Primula × Excelsior (P. cockburniana × P. Unique); this has handsome blooms of brilliant crimson scarlet, and is likely to receive widespread appreciation. Potentilla Boule de Feu has been produced as the result of a cross between P. argyrophyilla and P. atrosanguinea. The flowers are crimson-scarlet, with silvery foliage. Iris gracilipes has graceful blooms of pale mauve, with an orange blotch, and a pleasing foliage. Delphinium Mrs. F. Brewster has bold flowers of a clear lilac mauve hue. The exhibitors of the foregoing were: A. Perry, Enfield; Kelway & Sons, Langport; Veitch & Sons, Chelsea; H. Hemsley, Crawley, Sussex; the Wargrave Plant warm, Twyford; and R. C. Notcutt, Woodbridge.

A Secretary Honored.

The Rev. W. Wilks, the secretary of the Royal Horticultural Society, has been presented with a testimonial amounting to nearly £700 (pounds) by the Fellows in recognition of his 25 years' valuable service. Mr. Wilks' name will always be perpetuated by his raising of the Shirley poppy named after the Surrey villiage where he has resided for so many years. The raising of this popular bloom has been described as follows by Mr. Wilks: "In 1880 I noticed in a waste corner of my garden abutting on the fields where grew a patch of the common wild poppy, one solitary flower having a very narrow white edging to the four petals. This one flower I market and saved the seed of it alone. Next year out of perhaps 200 plants I had three or four with all the flowers white edged. The best of these were marked and the seed saved, and so on for several years, the flowers all the time getting a larger infusion of white, until they arrived at quite a pale pink, and one plant absolutely white in the petals. I then set myself to change the black central portions of the flower, and succeeded at last in obtaining a strain with petals varying from brightest scarlet to pure white, and with all varieties of flakes and edged flowers, and with golden centres. It would be encouraging to others working on similar lines, but with different subjects, to reflect that the gardens of the whole world are to-day furnished with poppies which are the direct descendants of one single capsule of seed saved in the little vicarage garden of Shirley so late as August, 1880."

Collection of herbaceous plants—Mrs. F. A. Constable, Mamaroneck, N. Y., gard. Jas. Stuart, 1st; G. D. Barron, Rye, N. Y., gard. James Linane, 2nd.

Collection of shrubs and trees—T. A. Havemeyer, Glen Head, N. Y., gard. A. Labodny, 1st; G. D. Barron, 2nd.

Six vases Japanese irises, six varieties—Miss M. T. Cockcroft, 1st.

Three vases sweet peas, three varieties, 25 of each—John I. Downey, 1st; Miss M. T. Cockcroft, 2nd.

Twelve different vegetables—Miss B. Potter, 1st.

Six different vegetables—T. A. Havemeyer, 1st.

Special prizes—Miss M. T. Cockcroft, for a vase of gardenias; Max Schling, for a basket of flowers, diploma.

Some time ago an announcement was made of three special prizes for vegetables for the exhibition next November. One of these was offered by M. C. Ebel. It was suggested to Mr. Ebel that in view of the two other vegetable prizes he should transfer his prize to something else. He has consented to do this, and will offer the same amount divided as follows: for a collection of hot-house fruit, $35.00; for two bunches of hot-house grapes, one black and one white, $15.00. The Horticultural Society will offer a second prize of $20.00 for the collection of fruit and a second prize of $10.00 for the grapes.

Remember the date of the next show is October 31st to November 4th, and it is hoped that the local societies will so arrange their dates as not to conflict with this, for the meeting of the National Association of Gardeners takes place at that time at the American Museum of Natural History, and all gardeners in this vicinity will certainly desire to attend.

BIG ST. LOUIS FLOWER SHOW.

Prof. H. C. Irish and his flower show committee held a meeting last week with the Coliseum management and prepared a preliminary list calling for $8000 in premiums and $2000 for prizes for down-town window decorations. The Henry Shaw premiums of $500 are extra. The show is to be held in the big arena of the Coliseum building in November. The Florist Club meets this week Thursday at Edwardsville, at which these plans will be reported to the committee. From this it appears that St. Louis will this year hold the biggest flower show it ever held.

ST. LOUIS COUNTY GROWERS' ASSOCIATION.

The St. Louis County Growers held a meeting on Wednesday night, July 2d, and the attendance was large. Secretary Beneke and Treasurer Smith of the Florist Club were present on invitation. There was a general talk on growing carnations and the different varieties to be used the coming season. There was also a big discussion of the assessments of the Hail Association, in which all were very much interested. Messrs. Beneke and Smith were called upon for a few words. At the conclusion of Mr. Smith's talk he presented the Association with a handsome gold-mounted gavel, which was a big surprise to the members. A discussion then came up relating to the coming fall flower show and all present agreed to contribute a good sum to be given in the name of the Association.

MINNEAPOLIS FLORIST CLUB.

The July meeting of The Minneapolis Florist Club was held Tuesday evening at Rice Brothers' store. The attendance was very large and showed the spirit the trade is taking here in their organization. Theo. Wirth, Chairman of the Convention Association made report of progress of Convention matters. All committees were making exceedingly good headway on their work and everything was practically at completion now.

John Rovik, chairman of the baseball committee for S. A. F. & O. H. reported suits prepared for his team bearing the inscription of the "Minneapolis Florist Club" and the boys were practicing every Thursday evening assuring the club that they would be in readiness for the great event and give the "All Star" team a real taste of baseball.

Letter was read by the Secretary from Wm. F. Gude, Chairman of the Wm. R. Smith Memorial committee and a subscription was voted and immediately forwarded to Mr. Gude.

William Desmond, President of the Club left on a two weeks' vacation to International Falls, Minn., taking the train immediately after the meeting, and the members gave him a send-off for a good time.

MINNEAPOLIS PARKS, LAKES AND BOULEVARDS.

Both Minneapolis and St. Paul are famous tourist cities. Together they have many natural beauties; the chief claim of the Twin Cities lies in their lakes and parks. There are more than one hundred lakes within a radius of twenty-five miles of the Twin Cities.

The principal lakes in Minneapolis are connected and circled by a boulevard, approximately thirty-five miles in length. Every visitor to the city should arrange to spend the two hours required to make the circuit of this boulevard in an automobile. Starting from his hotel, he will be taken past Loring Park, a beautiful tract of thirty-six acres only a few blocks from the business center of the city, thence past the Parade, a playground of sixty-eight acres lying close to Loring Park. The parkway passes the National Guard Armory and Coliseum which faces the parade, and then winds through the Kenwood residence district to the Lake of the Isles. At the right may be seen Cedar Lake, one of the four large bodies of water in that part of the city. The boulevard follows the irregular shore line of Lake of the Isles to Lake Calhoun and takes its course along the east shore of that large body of water. At the right is the famous Calhoun Bath House and the "finest inland bathing beach in America." Sail boats, launches, row boats and canoes dot Lake Calhoun. Leaving Lake Calhoun the boulevard continues through the wooded Interlachen district, separating Lake Calhoun from Lake Harriet, it completely encircles the latter body of water which is one of the most beautiful lakes in the country. The Minneapolis Park Board maintains a band and concerts are given each evening at the pavilion. Leaving Lake Harriet the boulevard skirts the winding course of Minnehaha Creek, passes between Lake Nakomis and Rice Lake to Minnehaha Park. In that park are the Falls of Minnehaha, immortalized by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow in the poem, Hiawatha. Joining Minnehaha Park are the grounds of Fort Snelling, the historic armory region of the frontier days and the Minnesota Soldiers' Home which occupies a magnificent site across the Mississippi River from the Fort. Here the boulevard follows the gorge of the Mississippi River to the Campus of the University of Minnesota, which is one of the famous seats of learning of the continent and well worth a visit. Returning from the University one sees the flour mills of Minneapolis which have a daily capacity of eighty-four thousand barrels. They occupy sites on both sides of the Mississippi River at St. Anthony Falls, the "Cradle of Minneapolis."

Minneapolis Park System—Logan Park Playground

The park system of Minneapolis as it is today is, as before stated, rich in natural beauty, but to Theodore Wirth more than to any other agency is due the bringing out and linking together into a harmonious and accessible whole all the picturesque features of this richly endowed landscape of land and water, for the enjoyment and use of all the people for all time.

Minneapolis Park System—Bathing at Lake Calhoun

PUBLIC BUILDINGS OF THE TWIN CITIES.

When the florists of the United States come to Minneapolis for their National Convention, August 19th to 23rd, they will find in the "City of Lakes and Gardens" and its sister city, St. Paul, a large number of important public buildings. Chief among these, of course, is the magnificent State Capitol in St. Paul, completed a few years ago at a cost of $4,500,000. In Minneapolis the chief public properties are the State University, with its campus of 85 acres bordering on the Mississippi river, and the $3,500,000 City Hall and Court House building.

The State Capitol is built of white marble and has been compared with the Congressional Library at Washington in point of architectural and artistic beauty. Many travelers who have seen both structures do not hesitate to say the Minnesota building surpasses that at the national capital. The tourists will find in the state house paintings by La Farge, Howard Pyle, Kenyon Cox, Guernsey, Blashfield and others, all arranged to form a symmetrical whole under the personal supervision of Cass Gilbert.

The State Capitol is on the route of the two principal interurban street railway lines connecting Minneapolis and St. Paul. Both these lines lead past or through the campus of the State University. The grounds of the State University are beautiful. Many of the substantial buildings of the university possess rare artistic merit, and all are arranged with the view to providing an artistic whole when the new structures now under construction and contemplated are completed. The university is only 15 minutes' car ride from the center of Minneapolis.

The Court House and City Hall in Minneapolis was built of Minnesota granite. It is one of the most substantial structures in the West and covers a full block. Its tower, which appears in the sky line from almost every part of the city, is one of the distinct features of Minneapolis.

Another public property, to which both Minneapolis and St. Paul justly claim title, is the United States Army Post at Fort Snelling, midway between the two cities and about 40 minutes car ride from each. The reservation site is at the confluence of the Mississippi and Minnesota rivers. The place is one of the most beautiful along the whole course of the Father of Waters. It was from Fort Snelling that the Indian wars of the early days were directed, and the Round Tower erected in 1820 is one of the historic sights of the community. Across the river from the fort is the Minnesota State Home for Old Soldiers and their wives. This place is well worth a visit. It is within walking distance of Minnehaha Falls.

The grounds of the Minnesota State Fair, the largest state fair in America, are located at Hamline, midway between Minneapolis and St. Paul and on the route of the Como-Harriet interurban car line connecting the Twin Cities.

Other public buildings and properties in Minneapolis worth seeing include the National Guard Armory where the convention and novel outdoor exhibit of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists will take place, the City Workhouse which is self-sustaining through its brick plant and other industries, the million dollar filteration plant which provides Minneapolis with drinking water, 100% pure, and the central public library and several of its more important branches.

ROBINIAS AND SUMMER MAGNOLIAS.

Extract from Arnold Arboretum Bulletin No. 46

No other North American tree is so familiar to the people of so many different parts of the world as the False Acacia or Yellow Locust of the Appalachian Mountain forests, Robinia pseudacacia, and it is now naturalized in many regions far removed from its native home. No other exotic tree has been so generally planted in northern and central Europe since its introduction into the garden of the Paris Museum in 1636 by King's gardener Robin, whose labors it commemorates; and no other American tree has given rise to such a voluminous literature. The cheerful light green foliage and hanging clusters of fragrant white flowers are known to everyone who has ever looked at trees. The value of the timber which it produces, the rapidity of its growth, its power to adapt itself to different soils and to reproduce itself rapidly by seeds which germinate readily and by stump and root shoots, would make it a most valuable subject for forest and coppice planting in this country if it could be protected from insects, but the value of the Locust is practically destroyed in nearly all parts of the United States beyond the mountain forests which are its home by the borers which riddle the trunk and branches. Owing to the difficulty of keeping the Locust in a presentable condition here no serious effort has ever been made to bring together the interesting varieties or "sports" of this tree which have appeared from time to time in European gardens and are largely planted in European collections of trees. At least thirty of these varieties are now known; the one most often seen in Germany, especially in suburban gardens, is the so-called Parasol Acacia (var. umbraculifera). The short branches of this plant form a compact spherical head which is usually grafted on a tall steam of the common Robinis, as in this country a dwarf form of the Catalpa is made into a "standard" by grafting it on a tall stem of the tree form. The only abnormal form of the Robinia thoroughly established in the Arboretum is one of the most remarkable of them all; var. monophylla, in which the leaves are reduced to a single broad leaflet.

The two pink-flowered arborescent Robinias, R. viscosa and R. neo-mexicana, are also subject to attacks by the borer. R. viscosa, the Clammy Locust, is not yet in flower but its near relative, the Rocky Mountain species, R. neo-mexicana, is now covered with its short clusters of pale rose-colored flowers. More beautiful perhaps than either of these trees is a hybrid of the Rocky Mountain species with R. pseudacacia, R. Holdtii named for the Colorado nurseryman in whose establishment it appeared a few years ago. This tree is very hardy; it appears to suffer less than its parents from borers, it grows rapidly and plants only a few feet high cover themselves with pale pink flowers. This tree, which is not yet often seen in eastern collections, is an interesting and valuable addition to the rather short list of trees which flower here in early summer.

The latest of the American Magnolias are M. macrophylla and M. glauca. The former is a medium-sized tree with wide-spreading branches and is distinguished by the fact that of all trees which grow beyond the tropics it has the largest leaves and the largest flowers. The leaves of this remarkable tree are silvery white on the lower surface, from twenty to thirty inches long and from eight to nine inches wide, and the cup-shaped creamy white fragrant flowers are sometimes a foot in diameter. Although an inhabitant of the south, M. macrophylla is perfectly hardy in New England, but unless it is planted in sheltered positions the trees often become disfigured by the wind which tears the large delicate leaves. Less showy M. glauca is a more valuable plant for general cultivation. Often a large tree in the extreme south, at the north M. glauca is never more than a small tree, or more often a large shrub. The leaves are dark green and very lustrous on the upper surface and silvery white on the lower surface; the small, cup-shaped flowers are creamy white and delightfully fragrant, and they continue to open in succession from the middle of June until August. In all North America there is not a more delightful shrub to plant in the garden, or one that will give larger returns in beauty and fragrance; and yet it is difficult to find it in American nurseries, and it is unknown to most American planters of this generation. A hybrid, M. Thompsoniana, between M. glauca and M. tripetala, another American species, is a handsome plant with the general appearance of M. glauca but with larger leaves and larger, equally fragrant flowers. Unfortunately it is much less hardy than either of its parents.

MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN.

From the Garden Bulletin, May, 1913.

The building of the new conservatories has called for alterations in the lay-out of the grounds in the vicinity of the old as well as the new range. South of what was formerly the parterre, a large area has been changed from a formal into a natural garden and in a great measure serves to bring into harmony the various elements entering into the present garden plan.

The area to be devoted to the formal gardens, while not less than in former years, will be concentrated near the conservatories. It will consist of two parts, one in front and one in the rear of the new greenhouses. The former, now being installed, occupies almost the same ground as the old parterre, or sunken garden, and is intended primarily as a water garden for the growing of lilies and other aquatic plants. The long axis of this garden lies east and west and its outline is rectangular. The corners of the pool are indicated by four large American hollies that formerly stood around the old observatory to the south. Just outside the walks, surrounding the water garden, are four large gingko, or maidenhair trees, which were planted here this spring to increase the effectiveness of the formal design. At the ends of the pool a semi-circular walk connects, on the one hand, the main gate and on the other the steps to the new conservatories. On each side of the pool, walks lead down to the edge of the water garden and furnish vantage points for the closer inspection of the water lilies. The areas between the banks of the pool and the surrounding walks will be the only ones in the main garden this summer planted with formal designs of bedding plants.

Behind the main range and flanked by the two wings of the new conservatories will be located an elaborate formal garden, Italian in its general effect. Three exits from the new conservatories lead down into this garden, and since all are elevated the effect produced by any plantations here will be more striking than in the old parterre, where only moderate elevation was possible.

Charles Hains, a gardener working in a Brooklyn (N. Y.) cemetery, was struck by lightning and instantly killed during the storm of Saturday, July 5.

Mrs. John Newell.

Mrs. Newell, wife of John Newell, retail florist at 322 West 125th street, New York, died June 26th, after being run down by an automobile. She was 43 years old and is survived by her husband and son.

James Hutchison.

James Hutchison, a gardner of Pittsburgh, Pa., died last week, aged 84 years. He was born in New York, removing to Pittsburgh 74 years ago For over 40 years he was foreman of the grounds at Allegheny Park.

Edward Schumann.

Edward Schumann, senior member of the firm of Edward Schumann & Sons, Cincinnati, Ohio, died June 29th, aged 67 years. He had been in the florist business for over 25 years, his specialties being violets, pansies and sweet peas.

Mrs. M. H. Walsh.

Abbie Agnes Walsh, wife of M. H. Walsh of Woods Hole, Mass., died at her home in Woods Hole on Sunday, July 6, aged 65 years, 6 months. Mrs. Walsh had been a long time ill but seemed to have improved somewhat during the past winter and hopes were entertained for her recovery. As Abbie Agnes Norton, previous to her marriage to Mr. Walsh she had been a school teacher in Brighton, Mass. She was a refined and educated lady and a great help to Mr. Walsh in his rose work, at home and at the exhibitions in old Horticultural Hall, Boston, where the great fame of Walsh and Walsh's roses was first established and her industry and skill in gathering, selecting, labeling and arranging the superb displays, was no small factor in Mr. Walsh's rose show triumphs.

Mrs. F. W. Kelsey.

The playground movement of Orange, N. J., lost one of its best friends in the death of Mrs. Frederick W. Kelsey on Friday night, July 4, at her home in that city. Mrs. Kelsey's husband is well-known as one of the original members of the Essex County Park Commission. Mrs. Kelsey's death was due to arteriosclerosis, and she had been ill for a long time. For the past twenty-five years she had been a resident of Orange. Mrs. Kelsey worked with other women for the welfare of the Orange Memorial Hospital. She was the originator of the idea of forming the Hospital Auxiliary of Young Women and foremost in its founding. She was active in the Woman's Exchange and had been a member of the Woman's Club of Orange since 1886.

At the last business meeting of the club which was held on May 7, when Mrs. Kelsey was critically ill, she was elected an honorary member of the club, a distinction seldom conferred.

The action of the club was a recognition of the playground work which Mrs. Kelsey inaugurated in behalf of the club. She was the chairman of its playground committee.

Samuel Sibley.

Sam. Sibley, jovial, kindly, popular Sam, has passed away and we feel a keen sense of personal loss and, no doubt, there are many others to whom the news of his death will bring a shock of deep sorrow. Mr. Sibley died at his home in Baltimore, of apoplexy, on June 25. His age was 56 years. He leaves a widow and two married daughters. He was one of the best known and best liked seed selesmen. For many years he has represented the Leonard Seed Company of Chicago with loyalty and efficiency and it will be hard to fill his place.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

New Zealand Association of Nurserymen. Official Trade Register for 1913, and sixth annual report and balance sheet.

Massachusetts Horticultural Society; Transactions for the year 1900; Part 1. This publication contains the horticultural papers and lectures delivered at Horticultural Hall during the winter and spring of 1913, an account of the inaugural meeting, January 1, 1913, etc.

National Chrysanthemum Society (England). The Transactions for the year 1912 and the Schedule of Prizes, List of Members, etc., for 1913, have been published separately. The "Transactions" contain much that the chrysanthemum specialist will find instructive and valuable. The chapter on the new classification of chrysanthemums which the floral committee of this Society has inaugurated is especially interesting as calculated to effect a reform which will, it is hoped, give opportunity for greater variety in our chrysanthemum exhibitions.

Crop Conditions.

Crop conditions are much as they were at this time of our last report. Peas are rapidly approaching a state of maturity where something like a fairly good estimate of the crop may be possible. At this time little more of a definite character has developed than we gave a week or two ago. It may be said in a general way that prospects have not improved, and all hopes or fears of a bumper crop must be abandoned this year. Corn has made rapid growth during the past three weeks, and as a whole is looking well, but rain is now badly needed, and if the heat continues without rain, "firing" will probably become general in many sections. Most crops are in need of rain, and the intense heat has had a rather damaging affect on many, though the damage is not believed to be of a disastrous character yet.

San Francisco in 1915?

The suggestion to hold the seedsmen's convention in San Francisco in 1915 and the prospects of a World Congress of Seedsmen is engaging the thoughtful consideration of the leading members of the trade and it is believed a large majority of the association will vote in favor of the general proposition. There are certainly many weighty arguments in its favor and only two against it, though it must be confessed they are weighty—time and expense. In the event that the final decision is in the affirmative, it is likely that few besides actual members will go.

Proposed Uniform Exhibition Booths.

Members of the Canning Machinery and Supplies Association are being canvassed with a view to ascertaining the sentiment of the association toward the uniform or universal booth for their exhibits at the annual convention of the National Canners Association. Nearly all exhibitors at Conventions have now adopted the uniform booth. Much can be said in its favor and very little against it, hence the decision of the Canning Machinery and Supplies Association, composed of practical up-to-date men, is almost certain to be in the affirmative.

PRIZE FOR BULB-DIGGING MACHINE.

(Consul. Frank W. Mahin, Amsterdam, Netherlands.)

The General Society for Bulb Culture, with headquarters: at Haarlem, offers a prize of 1,000 florins ($402) for the best bulb-digging machine. Particulars may be had from the secretary, Spaarne 71, Haarlem, Netherlands. Much importance attaches to this matter, as the vast number of tulip, hyacinth, and other bulbs grown on thousands of acres between Haarlem and Leiden are scooped out of the ground with the hands—a slow and laborious process.

GRASSING A TERRACE.

It is a difficult and expensive thing to do in this land of rainless summers and generally low relative humidity throughout the year. The steeper the terrace, the more tedious and expensive the work becomes. If nothing but a blue grass sod will satisfy the owner of such a piece of ground the expense account will be materially reduced if coarse burlap be tightly stretched and pinned fast over the ground after the seed is sown and left remain. The seed will come through the openings and make a tight sod, the burlap decaying in due course of time, a help, rather than a detriment to the growth of the grass.—The Pacific Garden.

ST. LOUIS NOTES.

McClusky & Tucker have opened a floral store at 4585 Easton avenue. Both were formerly employed at other stores.

W. S. Wells, late of the Missouri Botanical Garden, and Charles Fullgraf have formed a partnership in the landscape business and will have a downtown office in the Chemical Bldg.

L. Haseman, entomologist and chief inspector for the state, with office at Columbia, Mo., says the new law which went into effect July first calls for every landscape gardener, seedsman, florist and department store, jobber to take out a dealer's certificate. He will supply any one with a copy of the law for the asking.

Everything is in readiness for the Florists' Picnic, which takes place Thursday, July 17, at Romona Park. The club trustees have the affair in charge and all in the trade are invited with their families without any charge. The club pays all expenses. Chairman Osseck says there will be this year special features for the ladies and children and beautiful prizes will be given to all winners. Pelletier's Band has been engaged so don't fail to come or you will surely miss a grand time.

SYSTEM.

A well-regulated and systemized store is something to be proud of at the present day. The running of the largest manufacturing plants in the world has only been attained and kept successful by the little magic word "System." Take this away and everything goes topsy-turvy; all ideas and plans go wrong; nothing is done, nothing accomplished. How can you run a successful flower store without system?

Harmony among the help is very essential, so they will work together in order to keep the system going. If there is discord the system is broken. It is rather hard at the beginning to establish a perfect system, but later on the results begin to show and things commence to look as they should without excitement, upset, noise and the numerous things that happen daily in a florist shop without system.

Suppose you have a store crew—no matter whether it be small or large—the system you establish must be recognized by all your help and the sooner they accustom themselves to it, the easier the work will be and the result is a smooth running establishment where the daily routine is carried out like the running of a fine piece of machinery.

For instance, to start this so-called system, put each employee in his or her proper place and hold them responsible for their share of the work accepting no excuses except sickness or accident. The porter must be held for cleanliness of the inside and outside appearance of the store, the shipper can be held for the delivery, and not for what the porter neglected to do. The window decorator is held responsible for the appearance of his windows; do not blame him if his order was not delivered on time. The one arranging the ice chests must be held for its appearance, and not for anybody else's mistake. Those selected to fill the orders while the routine of morning work is going on, must be responsible for their share of the work also.

Now that each has been assigned to a station in their respective capacities and know what is expected of them each day, there is no blame going to the wrong party, as the system has overcome this. Keep to the system and your help will always respect you for it.

CHICAGO NOTES.

Roswell Schupp, who had the misfortune to break his arm just above the wrist, is doing nicely, but will not use the arm for some time.

A severe wind storm from Wisconsin which just touched Chicago a week ago broke 1000 lights of glass for O. Sylvester at Oconomowoc, Wis.

The first shipments of freesia bulbs from California came this week and found the spring bulbs scarcely out of the way. The fall season now promises to be a good one in the bulb business.

Leonard Larson has returned to his former place at Rockford, Ill., after a year in the fruit growing district of Washington, where he had an apple orchard at Ashland. He reports prices there too low for profit.

At the annual election of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, July 7, all the old officers were re-elected. The only change in directors was the election of D. Scheiden of Rogers Park to take the place of Aug. Jurgens.

The Elevated stations are now following the good example of the stores and office buildings and now those hitherto cheerless structures are adorned with occasional boxes of plants. Let the good work go on. The "loop" needs beautifying.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Kidwell left July 8 for a brief trip to the East, stopping first at Washington, which was Mr. Kidwell's boyhood home and where his sisters still reside. Mr. Kidwell is president and manager of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association and seldom allows himself a vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Hancock spent the week end at Starved Rock, the newly acquired state park of Illinois. The gigantic rock, upon which a tribe of Indians starved to death rather than surrender, rises perpendicularly 158 feet, and this natural monument to a departing race was saved from destruction for commercial purposes by the work of Illinois women.

Vacations: H. Rogers is at his old home in Spring Lake, Mich.; Nettie Parker, at Lake Geneva, Wis.; Amy Schultz, in Indiana; Miss Amling, motoring; Bert Phillips will go to Dowagiac, Mich.; Mrs. Chas. Moravek is on an extended trip to the Pacific Coast; at A. Lange's, several are off for vacations. Included are Miss Anderson, Miss Lampert, Mr. Brown, Mr. Wadington and others.

Hoerber Bros. finish rebuilding this week the two houses leveled by the cyclone. The rebuilding includes a $1300 smokestack of reinforced concrete, guaranteed to withstand a wind of 100 miles velocity. This guarantee has been mentioned before, but it is something new to have smokestacks guaranteed by builders and this information may be of real value to parties giving out building contracts.

Visitors: S. W. Kanady, of Denton Seed House, Denton, Tex.; J. W. Furrows, Guthrie, Okla.; Frank Friedley, Cleveland, O.; A. F. Koehle of Texas Nursery Co., Sherman, Tex.; Mr. De Wever, Olivette, Mo.

CINCINNATI PERSONAL NOTES.

Geo. Tromey is recuperating at Martinsville, Ind.

P. J. Olinger was confined to his house for a few days last week.

The carpenters and workmen started this week to remodel C. E. Critchell's place.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Fries left Monday evening on a seven weeks' trip to the Pacific Coast.

Visitors—Wm. Gerlach, Jr., Piqua, O., B. H. Klus, Anderson, Ind., and Billy Lodder, Hamilton, Ohio.

NEWS NOTES.

Cumberland, Md.—G. Frank Lippold has sold his florists' plant and retired.

Chattanooga, Tenn. — George B. Haeger has purchased the greenhouses of Mrs. Marietta Hunt.

Madison, Wis. — Mallory & Brown, gladiolus specialists, have sold their business to L. L. May & Co., St. Paul, Minn.

Morris, Ill.—J. H. Rohmer is now sole proprietor of the Morris Floral Company, having taken possession June 1.

Portland, Ind. — W. A. Hart has asked that a receiver be appointed for the Portland Nursery Co. Yount & Ewry have also brought suit on a mechanics' lien against the same concern.

THE NEW SEASON GOODS

PHILADELPHIA NOTES.

Richard Umphried, one of the leading salesmen among the Pennock-Meehan forces, sails for Europe on the Prinz Oscar, July 12th, for a two months' vacation.

Commodore Westcott, Mrs. Westcott, son William, his wife, and grandson Jack, made a strictly family party at Waretown over the Fourth. No outsiders were admitted. This was the family day.

Alfred Cartledge, son of A. B. Cartledge, figures in the local daily papers as a life saver, he having jumped from the yacht he was sailing to save a young lady who had fallen overboard and who was helpless in a hobble skirt.

The Lancaster County Florists' Club will hold their annual picnic this year at Hershey Park on the 15th inst. Samuel S. Pennock and other prominent Philadelphians have been invited to attend and will leave for Lancaster on the 8 A. M. train from Broad Street station.

The retirement of John Burton from the active supervision of his rose-growing establishment is an event worthy of passing notice. His oldest son, George, who has a large rose-growing establishment nearby and in which he has made a notable success, now has charge of the growing and marketing of the products from his father's place. This means a well-earned rest for the father while yet in his prime, and a deserved compliment to the son as a worthy successor.

Visitors: Frank Palmer, store manager, J. Van Lindley Co., Greensboro, N. C.; E. W. Kohr, Lancaster, Pa.; R. Vincent, Jr., Whitemarsh, Md.; Albert O. Stein, San Francisco, Cal. Mr. Stein, who is one of the leaders in the retail trade of 'Frisco, left for Baltimore on the 9th inst., and will return to Philadelphia on the 12th. He informs us we may expect a visit from Dan. McRorie immediately after the convention.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON The midsummer sleep of the flower business still continues, peaceful and undisturbed. It will probably be a couple of weeks before there are any signs of waking up. In the meantime, let everybody get whatever pleasure they can. This does not apply to the trade paper men, however. The less there is going on the harder he must exert himself. Flowers coming to this market are not very great in volume and they certainly are not very high in quality. Some day soon there will be a blyth call from some critical seashore or mountain florist for acceptable goods and then trouble begins. The sleepy carnations, ragged little rosettes called roses and floppy sweet peas seen in the wholesale marts today will not cut much ice with that chap when he wakes up. Beg pardon, there is some really good gypsophila and very decent candytuft to be had, and we know where there are some grand sweet peas.

BUFFALO Summer conditions prevail and business much on quiet basis Carnations and roses show the effects of the hot weather. The retailers carry very little stock and consequently it is up to the wholesalers to assume the heavy load and the surplus is carried along from day to day looking for outlet. The coolers have been loaded not alone with carnations, roses, etc., but lilies were in heavy supply. Outdoor sweet peas have been in heavy receipt and some fine varieties were had which cleaned up only fairly well at low prices.

CHICAGO There is nothing unusual in the market conditions, except that the lack of business is felt more following a very active June. Some extremely hot weather has affected the great bulk of stock and reduces the supply of really good offerings to about what the summer trade requires. The few events that call for really good flowers use up the daily cut and the bulk of that which goes to the sidewalk dealers is worth little more than they receive for it. White roses are very scarce. There are a few good peonies still to be had, and bringing six and eight cents. Next week will about finish them. Orchids are fully up to demand and special low quotations are made on large lots. American Beauties have suffered from the heat, principally in having their size reduced. Carnations are standing up better than often occurs in July. Many wild flowers from the prairies are brought in and frequently sell well. Ferns are selling cheap and stock is not extra good. Regular shipment of colored water lilies are received here from Washington, D. C., and mixed with home grown white ones, make strikingly beautiful effects.

CINCINNATI The ice strike in this city seems to be about over. While it lasted some of the florists were greatly inconvenienced in their efforts to get a satisfactory supply of ice. The market is poor as far as the quantity of receipts is concerned, but the call for stock is tolerably good. On Monday the buyers grabbed everything in sight. This condition may only have been for the day and it may be for a longer time for on the opening day of the week at this time of the year there is little to be had but stock from local growers. On Tuesday outside shipments arrive. Last week began with a very large supply and ended with a light market. If the present call keeps up unless receipts increase considerably, the market is bound to be in a more or less tight condition. Asters are due to come in this week. Pond lilies are plentiful. The cut of smilax is at present rather short.

NEW YORK

When it comes to reporting the New York wholesale market, the stereotyped form is to refer to the awful condition presented last week and then assure the reader that it is still worse this week. Keeping that system up for a succession of weeks is bound in time to exhaust one's vocabulary of words to describe the woeful state of affairs. Still, the great trio—grower, wholesaler and retailer—seem to pick up a very fair existence and a few of them, at least, manage to own high-power automobiles without visibly crippling their resources and no doubt all will survive the present "worst ever" conditions and come to the scratch alert and well-groomed when the next whistle blows. We acknowledge we haven't here revealed much about the market and what it offers. But if you want anything real good in New York flowers just telegraph or write us and we'll tell you where you can get them.

PHILADELPHIA

Hardly worth reporting. Many of the retail stores closed for three days—so that the last week wasn't really a week. About all that can be said is that the business done was about as good as could be expected. Early cosmos has appeared, also single tuberoses. The asters are fair, but short stemmed. Good lilies have a good demand. About nine hundred out of every thousand roses received from the growers are poor stock and have to go in the discard for little or nothing. Gladioli are very good and one of the best sellers on the market. This will probably continue until the bulb people butt in with their short-stemmed, cheap flowers. Centaurea imperialis is very fine at present—pink, lavender and white. Kaiserins are the best in white roses and at that they are nothing very extra.

ST. LOUIS

The market is in anything but good condition as far as quality of the stock is concerned. Among the retailers extreme dullness now reigns. The wholesale houses afford roses in plenty of the Killarney type but of poor quality and very short stems. There are plenty of asters and carnations coming in and these, too, show the effects of the hot weather. Sweet peas are very poor, Easter lilies fine and selling well, and gladioli have a good demand. Fancy ferns are again easy.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Herbert V. Pearce, Detroit, Mich.—Descriptive pamphlet of the Pearce Return Steam Traps.

M. Herb, Naples, Italy.—General Catalogue of Bulbs and of Seeds for Autumn Sowing. Printed in three languages.

A. G. Greiner, St. Louis, Mo.—General Price List of Cacti, Euphorbias and Succulents. A very extensive list of these odd plants.

The Hercules Powder Co., of Wilmington, Del., have issued an 80-page book, well illustrated, under the title of Progressive Cultivation Facts for Farmers. It deals with the digging of ditches and drains, breaking up hard pan and clearing lands of stumps and boulders by the use of dynamite. As a medium for publicity and business getting it seems to fill the bill, but it contains also very much of otherwise instructive value on agricultural and horticultural lines.

This book of "Peonies for Pleasure" gives information on peony history, soil and plants to use, how and when to plant, fertilizers and how to apply, and describes the most extensive planting of really valuable peonies ever gathered together under the sun; describes the old and new, as well as the plebeian and aristocrat of the peony family. If you want information on the plant that stands next to the rose in beauty, that is practically known to the amateur as simply a red, white and pink peony, then send for "Peonies for Pleasure."

THE KROESCHELL GREEN HOUSE BOILER

BEST OF ALL FOR HOT WATER HEATING

WHAT THE USERS SAY

The Kroeschell Does Our Work Easier Than Cast Iron Boilers and Saves 20 to 25% Fuel.

The No. 4 boiler is heating 10,000 sq. ft. of glass—it would take care of 13,000 sq. ft. easy. Have no trouble to keep temperatures of 50 and 60 degrees in coldest weather. The boiler has given perfect satisfaction. We had two cast iron boilers, one rated for 1200 ft. of pipe and one rated for 1500 ft. These boilers never did the work at their best and when the greenhouses were new. According to our experience with yours, we will save 20 to 25 per cent. of fuel.

Which?

It's about twenty-five years ago, isn't it, since the clumsy, unenduring, wooden bicycle wheel was abandoned for the light, strong, all-steel wheel with its wire-like spokes and fine, true-running ball bearings?

You remember how the wise ones shook their heads and said: "those cob web wheels can't stand the racket."

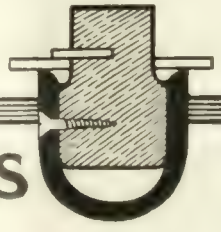
Well, they have stood it for twenty-five years, and now the automobiles are abandoning wooden wheels because the all steel are stronger and last longer!

When the first U-Bar house was built with its cob-web-like all-steel frame and graceful curved eave, the wise ones again shook their heads and said "it couldn't stand the racket."

But it has stood it for over a decade.

So undeniably practical has the construction proven; so far superior is it in growing results; so much lower in up-keep; that other constructors have made their houses as near like it as possible by adopting the curved eave. But the curved eave is only one of the U-Bar's superior points.

Other curved eaves may look like it, but looking like it is the only way they are like it.



If it isn't made with the U-Bar, it isn't a U-Bar curved eave house.

The question for you to decide then is; whether you will be satisfied with a house built like the old heavy bicycle wheel; or have the cob-web-steel U-Bar construction.

Of course the U-Bar costs more, but it is worth many times more than it costs.

A galvanized all steel framework, with the exposed wood on the outside; the steel on the inside—such is the U-Bar construction.

Bougainvilleas

It is well to give these plants every attention from this out. Bougainvilleas will now be at the height of their active growth so give them every opportunity to extend themselves. Now is a good time to give them a shift if their pots are filled with roots. They are rank feeders so they need a rich compost. Mix up three parts of lumpy well-decayed sod, one part cow manure and a good sprinkling of bone meal. See that they have plenty of drainage in their pots and give them a bench where they can have the full sun all day. Go over the plants twice a day so they can be kept watered at the roots, as now they will need lots of it. They will stand any amount of syringing, say at least twice a day for the next five or six weeks.

Calanthes

These plants should now be making a strong and healthy growth. Do not fail to keep the air humid by several dampings down during the day, but never allow a stagnant atmosphere at any time. Watch the plants so they do not suffer for water but do not keep them in a wet state all the time as the compost will become sour. It is always better to permit these orchids to dry out occasionally so the compost will be kept sweet. When the short and dark days come give plenty ventilation without allowing direct drafts. When they have filled the pots with roots give them weekly waterings of weak cow manure once a week. This can be kept up until the flowers expand. Keep an eye out for thrips.

Care of Chrysanthemums

Chrysanthemums that were benched early will now be making lots of roots through the compost and will be greatly benefited by extra feeding. There is nothing better to meet this demand than a nice mulch of well rotted cow manure and soil in equal parts. Before doing this give the surface of the beds a good sprinkling of bone meal and on this place the mulch, about half an inch thick all over. It is from now on that we will have to lay the foundation for fine flowers with good foliage. They will need a copious supply of water at the roots. Syringing will also have to be practiced frequently. During the hot weather blackfly and greenfly will be quite troublesome so keep them in check by a systematic spraying with some insecticide or fumigation once a week, for if not combated right along they will soon overrun your plants.

Cocos Weddeliana

These palms that were raised from seed sown in the early spring should now be doing nicely in two-inch pots. To keep them in good health a very important fact to remember is to use great care in watering them at the roots as they are very slow growing so will require less water than most other palms and any unskillful or careless watering will surely cause ruin. Give ventilation strict attention at all times. In the morning start by giving a little at a time and then in the afternoon reduce the same way gradually. These palms should never be allowed to go below 70 degrees at night and with a rise up to 85 or 90 during the day with sun. Do not keep too thickly shaded as they like a full measure of light without exposure to the direct sun action.

Planting Carnations

We are now coming to the carnation growers' busy time, which is the planting up of his houses. The first thing to do is to shade the house, which will make it more congenial for both man and plants. Put on something that will come off easily as they should have full sun in about twelve days. When lifting the plants see that they always have some protection from the sun and drying winds. Always have enough of help so they can be lifted, removed and planted out in the houses as quickly as possible. When planting make your holes large enough so the roots will have a nice spread and do not plant any deeper than they were in the field, giving each and every plant a firm pressing around the roots. When you have a block of 50 to 75 feet planted see that they have a proper watering. Give them a nice spraying three or four times a day and keep the house rather close for about ten days.

Planning for Next Winter

There is nothing of greater importance than to prepare plans away ahead of time. Every retail grower should have a good batch of snapdragons, stocks, lilies, poinsettias, etc. Another standby for every retail florist to include is in the bulb line, as tulips, Roman hyacinths, Dutch hyacinths, and narcissi as they can be grown in most any house and will always find a buyer. Decide now what to grow and order what stock you may need and you will be sure to get the best while it is on the market in quantity.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Aspidistras; Camellias; Dahlias; Sowing Schizanthus; Winter-Flowering Stocks; Late Asters.

Pot Up Strawberries

When the layers have stood a day or two after being cut away from the parent plant and have fully recovered any little set-back they may have experienced through having to rely on their own resources to obtain nourishment, proceed to pot them up. Some growers advocate putting them into 4's and after these are filled out with roots pot them on into 6's, their fruiting size. Nothing is gained in this method over placing them directly into their permanent pots. They will take a little extra care for a time until they have rooted through, after which with increasing roots demanding more water they will grow along easily. It is essential that all pots are properly drained. See that some rough material or old mushroom bed is placed over the crocks or ashes to prevent the soil from working down and clogging them up. A teaspoonful of soot sprinkled directly on the drainage will prevent worms from entering for quite a time. A strawberry likes to be made nicely firm consequently no cracked pots are permissible for the job. The soil should be made up of half decayed, medium to heavy loam, with a little soot and bonemeal mixed into it. Should it be of a heavy texture add enough old mushroom bed to keep it porous. At the time of potting, the soil should be on the dry side, which allows of the free use of the rammer. Transfer the plants to the position they are to occupy during the rest of the summer, which should have an ash bottom, which helps to keep away worms, makes a good drainage for the pots and is clean to get about the plants on. For a start let the pots be placed pot-thick which will help to keep the moisture about them. Syringe once daily and spray them over several times, which will help to promote growth.

The Vegetable House

Now is the time to look to any repairs that are needed in the vegetable house, for there is only a matter of a few weeks until activities will commence again here. It may be a coat of paint is needed—which will find work for the painters during some rainy days. Benches, either sides or bottoms, may need renewing now when a bench has been emptied and the weather is good to fill it in again without delay. Then there is the heating system; is all right here? Is there still remaining under some of the benches partly used mushroom beds? If so have these cleared out as there will be little call for this material after this. The mushroom cellar should also be looked to, all disused beds removed, and the place scrubbed down. A white-wash throughout will be beneficial.

Pot-Trees and Their Care

By this time all the trees grown in pots, excepting perhaps a few apples and pears, will be plunged outside and apparently there is nothing to do with them until potting times comes along. Seldom if ever do we find a subject that can be neglected for any length of time either growing or resting. These trees may look as though there is "nothing to do till tomorrow," but I say look out for today. Remember these trees have all been forced hard and in addition to the usual watering will need a "livener" once in a while. Nothing very strong, but a little cow-manure water about once a week will help them to plump up the buds for next season's work. Do not rely on a shower to water the roots of these trees. A moist top is sometimes deceiving, and a big detriment to the trees. Keep a sharp look-out for borers as they are particularly fond of these trees.

Our Friend

Allow me to introduce our readers to another friend of the gardening fraternity. Mr. Reader, shake hands with Mr. Turtle. "Pleased to meet you, Mr. Turtle." "How'd you do, Mr. Reader? I believe you have a quantity of bugs, etc., to dispose of?" "Yes; well now, etc." Our friend turtle has proved himself a valuable assistant since we first captured him some months ago. It is the ordinary land turtle I refer to. Not being a naturalist I am at a loss to give his correct name, but most readers will be familiar with them threading their way through the long grass or undergrowth. I am told they feed on tender growths in addition to any bugs that they come across, which is borne out by the fact that they will relish a nice juicy peach or nectarine and take little time to get next to it should one have the misfortune to fall to the ground. They also will feed on practically all the live stock that is to be found in the borders of the fruit houses. It is amusing to see them making a double-quick march along the borders picking anything off the wall that may come to their notice. They have helped us in a practical way and will do the same for others if transferred to the houses and the outside doors are kept closed; otherwise they would retreat to their native haunts.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

Arthur C. Ruzicka

Burning of the Foliage on Roses

(In reply to inquiry)

In reply to inquiry received on the 12th inst. we would say that pure, clean water will scorch and scald the foliage of the roses if it is applied when the plants are a little dry at the root. Tobacco smoke will do the same thing. This is especially true of houses that have a large amount of concrete flooring, for then the air is almost perfectly dry, unless provision has been made to supply a steady amount of moisture to help keep the atmosphere in prime condition. As for spraying the plants every now and then, we would think it best to leave that out altogether. An occasional syringing to keep out that ever-present little brute—red spider—will be all the spraying that the plants will require to keep them in good health. Before each syringing make sure that the plants are all wet enough. Better go over them very lightly with a hose very early in the morning to make sure. Then syringe after nine o'clock and you will be on the safe side. Also the damping down; we think it is very much out of place in the rose houses. It may be all to the good in other branches of the business but keep away from all damping down in the rose houses. Where the floors of the houses are all of concrete, and perhaps the benches, too, put some ashes or something similar over the walks, say two inches deep. This will keep the moisture in the houses about right, to say nothing of reducing the temperature in general. The trouble with this damping down is that usually the thing is carried altogether too far, and the growth is likely to become too soft. Then in the fall instead of having a lot of healthy plants that will resist mildew and about half a dozen other diseases which lie in waiting, you will have a good dose of mildew before you know it, and it will take the plants until spring to recover from this one attack. With Beauties, blackspot is liable to set in, which is almost as bad as the mildew—much worse in fact as mildew can be killed, leaving only the marked foliage to tell the tale. To go on with the cause of burned foliage; sometimes the glass will not be as good as it might, and there will be quite some burners, or "cats' eyes," as these spots are sometimes called. Of course the leaves will burn only in places and not throughout the whole house. Go over these places with a brush and some paint, and cover the spots well.

Tying the Young Beauty Plants

It does not pay to be in too much of a hurry to tie up the young plants, as it does them good to lie around a little, before being strung to the wires. You will find the plants will break much easier from the bottom when they lie bent over, and as long as they are not damaged by syringing they can so remain. When finally tying the plants it is advisable to tie them on a little slant, instead of straight up. This will give the new bottom shoots a better chance to grow, and as soon as they are fairly up, and the mother shoot has a bud, the latter can be cut away at the very bottom, leaving the plant composed entirely of the new shoots, as the old mother shoot seldom amounts to anything, usually throwing a lot of weak wood that will just run and run, and never bloom, being only in the way of the other shoots which produce the flowers.

Manure for the Early Mulches

It is high time for the manure pile to be in shape if nothing has been done to it as yet. The manure intended for the early mulches should have been turned over several times by this time. Keep it wet, too, to keep the pile cool, or it will burn very likely and then be practically worthless as far as plant food is concerned. A little new, good sod added to the pile at each turning will do wonders in holding moisture, and absorbing all the liquids so valuable to plants, and which would otherwise be lost.

The R. H. S. Summer Show.

A wide variation of summer blooms in all their grandeur were to be seen at the annual summer show of the Royal Horticultural Society, held at Holland House, Kensington, on July 1st and two following days. The society had a difficult task to excel the recent magnificent exhibition at Chelsea. The show, of course, was not on such an extensive scale but the high standard of excellence was in keeping with the society's meritorious record. The exhibits were arranged in seven large marquees. Contributions were received from some 120 exhibitors of flowers. The Coronation challenge cup, given for the best exhibit, was awarded to Sander & Sons, for their orchids. The firm also received a first class certificate for Miltonia Sanderae, and an award of merit for Cattleya Mossiae Dreadnought. Roses were numerous and interesting. In the group of Chas. Turner there was a new scarlet Rambler, Coronation, of promise; also a sport from Lyon rose, a semi-double with buff-tinted blooms. Shower of Gold is a new Rambler with small yellow flowers,—this was exhibited by Paul & Son. Frank Cant & Co. showed Miss Ada Francis, a new Rambler with blooms similar to those of Goldfinch, and Braiswick Chrome, a new Wichuraiana with yellow-tinted blooms. W. Easlea staged Cherry Page, a new decorative hybrid tea, with cherry pink blooms shaded with yellow. Sweet peas made a brilliant display. Sutton & Sons had a fine array, as did also Dobbie & Co. Perpetual flowering carnations lent their gorgeous coloring to the scene.

The Rose Show.

The annual show of the National Rose Society on July 4th was bigger and better than ever. It was undoubtedly the largest display in the society's 37 years' experience. The nurserymen's champion trophy for 72 blooms fell to B. R. Cant & Sons, whose collection included a new crimson seedling hybrid, Augustus Hartmann. Alex. Dickson & Son were second and Frank Cant & Co., third. In the class for nine blooms of any new rose, Jas. Cocker & Sons were first with Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, a new H. T. described as "a sweetly scented Frau Karl Druschki." This had previously received a gold medal from the National Rose Society. In a class for 40 distinct varieties, Alex Dickson & Son were first, their exhibit including a new crimson variety, Conway Jones; B. R. Cant & Sons were second, and F. Cant & Sons third. There was a splendid display of seedlings—always a special feature of this show. Alex. Dickson & Sons received a gold medal for Queen Mary, old gold. Mrs. James Lynas is a new H. T., or blush pink, whilst Brilliant is a scarlet crimson, with rather loose blooms. The two last-named were exhibited by Hugh Dickson, and each received a gold medal.

Overloaded lists

Mr. Kerr, in his very interesting address to the Sweet Pea Society asked "Has the sweet pea reached its zenith?" We believe that the majority of those who have watched the rapid development of this flower in recent years will coincide with Mr. Kerr that the possibilities of the sweet pea are as yet but lightly touched upon. Permanent advancement is considerably hampered, however, by the same conditions that have discouraged and tried the patience of all those who have ever become enthusiastic in the exploitation of any special race of flowers—the unreasonable multiplication of named varieties. Every catalogue firm apparently feels called upon to give to the world a "set" each year and the temptation to inordinate laudation of the superiority of a new brood is too strong for human resistance. On the tables at Boston were plenty of varieties that at one time or another had been heralded as superior to their predecessors of similar color but which if mixed together in one bunch could never again be segregated and positively named by the keenest expert.

Society efficiency

The cumbersome and needless multiplication of named varieties is a nuisance which is almost certain to break out in the process of development of any flower in which the growers and the public become specially interested. In latter years perhaps the chrysanthemum and the carnation furnish the most conspicuous examples of excess in this direction. That it has been effectually stopped is something for which we have to thank the two societies devoted to the interests of these flowers. To attempt to carry a runt through the barriers and scrutiny now established by these societies is recognized as a well-nigh hopeless undertaking and the trade and public generally little realize their obligations to these organizations for what they have thus accomplished. The Sweet Pea Society is confronted with the same problem and the same duty as the chrysanthemum, carnation and peony societies. In Prof. Beal's valuable report of the sweet pea tests at Cornell, the mention of three or four hundred named sorts being tried out suggests the old days in the Massachusetts Horticultural Society when the passport to fame as a pomologist was the ability to exhibit four hundred or more varieties of pears under name! Prof. Beal's report seems to indicate that the Sweet Pea Society is getting down to business on very practical and serviceable lines.

The sweet pea seventy-five years ago

In that elaborate publication, Plantae Utiliores, by M. A. Burnett, published in London in the year 1842, we find in the chapter on Sweet Peas the following paragraphs which will doubtless interest many of our readers just at present:

The sweet pea has several varieties, greatly differing in color; the common sort, which is blue and dark purple, sometimes with a tinge of red, is a native of Sicily. The more delicate kind, white and blue, or white and deep rose color, sometimes with a mixture of pale blue, is a native of Ceylon, and is called the painted lady.

The Tangier pea is a native of Barbary, its colors purple and red; it is an annual plant and grows to the height of four or five feet, and blossoms in June or July, and dies in the autumn. Although the sweet pea is now so common in this country that we seldom see a garden without it, it is not more than a hundred years since it was numbered among our rare and curious plants, and in the time of Parkinson and Evelyn, it was not known in our gardens.

There is a variety of this pea entirely white, but the most beautiful is the red and white. But that I fear to confess so great a heresy, I would say this flower need not yield to the rose. Nothing can exceed the elegance of its form, nor can there be a more delicate contrast of color. They are justly termed Papilionaceous, for they do indeed look like butterflies turned to flowers. It is sometimes difficult to believe that the little white butterflies which reel about in the sunshine, are not white violets or peas which have broken their bonds. It is equally difficult to believe that these flowers want anything but will to fly; and we almost expect to see them start from their stalks as we look at them.

No better evidence is needed to show that the popularity of the sweet pea is neither new nor transient. A beautiful portrait of the three leading sorts in colors accompanies the text from which the foregoing was taken. The individual flowers appear hardly inferior to our well-known Grandiflora varieties, but in each instance there are but two flowers to the stalk.

AMERICAN SWEET PEA SOCIETY

The fifth annual exhibition and convention of the American Sweet Pea Society held in Boston on Saturday and Sunday, July 12 and 13, was a gratifying success in every respect. The joint exhibition of this society and the Massachusetts Horticultural Society completely filled the three halls of the Horticultural Building. The weather for a few days had been favorable for the flowers and thus quality was assured where in the heated term of the previous week it did look very dubious. There was a goodly number of visitors from New York, Philadelphia, New Jersey and New England generally, the Association of Gardeners having called their meeting for the same date and place as the Sweet Pea Society, many of the members of the former being also members of the latter.

The Exhibition.

The prize list was a tempting one and the classes were filled almost to the limit. Only seven of the Sweet Pea Society's premiums were uncompeted for, three of these being in the children's classes and three being in the classes for novelties of 1912 and 1913. In this latter respect the show was somewhat of a disappointment, the only novelties obtaining recognition being W. Atlee Burpee's Illuminator, which received a certificate of merit and William Sim's exhibit of new winter-flowering varieties which was accorded a silver medal. A gold medal was awarded to W. Atlee Burpee Company for the finest display of sweet peas. This exhibit was very extensive and showy.

Taking up the Sweet Pea Society's premiums in order as they appeared on the schedule awards were made as follows:

Section A, for Private Gardeners

R. & J. Farquhar & Co. prize for six vases of six Spencers: 1st, Mrs. T. O. Richardson, gard. Jas. Robertson, Newport, R. I.; 2nd, G. W. Vanderbilt, gard. E. Kirk, Bar Harbor, Me.

A. T. Boddington prizes for collection of 25 varieties, not less than 25 stems to a vase: 1st, Mrs. W. B. Leeds, gard. W. Gray, Newport; 2nd, Girard Foster, gard. Ed. Jenkins. Both of these exhibits were superb and as representing the premier collection of the show, winning also the Boddington challenge cup, we here give the list of varieties staged by Mr. Gray. They were as follows: Martha Washington, Asta Ohn, Carene, Mrs. Townsend, Helen Lewis, Constance Oliver, Barbara, Mrs. C. W. Breadmore, White Spencer, Enchantress, Florence Morse, Hercules, Primrose, Mrs. Henry Bell, Tennant, King Edward, Colleen, Elsie Herbert, John Ingman, Othello Spencer, Mrs. Hardcastle Sykes, Countess Spencer, Etta Dyke, Lovely, Apple Blossom.

Section C, for Amateurs.

Prizes offered by Peter Henderson & Co., A. T. Boddington, John Lewis Childs and by the Society were all well-competed for and awarded.

Section D for retail florists. In these classes, competed for mainly by three or four Boston florists the first awards were changed in several instances and much confusion and protesting resulted. The result as here recorded are given subject to revision. Our opinion is that florists from out-of-town who are familiar with the requirements of this kind of work should be called in to do the judging of exhibits in this class.

Silver and bronze medals for mantel decoration: 1st, Wax Bros, white and purple peas, smilax, ferns and palms; 2nd, Boston Cut Flower Co., peas, various colors, and ferns.

Bridal bouquet: 1st, Boston Cut Flower Co.; 2nd, Wax Bros.

Corsage: Boston Cut Flower Co., 1st and 2nd.

Section E, for School Children.

Prizes offered by F. R. Pierson, F. E. Palmer, A. T. Boddington, H. F. Michell Co., Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston and the Society were fairly well competed for.

Section F, Open and Miscellaneous Classes.

C. C. Morse & Co. prize and Society's medals for display, open to seed trade only: 1st, R. & J. Farquhar & Co., with the most elaborate and beautiful layout in the exhibition, a pool and fountain in centre, with circular tables and four arches of sweet peas; 2nd, W. Atlee Burpee & Co.; 3rd, A. T. Boddington.

Mt. Desert Nurseries' prize, for basket of sweet peas: Miss M. C. Collins.

H. A. Dreer prizes for vase of Mrs. Routzahn: 1st, Mrs. W. B. Leeds; 2nd, G. W. Vanderbilt.

H. A. Dreer prizes for George Herbert: 1st, H. Heeremans; 2nd, Col. F. Mason, gard. E. L. Lewis, Taunton.

Penn cup for display, 50 sq. ft.: Mt. Desert Nurseries.

Boston Flower Exchange prizes for six vases arranged for effect: Peter Fisher, Ellis. A very fine exhibit.

John L. Downey, gard. Thos. Ryan, who entered in several classes, showed the most remarkable stems and flowers ever seen on sweet peas but his varieties were faulty as to color and on this he lost out.

Massachusetts Horticultural Society Prizes.

These were in groups of classes open, for Spencers and Grandifloras, for amateurs only, and for children, respectively, 46 classes in all. They were practically all competed for except in the Grandiflora group, where only one entry appeared, showing how completely this class of sweet peas has been superseded. Among the principal winners were: Mrs. Lester Leland, Mt. Desert Nurseries, Mrs. T. J. Emery, Col. Chas. Pfaff, G. W. Vanderbilt, Mrs. P. C. Forbes, Mrs. T. O. Richardson, H. E. Converse, Miss F. Foster, S. Carlquist, etc.

The judging in the class for table decoration resulted in confusion as in the case of the other retail classes above referred to. According to latest information, first was accorded to Wax Bros.; second to Henry R. Comley, pink peas and adiantum being used in both instances.

There were many creditable exhibits of other material, including extensive fruit and vegetable groups. W. A. Manda received a first-class certificate of merit for Cattleya Harrisonae var. Mandaiana, a lovely flower, and honorable mention for group of orchids. Other interesting exhibits were orchids from Julius Roehrs Co. (honorable mention); F. J. Dolansky and J. T. Butterworth; gladioli from John Lewis Childs and B. Hammond Tracy; tuberous begonias from Mrs. Lester Leland; magnificent collections of herbaceous flowers from Eastern Nurseries, and William Whitman. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. showed a grand vase of Lilium myriophyllum.

THE MEETING.

The annual meeting of the American Sweet Pea Society was held in the committee room of Horticultural Hall on Saturday afternoon. After the usual routine business, Prof. A. C. Beal's report on the trial grounds at Cornell University was presented. An invitation was extended by M. C. Ebel for the next exhibition to be held in New York City and it was voted to accept and make the date for the last Saturday and Sunday in June, 1914. Secretary Bunyard reported that $350 had been appropriated for sweet pea premiums at the proposed International Flower Show in New York in March, 1914. The paper by G. W. Kerr, which we present in this issue, was attentively listened to.

Election of officers resulted as follows: President, William Sim, Cliftondale, Mass.; vice-president, Arthur Kirby, New York City; secretary, H. A. Bunyard, New York; recording secretary, J. H. Pepper, New York; treasurer, A. T. Boddington, New York, William Duckham, Madison, N. J., succeeds W. Atlee Burpee on the executive committee.

THE BANQUET.

On Saturday evening an elegant little banquet was tendered to the visiting members of the American Sweet Pea Society and the Gardeners' Association by the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, at the Copley Square Hotel. President W. J. Kennedy presided, about 60 guests being present, and it was a very enjoyable occasion. William Sim was the first speaker when the time arrived for the talkfest. Then came the new vice-president of the Sweet Pea Society, Arthur Kirby. George B. Dorr, of Bar Harbor, Me., followed with enthusiastic praise for the exhibition, and next A. E. Thatcher with a rousing speech. W. J. Stewart next, and then Thomas Roland, who spoke of the sweet pea as "the flower of the people and for the people" and paid a clever compliment to the great work of A. Zvolanek. Secretary Rich of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society congratulated everybody and assured them that Horticultural Hall would always open its doors to this beautiful and coming flower. Secretary M. C. Ebel of the Association of Gardeners spoke nicely for the gardeners. Peter Miller voiced the welcome of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club. Secretary Bunyard orated with characteristic wit and humor, and Wm. Downs and others to the number of nearly a score added their mite to the general felicitation, and heverbody went 'ome 'appy.

VISITORS.

We make no attempt to give a complete list of the visitors. Among them, however, were the following, most of whom honored the office of HORTICULTURE with a friendly call. Leonard Barron, Garden City, N. Y.; F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; I. S. Hendrickson, Floral Park, N. Y.; C. H. Totty, W. H. Duckham and M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J.; Jas. Robertson, Newport, R. I.; Jas. Stuart, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; H. A. Bunyard, George Struck, A. T. Delamare, J. H. Pepper, A. F. Faulkner and A. Kirby, all of New York City; A. E. Thatcher, Bar Harbor, Me.; Jas. MacMachen, Tuxedo Park, N. Y.; G. W. Kerr, Doylstown, Pa.; Prof A. C. Beal, Ithaca, N. Y.; W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J.; J. J. Karins, Philadelphia, Pa

Harry A. Bunyard, secretary of the American Sweet Pea Society, provoked a hearty laugh at the annual meeting of that organization in Horticultural Hall. He had been proposed for re-election, and the office was generously seeking the man. But he was too modest to seem to want the place and too devoted to the society to surrender it to somebody else. "I've been thinking it's time for me to have a successor," he said, "but I've not been able to find a man big enough for the job, and—" the members exploded. One of them passed a cigar to Mr. Bunyard and he was promptly made secretary for another year. Boston Transcript

REPORT OF THE SWEET PEA TRIALS FOR 1913.

By Prof A. C. Beal of Ithaca, N. Y.

At this time it may be desirable to note the progress made in the sweet pea trials. This work was undertaken in the autumn of 1909, when plantings were made for the purpose of determining whether it is feasible to plant sweet peas in the fall. The results of this work were reported in Bulletin No. 301. The testing of varieties has covered four seasons. During this period a large number of varieties have been grown each year. These have not all been distinct, for a number of varieties have been grown every year for the purposes of comparison. The number of varieties grown each year is as follows: 1910, 469; 1911, 435; 1912, 370; 1913, 200.

When we began our studies of sweet peas, it was decided to make a thorough study of the evolution of the sweet pea, and for this purpose a large number of the older varieties were grown. These have now been dropped from the trials, which explains in large measure the smaller number of varieties grown during the last season. Each year careful and complete notes have been taken of all the varieties, which give us, in the case of those varieties grown for comparative purposes, a record of the behavior of varieties in different seasons. In the case of the novelties, however, most of them have only been grown one season.

Three publications have been issued, and the writer is rapidly putting into final form all the descriptive notes on varieties. This material will be ready for publication at the close of the present season. The publications which we have already issued have had a gratifying reception, not only in this country, but in England.

This year the seeds which were received for trial were sown singly in 3 in. pots during the last week in March. Each pot was carefully labeled so that no mixing of varieties in handling could possibly happen. The pots were placed in the greenhouse until germination occurred, and then were transferred to coldframes, where they remained until they were planted in the field. The preparation of the land was similar to that which we have practiced heretofore. There was no rain for three weeks after transplanting, and for a time we thought the chances of success very unfavorable. However, the plants grew well after the rains and began to bloom about June 20. This year we have abandoned the use of string as a support, and have employed wire netting. This serves the purpose very well, except in the case of some varieties which required tying to the netting. In addition to the 150 varieties sown in pots, about 100 varieties were planted in the open ground. Owing to the late, cold season these were not planted until the 18th of April, and at the present time only the Blanche Ferry and its near relatives are in bloom in this part of the trial grounds. On the other hand, the plants from seed sown in pots are now blooming freely and are making a splendid show. This affords an excellent illustration of the relative earliness of the same varieties grown by two systems.

Among the varieties of recent introduction now growing on the trial grounds are:

Barbara, Bertie Usher, Betty, Blue Jacket, Captivation Spencer, Chastity, Coronation, Cyril Unwin, Dobbie's Cream, Edith Taylor, Irish Belle, John Ridd, Lady Evelyn Eyre, Lady Knox, Leslie Imber, Margaret Madison, Loyalty, Mauve Queen, May Campbell, Melba, Millie Maslin Spencer, Mrs. Cuthbertson, Mrs. Heslington, Mrs. T. W. Warren, Orion, Pearl Gray Spencer, Primrose Beauty, Princess May, Red Star, Rosabelle, Scarlet Empress, Scarelt Emperor, Vermilion Brilliant, Winifred Unwin, Zarina Spencer, Andrew Aitken, April, Brunette, Bolton's Scarlet, Charm, Clematis, Dobbie's Scarlet and Dobbie's True Lavender, Earl of Lovelace, Ella Kelway, Felicity, Gustav Hamel, Grace Darling, Helen Pierce Spencer, Inspector, Lillian, Laura Wyatt, Lila, Lord Nelson Spencer, Lady Miller, May Perrett Spencer, Mrs. E. Cowdy, Mrs. Reginald Hill and Southcote Blue.

At the present time, so far as we have studied the varieties, it appears that those of merit are: May Campbell, marbled carmine on cream ground; Charm (Fordhook Fairy), white, suffused with delicate blush lilac; Orchid, rich, deep lavender suffused with pink; Dobbie's Scarlet, brilliant scarlet; Lady Evelyn Eyre, a very large blush variety; Lila, a distinct variety, standards faint lilac deeper at midrib, wings very light primrose; Orion, crimson; Mrs. Cuthbertson, rose pink standard and white flushed pale rose wings; Walter P. Wright, bluish lavender.

At the present date we would report that Inspector is better than Melba, and that both are better than Earl Spencer. The former shows a good percentage of doubles.

Dobbie's Scarlet appears to be the best of the bright scarlets, although Red Star is good.

Margaret Madison is doubtless better than Flora Norton Spencer. Leslie Imber and Southcote Blue are no better than the latter.

Helen Pierce Spencer, May Farquhar, Lord Nelson Spencer, and Millie Maslin Spencer are good, but we will report on them later.

Loyalty, Bertie Usher, and Blue Jacket are blue striped varieties.

Cyril Unwin resembles Arthur Green.

There are several cream pink, white, orange, maroon, and mauve varieties, but nothing which at this date is superior to the standard varieties.

These brief notes are subject to possible revision after further study, and the members of the Society are referred to our forthcoming report for complete descriptions and comparisons of varieties.

The recently organized Department of Floriculture proposes to continue to test new varieties of sweet peas each season, and hopes that the work which has been carried on may justify a continuance of the excellent support which the American Sweet Pea Society has given the work hitherto carried on at Cornell.

A FEW NOTES ON SWEET PEAS.

Paper by George W. Kerr, Doylestown, Pa.

When the evolution of the sweet pea is mentioned our thoughts must immediately go back to the late Henry Eckford, for, had he not given us that fine old pink variety Prima Donna, it may be that the Spencer type would not yet have been evolved, for Countess Spencer came to us as a sport, or, to follow the new term used by the Dutch botanist Hugo de Vries—mutation, from Prima Donna, and as we all know this was the forerunner of the beautiful new race of Spencers, many of which are now the results of careful hybridizing, while others are simply sports or mutations from existing sorts.

Mendel's Influence.

I know I am safe in asserting that had not the Mendelian laws of hybridizing been made public, the evolution of the sweet pea would not have been so far advanced, for Mendel has taught us that it is useless to expect results in the first generation, that no matter how unpromising the flowers may appear, the seed should be carefully saved and sown again and then in the second generation we may be rewarded by the appearance of some new and improved forms or types—according to what we have been aiming for and I know that previous to the knowledge of this law, hundreds of crosses were thrown away every year instead of retaining them for the breaks which would naturally appear in the next generation.

To those who have the patience and the garden room to spare, for seedlings in the course of two or three years do take up a lot of space if the hybridizer is making many crosses, the raising of new varieties is a most interesting pastime, but it is well to count the cost ere starting, as no results can possibly be attained until the second generation, that is, two years from the date of making the cross, and two or three years more must elapse ere the grower can satisfy himself that the stock is truly fixed.

According to the varieties which have been mated, something very fine may appear the first year, that is what is termed in Mendelism first generation, or F. I., but the variety is never fixed and always breaks up in F. 2, or second generation, and I was greatly surprised to observe quite a number of new sweet peas advertised for registration in the trade papers early this spring, as first generation selections, when it is an established and indisputable fact that no variety is fixed in the first generation.

Problems of the Future.

Has the sweet pea reached its zenith, or are there new forms and colors yet to be evolved by the specialist? Judging by the introductions of the past few years which includes such magnificent novelties as Elfrida Pearson, Stirling Stent, Thos. Stevenson, Charles Foster, Prince George, Orchid, Decorator and Edith Taylor, just to mention a few, the sweet pea is still in its infancy, and we may hopefully look forward to be yet further delighted with marvelous new shades or types, but so much has been said and written lately about sweet pea diseases that if we would believe all we read on the subject, the days of the sweet pea are numbered. Now I, for one, do not believe this to be the case, for having been in touch with sweet peas practically all my life, I have only observed isolated instances of disease nowhere have I ever seen it in the form of a scourge. About this time in some sections of Pennsylvania we lose plants wholesale, but my observations have led me to the conclusion that this is simply due to extreme heat and drought, and it is worth noting that fall planted peas are less liable to go off as early in the season as those sown in spring, this being undoubtedly due to the fact that the former has made better, and in most instances deeper, root growth, the plants being therefore more able to withstand extreme heat and drought. This drying up of the vines I have often heard called blight, but it is simply as I have already stated, the effects of continued dry weather and extreme heat, therefore, when I mentioned disease I had in mind "Streak." Thielavia Basicola, which has troubled so many growers in England.

Streak Disease.

The majority of the scientists who have studied streak disease seem to have arrived at the conclusion that errors in manuring and watering were the cause of the trouble. While located in England, where I grew sweet peas on a large scale for exhibition purposes, I have in some seasons had many rows of plants flooded for several days in succession, during excessive rainfalls, and yet no bad effects followed, this being doubtless due to perfect drainage and deep trenching. The fact, therefore, leads me to the conclusion that the wrong use of manures may be the source of the trouble. We are told that all nitrogenous manures must be withheld from the sweet pea, for as it belongs to the leguminosae family of plants, all of which are capable of assimilating the free nitrogen of the atmosphere, it is unnatural to feed it nitrates, as by so doing the nitrogen gathering bacteria in the root nodules die of inanition and the plant is therefore susceptible to disease. Therefore, where disease has prevailed it is well to avoid the too free use of farmyard manure. If the soil must have humus, apply the dung to the previous crop, or use it only in a thoroughly rotted condition, as in that state most of the nitrogen will previously have been liberated.

HYDRANGEA MADAME MOUILLERE.

The illustration shows a truss of this fine hydrangea, one of the French novelties lately introduced. The flowers are very large, pure white, with carmine point in centre, and form a noble truss. We are indebted to Donald McKenzie, Chestnut Hill, Mass., for the photograph.

A CORRECTION.

HORTICULTURE:

Gentlemen—In your publication of July 12th, in your notes about Saint Louis, you have a statement to the effect that Mr. W. S. Wells has formed a partnership with me in the landscape business. Though Mr. Wells will become connected with me this month in the capacity of superintendent, there is no partnership formed as you have stated.

Trusting that you will correct this in your next issue, I am,

Yours truly,

CHARLES W. FULLGRAF

The KENILWORTH Giant Pansy

Pansies in Separate Colors.

seeds are all grown by myself and are offered in the following mixtures and separate colors:

KENILWORTH STRAIN—The flowers are of perfect form and substance; many of the immense flowers are from 3½ to 4 inches; it is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings, rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention.

KENILWORTH SHOW—An extra fine strain of large flowers; the immense flowers are of circular form and great substance; a beautiful collection of colors and markings.

KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE—Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower or for exhibition purposes, for inside or outside growing; the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 7 or 8 inches long, in the most graceful manner, and stand the hot, dry weather well.

MASTERPIECE—A remarkable type; the curled, wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance, its large flowers of great substance, on long, strong stems.

ORCHID FLOWERED, Mixed—A dwarf free bloomer with a range of delicate colors that do not exist in any other pansies, a remarkable combination of light rose, shell pink, blush mauve, fawn, light brown, orange and chamois.

SEED TRADE

California Seed Crops.

A letter from the Braslan Seed Growers' Co., San Jose, Cal., to Winterson Seed Co., Chicago, contains the following information on seed crop conditions:

"Crops exceedingly light, due to dry weather and late frost and now at this late date we find the crops of sweet peas on our ranches are being ruined by aphis. Our loss will be principally on named varieties.

"We also find stands of lettuce reduced by dry rot, among leading varieties. There was also not enough moisture in the ground for root crops, such as beets, carrots, parsnips, salsify. There was not enough moisture for roots to take hold when planted and result was some decayed, some were killed by frost and the balance apparently surviving on nourishment from roots themselves, and when this is gone the plant dies.

"From present observations we feel warranted in stating that we shall not make more than 25 per cent delivery on beets and still less on named sweet peas. Mixed peas were further advanced and podded before the aphis came. Will fill in full on mustard and hope to make good delivery on salsify, parsnip, parsley and some varieties of carrots. Crops of Oxhearts, French Forcing and Scarlet Horn suffered less than other varieties.

"Of yellow and red onions there are less than 50 per cent of a normal crop; of white even less. Stocks are shorter and fewer, heads small and rather loose. Hot winds now would greatly reduce crop still more."

Charles J. Bolgiano has been appointed a committeeman representing the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association on the Board of Trade of Baltimore City for the purpose of promoting the plans leading to the success of "Maryland Week" at which time the great horticultural and floral exhibition is held in the mammoth armory. Mr. Bolgiano recently acquired the entire interest of the old-established firm of J. Bolgiano & Son.

HOUSE-CLEANING.

Everybody loves to enter an attractive store; so it is up to you to make it such and usually the quiet summer season is the time to begin to think of making it as pretty and inviting as your artistic knowledge of interior decorating will permit. Of course, we all understand you may have to invoke aid either from outside your establishment or some of your help may be capable of assisting you in changing the scene of last year, thus showing your customers that you are a wide-awake florist.

For instance, if your store interior has been painted white for the past few years, change the aspect by introducing soft tints which will harmonize with all flower colors that you are likely to handle throughout the season. Very soft tones of green, a delicate shade of blue almost fading to white, and for those preferring dark colors where the store receives the benefit of plenty of sun, a mottled green giving an antique effect, or mission tints, are all very good.

Painting having been completed we now turn our attention to chandeliers, counters, mirrors, etc. The polishing of metals, bleaching of marble work and changing a little here and there will make quite a difference in appearance and will show that an interest has been taken to hold the old customers and encourage new ones to enter when business starts up again.

This work should never be attempted before August, as the heat, dust and flies will soon remove the fresh look from the work and the later it is done the better. Housecleaning finished we await the fresh stock of plants to arrange around the store, and the finishing touches are put on when the early chrysanthemums begin to arrive, and remind us that the new season has opened.

MR. STOREMAN.

CHICAGO NOTES.

Jack Boyers is back from Michigan. Miss Parker and Miss Conner will have a cruise on the Lakes. Mr. Pehrson, of Pehrson & Morine, is at White Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Foley have gone on a trip to Montana where they will visit Mr. Foley's brother, and from there will probably go to the coast. It is the first vacation in seven years and Mr. Foley has earned a right to it.

Frank Oechslin's large auto truck was pressed into service again by E. Wienhoeber to carry the flowers at a recent funeral, showing that the mainstay of the florists' trade is holding its own. Flowers for funerals will not lose their popularity so long as the trade is handled properly.

This week closes operations in the present quarters of the Foley Manuf. Co., at 26th street and Western avenue, where their holdings of 48 city lots touching the C. B. & Q. made an ideal location for the past seven years. Now the elevation of the tracks and the judgment of $22,000 against the railroad, just won in a suit by the Foley Manuf. Co. leaves them in position to seek another location. Several desirable sites are under consideration and the choice will be made very soon.

The Municipal Art Committee of the City Club is sparing neither time nor money to fight the bill-board nuisance. In some of the best parts of the city, bill-boards have been erected contrary to the city ordinance which requires the consent of the majority of the property holders on both sides of the street, in the block containing the boards, to such an extent that property owners lose all interest in beautifying their grounds. The committee is so much in earnest that it is meeting all expense of prosecutions.

Chicago's fifty-five miles of boulevard will now be joined in one unbroken chain, the missing link on Michigan avenue being voted by the city council, July 14th, in the form of a two-level bridge costing $7,000,000. It is an important part in carrying out the plan to beautify the city and calls for the widening of Michigan avenue from Randolph street to East Chicago avenue. The upper level of the bridge will be for boulevard traffic and pedestrians and the lower one for other traffic.

The plant growers are having their quiet time, so far as sales are concerned, but are getting ready for the fall and winter trade. There are no blooming plants to be had. Fancy-leaved caladiums and crotons lend a little color for window decorations, supplemented by the green and white foliage of Pandanus Veitchii, aspidistra and Dracaena Massangeana and backed up by the ever necessary ferns and palms. Boston ferns, always scarce here in the summer, are unusually so this year. Cherries and Christmas peppers, so popular since the improved sorts have been in, are now calling for their share of attention. Among the best new additions are the New Cluster, sent out last year. There is a new type of that on the market this year for the first time, having a branching habit of growth and distinguished by having the fruit well above the foliage, a decided advantage. Solanum Melvinii, the form of Jerusalem cherry from Boston, carries the fruit well above the foliage. Both this and the peppers have smaller fruit than the old types, are brilliant in coloring and do not drop fruit or foliage. Fine stock of both are seen at Frank Oechslin's. Orders are being filled rapidly for the plants, without which Christmas would scarcely be Christmas with the retail florist.

Visitors: John Young, N. Y., on his way to Minneapolis, Minn.; H. L. Hill, Maquato, Iowa; Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Ellsferman, Evansville, Ind.; Herman Holtz, Hammond, Ind.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

All but about three of the downtown establishments are now closed at 1 o'clock on Sundays and this hour will be observed throughout the summer months.

A number of local merchants have complained to the police that their stores have been entered by thieves. Some one broke into the store of F. H. Kramer at 722 Ninth street, N. W., forcing the rear door, and ransacked the place, although obtaining nothing for his trouble.

The vacation season finds many of the clerks in the stores away or planning extensive trips. Walter Hawley and Lewis Holman, with Gude Bros., are in New York; Raymond Garrett, who is connected with O. A. C. Oehmler, is in Mannassas, Va. Fred H. Kramer and Adolph Gude are preparing for their trip abroad with the Minute Men of America in the fall.

Plans are progressing for a joint outing of the Bowling Club of the Florists Club of Washington and the Kallipolis Grotto, to be held at Chesapeake Beach on August 5. Among other features will be a circus on the Boardwalk which will prove a great attraction, and there will also be the usual athletic events. The local people will be joined by the members of the Baltimore Gardeners' and Florists' Club and their friends, who will hold an outing on the same day.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

ST. LOUIS FLORIST CLUB.

The members of the St. Louis Florist Club spent a most delightful afternoon at the J. F. Ammann Co.'s plant at Edwardsville, Ill., on Thursday, July 10th. Some fifty members took advantage of the kind invitation of Mr. Ammann to hold their regular monthly meeting at his place.

The members arrived at the place at 2 o'clock. After an interesting tour of the greenhouses the meeting was called to order on the lawn under the big shade trees. The picnic committee reported everything in readiness and the weatherman had promised them good weather for the event.

State Vice-President Denker of the S. A. F., reported that the official route to the convention will be the Streckfus steamboat line and The Quincy, the boat which leaves Thursday, August 14th, arriving Monday, August 17th, at St. Paul, the fare to be $28, $32 and $35, according to location of staterooms.

H. C. Irish and F. Robinson reported on the flower show. The preliminary list is ready and was accepted by the members and a committee of 20 were appointed to raise this fund among the local florists.

Nomination of officers then took place. They were: W. J. Pilcher, C. C. Young and Edwin Denker for president; A. Janiecke and H. Blixen for vice-president; J. J. Beneke for secretary; W. C. Smith for treasurer; and F. Windler, M. Moran and C. Bergestermann for a three-year term of trustee. When the meeting adjourned Mr. Ammann announced automobiles were in waiting for the members to be taken on a tour of the city by the Edwardsville Automobile Club. On our return we found our meeting place turned into a banquet room. We drank to the health of Mr. Ammann and his company. A vote of thanks was extended for his hospitality and we surely spent the best afternoon in many years.

CHICAGO FLORIST CLUB.

The Chicago Florist Club held its regular meeting July 10th at Hotel La Salle. The Good of the Club committee reported, recommending a picnic at Eckhart's Grove, Park Ridge, August 31st. The recommendation was concurred in and the committee was given full power. The sports committee has purchased gloves, bats and balls, and are getting in fine shape for the ball game. The transportation committee reported that a number of letters were received from clubs and individuals stating that they would join the Chicago Florist Club at Chicago en route to the convention city, Minneapolis, next August, on Chicago Florist Club "Special de Luxe." A vote of thanks was also extended to Poehlmann Bros. Co. for excellent exhibit of carnations. Many letters of thanks from storm and flood victims who have received donations were received and read.

O. J. Friedman extended an invitation to the club to hold its next meeting at Sans Souci Park and same was accepted. Mr. Deamud was appointed as a committee of one to make all necessary arrangements for this meeting. It was decided to have the La Salle our permanent meeting place after the next meeting.

Ed. C. Toepel, Sec.

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

The annual picnic of the club will be held at Cunningham Park, East Milton, on Wednesday, July 23, 1913. The picnic grounds, which pleased everyone so much a year ago, are very beautiful. There is ample shade, suitable buildings and a splendid field for the sports, which latter will commence at 10 A. M., sharp.

Some of the special features this year will be the ladies' baseball game, obstacle race, fat man's race (limit, 185 pounds), half-mile race and several special contests for ladies. Members, their wives and families, can compete in the various contests. The picnic grounds are easily reached by either electric or steam cars, and a cordial invitation is extended to everyone, no matter whether connected with the club or not, to be present. A fine array of prizes has been secured as usual.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Business is at a standstill in Boston. The first ripple of the summer resort demand has been felt within a day or two past, however, and it is hoped that things will now begin to move once more. Carnations are scarce, the growers generally having thrown out their old plants. In roses Carnot, Taft, Cardinal and Killarney Queen are surprisingly good for this time of the year. Sweet peas are still in evidence but are running very small and poor. Lilies continue plentiful. There is a moderate sale for cattleyas. Plenty of gladioli, America standing at the head of the list. A few small asters are being received.

BUFFALO There is practically no business to speak of, though stock still continues to come in quite heavy, especially carnations, which show the affects of hot weather. Roses are gradually going down. Maryland, Kaiserin and Ward are the best. Beauties are in heavy supply and the demand is lacking. Sweet peas have again come on and a good supply is had daily. It is only a matter of the wholesaler carrying all the stock and the retailer buying as is needed.

CHICAGO There has been considerable business done the past week, in spite of the fact that mid-summer conditions prevail. Stock is none too plentiful in good grades. Auratum lilies are coming now and find ready sale at 8 and 10 cents, most of them at the latter price. There are fewer longiflorums than a few weeks ago and the demand is stronger. Lilies and peonies are the two large flowers upon which the retailers depend for large work. There are still some good late peonies in white and several shades of pink, the darkest of which is Late Rose, of almost American Beauty shade. Sweet peas are practically done for. Some short ones are in this week, looking very fresh for July. Carnations are fast coming to an end. This applies to the great bulk, but there are always a few good ones. Roses are extremely small, but of fair quality. American Beauties vary, some growers having fine stock grown from young plants. Lily of the valley is good for midsummer. Ferns are coming fast and prices low. It is predicted that peonies will be with us at least till August 1st. Festiva Maxima and Late Rose are apparently as strong as they ever were. Some of the wholesalers who handle quantities of peonies think growers will receive almost or quite as much for their crop this year as last, for though the May frost destroyed a large part of the crop, the balance brought better prices. Victoria is again proving itself the best keeper in light tints. Though classed as white, it shows some pale pink and has marks in center like "drop white." Sweet peas in and about Chicago are not doing well, owing to extreme heat and lack of moisture. Gladioli are coming in badly burned by the sun; in many cases the foliage is so discolored as to appear to be variegated.

CINCINNATI The florists are hustling on to their vacations and the general exodus would seem to indicate that they were rather anxious to get away from the worries of the present light market. The supply continues light while the call for stock is tolerably good. Roses have not as yet shown a very perceptible increase in supply. The gladiolus supply has not yet increased sufficiently to make an appreciable difference in the condition of the market for this flower. Giganteum lilies sell well but pond lilies are slow. Snapdragon in lighter colors is proving good property.

NEW YORK Summer apathy pervades all departments of the trade. Stock being received is very light but it is more than sufficient for all legitimate needs. Lilies are still very abundant and requiring forced sales to hold down the surplus. American Beauty also is over-supply. Small roses from young plants are unsalable. Sweet peas are about finished. Garden flowers of various descriptions are acceptable to the retail stores where they help to give a bit of color to the show windows and call attention to the fact that flowers may be had within. Early closing and vacations are the rule now.

PHILADELPHIA There was a little more snap to the market after the Fourth and its holidays had become history, and for the past week things have gone fairly satisfactorily. On comparison, the month's trading so far has not fallen behind last year. In some quarters the reports are that it has really been better. Gladioli dominate the market at present, both in quantity and quality. Long stems, plenty foliage, fine large flowers, splendid varieties like America, Mrs. Francis King, Princeps, Shakespeare, etc., all well worth a good price. The sales on these were excellent and notwithstanding the large supply very few went a-begging at the end of the week. Asters are improving and are now cutting quite some figure as the carnations wane. In the rose market American Beauty and Perle are holding their own, and they are probably the two oldest roses we now have alive, commercially. The square foot has killed off many of the old and charming favorites, among them the Niphetos, which we heard one of the old-timers bemoaning this afternoon. Sunburst is cutting some figure as a summer rose—in addition to Taft and Maryland, which we have so frequently commented on of late. Of course, good flowers in all lines, as might be expected (with probably the exception of gladioli and lilies) are the exception, and the great majority of receipts can not be classed anywhere among winter standards. Sweet peas are on their last legs. We will not have them with us much from now until the indoor stocks appear again. Cattleyas few and market sluggish. Lily of the valley rather on the scarce side with quality all that can be desired. More than enough of all kinds of greens. Just at present such items as sphagnum can be secured at quite a saving from regular rates. This is one among the many little tips to the wide-awake —which will more than pay their annual subscription to HORTICULTURE —and which HORTICULTURE so generously hands out from week to week —without charging a cent.

ST. LOUIS The market is not in a very prosperous condition, very little stock coming in, and the business is at a low point. Stocks of all kinds is poor, and about the only good flower that came in was Beauties and lilies. Gladioli are not as fancy as in former years, owing to the long dry spell. Sweet peas are poor in quality, still they have a good demand as so little else is coming in at present.

WASHINGTON Market conditions present nothing unusual. Business is quiet and the flowers that are coming in show the effects of the heat. The retailers are not carrying any larger stock than is absolutely necessary, being well able to have their wants filled by the wholesale houses. Lilies are good and the same applies to gladioli. Asters are beginning to make their appearance and with two-foot stems. Some little difficulty was experienced last week in obtaining orchids, for which there was some demand.

Secretary John Young, of the S. A. F., left New York on Saturday, July 12, bound for Minneapolis where he will now take up his official quarters until after the convention in August.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES.

Charles Sim of Rosemont sails for Europe on the 19th inst on a three-months' vacation.

M. Pappas has taken the store in the P. R. R. station at 32nd and Market street, lately occupied by W. Crawford.

P. Joseph Lynch of Newcastle, Indiana, is with us for a two week's visit. He reports that the floods of last spring cut into their three best weeks of spring.

Richard Umphried, whose sailing for Europe on the 12th inst., was announced in our issue of last week, surprised his friends that morning by getting married and taking the bride along with him.

Three steamers arrived on this side recently—the "Prinz Oscar," the "Frankfurt" and the "Taormina;" each with big shipments of the latest world creations in baskets and floral requirements—from the busy and clever fingers; from the highly trained and artistic designers of our friends and customers in the old world—and in this city one of the chief recipients was the "House of Rice." These new offerings they will soon show to the florists of the country for their profit, and for the delight of their customers.

Visitors: W. Siverling, Lancaster, Pa.; J. A. Newsham, New Orleans, La.; P. Joseph Lynch, Newcastle, Ind.; M. Henry Lynch, West Grove, Pa.

HOODOOED?

A message from Toledo, Ohio, brings rather sad news regarding the recent outing of the Florists. George Boyer fell in a running race and broke his nose, while in the same race Harry Heinle broke his big right toe. Frank Metz fell in a three-legged race and broke his collar bone. Thomas McGee was overcome while swimming and it took six people to revive him.

NEWS NOTES.

Salem, Mass. — Ettore Tassinare, who has been many years in charge of the greenhouses and grounds of the State Hospital at Danvers, has retired on a substantial pension.

Muncie, Ind.—It is reported that the Carnes Greenhouses, 1124 South Jefferson street, have been taken over by J. L. McKinley, who will operate them under the name of the South Side Floral Co.

"PEONIES FOR PLEASURE."

This book of "Peonies for Pleasure" gives information on peony history, soil and plants to use, how and when to plant, fertilizers and how to apply, and describes the most extensive planting of really valuable peonies ever gathered together under the sun; describes the old and new, as well as the plebeian and aristocrat of the peony family. If you want information on the plant that stands next to the rose in beauty, that is practically known to the amateur as simply a red, white and pink peony, then send for "Peonies for Pleasure."

We also issue a special wholesale price list of peonies for fall sales, 1913. Send for both of the booklets.

Obituary

Joseph Clarke.

We sorrowfully record the death on July 13 of this old-time gardener at his home in West Manchester, Mass.

Joseph Clarke was born in Ireland, December 21, 1835. He came to this country when 17 years of age. His tastes for horticulture, inherited from his father, a nurseryman, led him to enter that field of work. He took charge of the estate of Mrs. T. W. Ward at Canton, Mass., and very soon began to give evidence of his skill as a plantsman and general cultivator. He became a member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in 1865, but prior to that he had been winning prizes at the exhibitions of that Society, cups being in his possession dating back to 1858. He has been an active devoted member of the Society from that time until the day of his death. In the history of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, compiled by Robert Manning, Mr. Clarke's name is frequently mentioned as the exhibitor of new, rare or skillfully grown greenhouse plants, as well as strawberries, plums, etc. Bougainvillea spectabilis, now so generally known, was shown by him as a new and rare plant in 1865. In 1867 he is recorded as having made a superb exhibit of gloxinias, in 1869 the prize for best specimen flowering plant was given for his trained Rhyncospermum jasminoides and in 1872 the best specimen Indian azalea shown at Boston was his Princess Mary of Cambridge. He moved to Manchester, Mass., in 1882 where he spent the remaining active years of his life in laying out and planting the H. L. Higginson estate, noted as the most beautiful and romantic place on the famed North Shore. He helped organize the North Shore Horticultural Society and was its first president. Ten years ago he retired and devoted his remaining years to rest and the enjoyment of his home at West Manchester, where he was at all times ready to welcome with kindly hospitality any member of the craft who passed that way.

An old philosopher wrote: "It is a good thing to be rich and a good thing to be strong, but it is a better thing to be beloved of many friends." Joseph Clarke was beloved of everyone who knew him. He won the respect and affection of all by the nobility of his character and the simple integrity of his life. No truer man ever bore the title of gardener.

He leaves two daughters and one son, who is superintendent of the John E. Thayer estate at South Lancaster, Mass.

Mrs. Wm. R. Smith.

Mrs. Annie M. Smith, widow of the late William R. Smith, passed away last week at Mt. Hope, Baltimore, Md., and the body was brought to this city for interment at the Rock Creek cemetery beside that of her husband. Mrs. Smith was born in Colesville, Montgomery County, Md., in 1840, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fawcett, who came to this country some years before from Leeds, England. In her youth and middle age Mrs. Smith was a very brilliant woman. She had a host of friends and was a noted figure in this city. About twenty years ago she was affected with a mental disorder and was sent to an institution in Baltimore where she remained until the time of her death.

E. B. Sutton.

E. B. Sutton, at one time a noted violet grower of Babylon, N. Y., died in New York on Wednesday, July 16. Mr. Sutton gave up his business a number of years ago on account of impaired health. He was a gentleman of refinement, impulsively generous and companionable. Although out of business he has been during the years of his retirement an almost daily visitor among his old-time acquaintances in the 28th street wholesale district, to exchange a cheery word and admire the flowers, of which he was very fond.

J. C. Lewis.

John C. Lewis, who for a number of years held the position of City Forester, of Philadelphia, died suddenly at Tyrone, Pa., on July 9. He was 66 years old. Mr. Lewis formerly had charge of the public parks in Richmond, Va., and in March, 1896, was appointed City Forester, which position he held until one year ago, when he resigned. Mr. Lewis was a native of Hereford, England, and at one time had charge of the growing department of the rose nurseries of Robert Scott & Son at Passyunk avenue, Philadelphia.

Oliver H. Weldon.

Oliver H. Weldon, an old-time florist of New Britain, Ct., died at his home, 16 Black Rock avenue, July 7th, aged 71 years. He retired from the trade about seven years ago. A son and a daughter survive him.

The King Construction Company of North Tonawanda, N. Y., have received an order from Mr. J. P. Morgan, Jr., for the erection complete of an extensive range of glass houses at his country place, Glen Cove, L. I. The range comprises houses for fruits, vegetables, flowers and general plants. The houses will be King "channel bar" with curved glass eaves, a construction which is practically all iron and glass. All the lower parts of the houses, including the heating pipes, are to be of cast iron. The steel work supporting the glass is to be zinc plated. What little wood is used will be air-dried California redwood, the best and most durable wood for greenhouse work.

At the recent joint exhibition held at Newport, R. I., Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, were awarded the prize of $25 offered by The Garden Association and Newport Horticultural Society, also the silver medal for their general exhibit and five first class certificates, for five new Nympheas.

We are pleased to hear good reports from those of our readers who have tried the odorless natural manure advertised by the N. Y. Stable Manure Co. of Jersey City, N. J. As all growers know, there is nothing equal to the natural material for promoting fertility in greenhouse or field and this product seems to fill the bill in all particulars.

THE KROESCHELL GREEN HOUSE BOILER

WHAT THE USERS SAY

Kroeschell Versus Cast Iron

The No. 7 Boiler I bought from you is heating 14,000 sq. ft. of glass; I think it can take care of 16,000 ft. I do not have any trouble to keep up temperature of 50° in the coldest weather. I fire only once after 12 o'clock midnight. The boiler has given perfect satisfaction. I have four cast iron boilers—like the Kroeschell best of all. If anyone wishes to inquire about your boiler, let them write me, for I think your boilers are good ones.

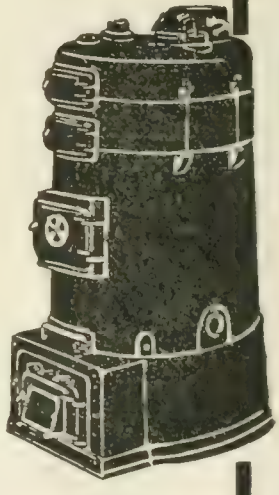
The Burnham

When you can buy a genuine greenhouse boiler made from top to bottom especially for greenhouse work—then why under heaven don't you buy it? What's the use of trying to make yourself believe that a boiler originally designed for residence heating can possibly give the height of economy for greenhouse work? You know the conditions are absolutely different. The residence boilers were designed to do heating with small pipes in a vertical position where rapid circulation is an easy thing.



Now put such a boiler to work in a greenhouse with horizontal piping and with a large mass of water to move and you have an entirely different proposition—the residence boiler has not the power to do it economically without forcing. And forcing a boiler means not only shortening its life, but you also drive a surprising amount of heat out the chimney. Heat that costs you hard dollars.

So go careful!

Make sure you are buying a Cast Iron Sectional Greenhouse Boiler made especially for greenhouse work.

The Burnham is that kind.

EXPECTATIONS

He who gets something for nothing gets nothing from something in return. There are a good many buyers of lily bulbs who expect good bulbs, but who don't pay the price for them in return. This class never average as high in returns as those buyers who pay a fair price. In any line of business a buyer must regulate his purchases by the general average of results and never by any one particular instance of profit or loss. Particularly in lily bulbs must a buyer secure only the best, as the proportion of cost of bulbs to percentage of profit is such as to make that initial cost a secondary consideration. Every lily grower of experience knows it does not pay to gamble with uncertain brands—and that there is one brand which is almost always absolutely dependable—and that brand is Horseshoe Brand—the finest lily bulbs in the World. NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Aspidistras

Now when most florists have lots of room in the houses, it would be a good plan to start and propagate a good batch of aspidistra, as they are bound to come in very useful. They are propagated by dividing the clumps of old plants. Break up these densely grown clumps, leaving two or three leaves with each piece. For these divided aspidistras you can use 4 or 5-inch pots. These plants soon start off and make lots of strong roots so give them a good rich compost of fibrous loam three parts, well rotted cow manure one part. When they are potted up place in a house where they can be shaded and kept rather close and they will soon start new roots. When they begin to fill their pots with roots they should be given ventilation and just enough shading to keep the leaves from scorching as a dense shade is very detrimental.

Camellias

Camellias should now be advancing well in growth. Give special care in ventilation as these plants will want all the air possible now. Go over the plants and turn them around about every ten days and as they may need it give more room between them to admit plenty of light and air. Give a good syringing mornings and right after dinner-time as it greatly helps to encourage an increased and vigorous growth. Examine the plants two or three times a day so none of them will remain in a dry state for any length of time. These plants will need a thin shade to protect them from the direct influence of the sun.

Care of Dahlias

Dahlias have become general favorites among the millions. Where large and strong plants were planted out and the soil kept thoroughly stirred every week between the plants they should now be in fine state to stand a dry spell. They should never be allowed to suffer from drought. When they begin to show buds they will be greatly benefited by a thorough watering once a week during the continuance of a drought. These artificial watering should be followed the next day by a cultivation that stirs the soil to a depth of 1½ to 2 inches. To help your plants to do their utmost in flowering, give them broadcast dressing of some fertilizer that is rich in ammonia, phosphoric acid and potash. Pure bone meal four parts, to one part of nitrate of soda, makes an excellent thing for a top-dressing.

Sowing Schizanthus

These plants are now becoming very popular subjects when well grown. Where you intend to have a nice batch for early winter flowering now is the time to make a sowing. Take pains to obtain the best strain of seed in the market. For a compost mix equal parts of new loam and leaf mold with a good sprinkling of sand. Fill pans with this compost and give a good watering some little time previous to sowing the seed. Cover the seed very lightly, finishing by pressing the surface of the soil even all over. Place under a cold frame and shade until the young seedlings begin to appear when they should have full sun. When large enough to handle prick or pot off. When they have filled their pots with roots keep on shifting until they reach a 6 or 7-inch pot. For these shifts give a good rich mixture, say two-thirds fibrous loam to one-third of well-decayed cow manure. Keep them pinched freely which will produce nice compact plants. This pinching can be kept up until October.

Winter Flowering Stocks

Seed that was sown in June will make fine stock for flowering during the winter months. They should now be doing fine in 2 or 3-inch pots. The best way to handle these plants is to keep on shifting until they are in 5-inch pots. For a compost use turfy loam three parts, to one part of well-decayed cow manure. From now and up to the middle of October there is no better place for them than a cold frame. See that they are placed on some coal ashes which always remains in a cool state. Keep them sprayed morning and afternoon and keep an eye to ascertain the condition of the soil as they should never be allowed to become too dry at the roots. It will be necessary in order to keep clear of greenfly, to fumigate at least every ten days. Late in the fall they will show their buds and you can then distinguish the singles from the doubles. The single buds are always long and pointed, while the double ones are short and stubby so you can discard the single ones as they may appear.

Watering Late Asters

To ensure a fine crop of flower on late asters, they should not be allowed to suffer during dry spells. To expand their flowers on good strong stems with good foliage they will want large quantities of water at their roots during any prolonged droughts. Before these waterings, give a good dusting of high-grade fertilizer sown between the plants. This will assist them materially in the production of fine flowers. Give them frequent cultivation which will tend to hold the moisture better.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Cattleyas; Care of Smilax; Mulching and Feeding Chrysanthemums; Poinsettias In Pans; Propagating Crotons; Repairing Heating Apparatus.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur C. Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Roses for Flowering Outside

Our Killarneys, Radiance, etc., planted outside for flowering during the summer months are fairly off crop now. It is better thus, as that insures a nice crop for the fall, for which the plants should be prepared now. Cut off all the old blossomed-out flower stubs and trim the plants out a little wherever it may be necessary. Then hoe the plants well, making sure you get all the weeds. After that it is advisable to apply a good dressing of bonemeal, followed by a mulch of manure. If manure is not to be had, let it be a mulch of any coarse material that may be easy and cheap to get. Marsh hay is as good as anything, no doubt better as it is much cleaner, and the wind does not bother it so much. Apply as much water as the plants will take, and you will be surprised at the quantity and quality of the flowers you will receive for your trouble.

Mulching

Some of the early-planted houses, and benches that have been run over for another year, will do much better if mulched very lightly. Not so much to feed the plants, but to keep the soil in the benches cool, and thus protect the fine little rootlets that the plants are busy sending out in search of food and moisture. These new roots are very tender, and the direct heat of the sun's rays on the soil in the bench will kill a large number, especially if the soil should be allowed to become dust dry accidentally as is bound to happen even with the good care that is given the plants. We find it the best to keep the plants continually growing, especially Beauties, although we would never advise forcing them in the least, as this would make them less vigorous for the next winter, when it will be necessary to force them. It is well to remember that if the plants are checked, once, it will take a long time for them to recover. It is very likely that the plants would never fully recover.

Disbudding

A very important item that must not be overlooked at this time of the year (or any other time for that matter) is disbudding—with Beauties more so than with other varieties, for if the buds are not pinched out in time, and are allowed to grow and open on the plants, it means just so much energy absolutely wasted. To prove this to yourself, take two buds just forming, pinch one out and let the other grow and open, and fall off and then cut the stub away. You will soon see which plant will be further advanced, whether the one disbudded in time or one allowed to form a bud and bloom out. In disbudding Beauties take all the buds with two leaves, or to speak plainer take the tip of the shoot with the bud, down to a good eye. This will insure a good strong break, which otherwise would no doubt be of a weak nature. Right here is another little point not to be overlooked. Do not pinch out the bud too close to the eye that is to be the coming break. If the shoot is too close, the break will come very weak and will not amount to much. Another important part in disbudding Beauties is to be sure and remove all surplus breaks from the bottom. Four breaks to a plant are all that are needed, and all that will be necessary to insure a good stand of growth. Strong vigorous plants, planted in good soil have a habit of breaking from every eye from bottom to the top. As soon as a bud is pinched out all these breaks should be removed save two on top, selecting the two strongest and most promising ones. All this work must be done as soon as the shoots begin to show, for if they are allowed to remain even a little while, they take considerable strength from the plant, which would otherwise all run into the two shoots proper, giving them the benefit of all the energy the root can send up, which amounts to a good deal, for the roots are very busy little bodies and it is surprising what wonderful work they will do if given half a chance.

This all seems like an extra large amount of work, and many will say it is all "bosh" or "rot" or some of the terms which written articles are called by the different critics, but we have proven that it pays, as the number of special Beauties cut from one plant well cared for was over five besides all the shorter stuff, and the total cut from plants allowed to grow as they will, was little over two specials per plants. A great contrast indeed.

Distance for Beauties

Many may have shook their heads when we spoke of planting American Beauties two feet apart in the rows on the benches, the rows being eleven inches apart. And yet we found the plants so planted cut fully as many roses as those set nearer together, and if there was a difference it was in favor of plants spread out more. However the house so planted looks skimpy for a while and we think twenty inches is the proper distance for Beauties. At any rate there is absolutely nothing in crowding the plants, as the more they are crowded the less flowers will they produce, and the more difficult it will be to care for them properly. This applies especially to syringing the plants, for the closer they are together the harder it will be to keep them clean.

Good Management

It is surprising the number of places that are being run at a tremendous expense, all because of a little outlay that would be necessary to put the place into some sort of a shape so it could be handled with the least expense. Those happy-go-lucky days are over and the grower who will receive good returns on his investment will be the one that keeps pace with times and does away with all the old-fashioned narrow zigzag houses that still exist here and there. The price paid for operating these old houses for five years would almost build an equal area of up-to-date large house construction, that would bring double the interest on the investment, compared to the old tumble-down houses. There is proof enough in the fact that new men starting out for themselves with one new large greenhouse, rapidly grow to own a nice establishment, where the man who has been at it for

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

George H. Penson

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Penson. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Pot Vines

About the first of August is an ideal time to commence ripening up the pot vines for forcing next winter. Presuming they are at present growing in a young vinery or other suitable house, let them be transferred to an outside position where they will have the full sun and weather. This will ripen up the wood, making the buds quite firm by fall. Half-ripened cane is never so productive as one that is ripened well. It will be necessary to provide shade for these young vines for a time if they have been shaded, either by growing vines or shading on the glass, or the foliage will burn. Not only is the sun's power to be reckoned with but the air will be considerably dryer than that they have just come from, which makes a greater strain on the foliage until it has got accustomed to the new atmosphere. A double thickness of cheese cloth tied to stout poles on the south side of the vines will answer the purpose; they will then get the early morning and late afternoon sun which will be the first stage of receiving the full sun. After a few days of this reduce the thickness of cheese cloth to one, taking this up a little earlier each evening and leaving it correspondingly late in the morning before putting it on, until it can be dispensed with altogether. Keep the vines well watered all this time and also for the remainder of the season, syringing them twice daily. We find it is a big advantage to place the pots in a straight row from east to west and have strong stakes drove in the ground at intervals of twelve feet, stretching a piece of wire on to these and tying the canes to it which prevents them from being broken by the wind and rain.

Watering

Those fruit houses that have finished their crop and are now staying wide open right along will be found to dry out very quickly. See that they do not want for water. Continually syringing the trees or vines will often keep the surface soil looking half dry; this is not enough for some time yet. Any trees that may be in a draught through leaving doors, etc., open in an endeavor to keep the house as cool as possible will dry out quicker than the others in the same house. See they all get a thorough soaking when they are watered. At no time during the growth of any tree should a little water be given,—that is, when the object is watering. There are times when we have given them just enough to water in some feeding when a watering is not needed; in such a case just enough to answer the purpose is all that is needed, but a note must be made of this or it will be deceiving later on.

Damping

Damping should be done at the accustomed regular times in all houses until along in the late fall. Do not get slack on this because the crop has been cut and there seems little to bother about. Damping plays just as important a part now as it did in the earlier stages of growth. Grapes hanging ripe at this time of year will stand more moisture around them than at any other time.

Vacation

It is with pleasure that we all look forward to vacation time, with its many and varied pleasures, each individual choosing his or her own way of recuperating for the strain of another year. It is the season of "cast care aside" and forget the business, with the majority, but how often do we find gardeners making a pleasure of their business even during a vacation. Such men are so truly wrapped up in their business that it becomes a pleasure. To such men work is not a bore during the other part of the year. From a physical standpoint should we labor on through this, our time of ease? as labor it is,—although we take pleasure in laboring—or should the mind as well as body be given a rest? Some will say they know acquaintances that could not rest away from it, which is so, and makes the whole question very complicated when we discuss it technically. Let every one drink of the fountain that is most refreshing to them and so shall they receive the greatest amount of benefit.

August is one of the slackest months in the fruit department (and a good vacation month, too). After the rush of the spring, often in sweltering houses, vacations feel good and are a benefit to employer as well as employee, for a man returns to work greatly invigorated and when that time comes again in the spring when work looms up big on every side there is one bright spot in the distance—a vacation to look forward to.

Mr. Penson calls attention to a rather indefinite note in his contribution of last week. In reference to benches, where sides or bottoms may need renewing he meant to say, "it is very annoying to have to stop to repair these when the bench is emptied out during the winter and the weather is good, so that it could be filled in again without delay, if it were not for the repairs."

years before they ever dreamed of starting, is in practically the same place as he was, making little headway with his old poorly-built houses.

A Word to Beginners

Many holding a position at a good salary will figure that they could do better for themselves. All well and true. Capital is needed, and take our advice and do not think of buying second-hand greenhouses standing, to be taken down and rebuilt. Such houses have to be gotten almost for nothing to be worth bothering with. There are firms who make a business of buying old houses, but they are well experienced in that line, have all the necessary tools and can therefore make a good quick job of taking down the house. Once in a while a nice place can be rented. This is very seldom, for any place that can be made to pay will be in operation by the owners regardless of old age, death, sickness, and many other reasons given for selling. In the end it will pay to start with a new outfit if at all possible.

Relaxation

Our news columns at this season of the year reflect the condition of inactivity that for a brief midsummer interim pervades most of the departments of the industries which this paper aims to serve and tales of picnics and various pastimes and news of lighter vein generally are perused by many who, for the remainder of the year, have neither time nor inclination for frivolous matters. No harm is done if even the boys and girls long past maturity break loose and romp, momentarily forgetting that "years steal vigor from the limb" and ignoring the retribution of sunburned skin and sore muscles that is sure to follow their frolic, for true it is that

"Life's enchanted cup but sparkles near the brim."

A reminder and a duty

The death of the widow of William R. Smith, recorded in our issue of last week, closes the final chapter in the story of a life, the most touching side of which was known to but few. Only to those very close to him did the uncomplaining old gardener confide the burden of sorrow he carried, day and night, ever since the time nearly a quarter of a century ago, when his beloved wife had to be sent away, suffering from an incurable mental affliction. The isolation of his domestic life, the natural yearning of his sympathetic soul for companionship and his constant solicitude regarding the provisions for his wife's comfort should she survive him, make a very pathetic picture as we look back in contemplation. How, in his loneliness, he took the welfare of the Society of American Florists to his heart and for eleven years, in the face of almost insurmountable obstacles, devoted his time and means, his energy and brilliant ability, to secure for that organization the coveted national charter, we all know. No man ever more truly merited a memorial which shall record his worth and the gratitude of the profession he so conspicuously honored. We hope that the appeal of the committee entrusted with the duty of soliciting donations for the erection of a fitting memorial to this grand old man of horticulture at the National capital may meet with a generous and hearty response. Now is the time to zealously push the project to completion.

An aspersion

We have noticed quite frequently of late in some florists' window or in the illustrated contents of some paper, crude exhibits purporting to represent "the old-fashioned bouquet," "the kind they made in grandmother's days," etc. Apparently the idea intended to be conveyed by these contraptions is that a lace-paper collar with a clumsy mass of short-stemmed and mutilated flowers crowded in the centre represents the limit of floral taste on the part of the florists of that somewhat indefinite period called "grandmother's time." Those who are old enough to have known something of the conditions as they then existed are well aware that there was plenty of inartistic botchery done in those days but probably no more of it proportionately than we may see at the present time, for the incompetent we have with us always. One does not need to go far in any part of the country to get a full realization of the crimes that are daily perpetrated in the name of floral art. But neither the constructions called bouquets by the old-time botchers nor the uncouth contrivances called "designs" by the same class now-a-days can be said to fairly represent the standard of floral decorative skill in either epoch. Indeed, the old-time florist, if he was worthy of the name, often displayed exquisite dexterity in the making of the old-style formal hand bouquet, the arranging of which is almost a lost art today. We do not wish to be understood as advocating those prim methods of floral work. We simply enter our protest horticulture at the National Capital may meet with a of the best taste and skill of the men who laid the foundations of the florists' business.

Obituary

Patrick McGovern.

Patrick McGovern, a Brooklyn florist, who had been in business in the vicinity of Greenwood Cemetery for 35 years, died on Thursday, July 17, at his home, 122 Prospect Park West, in his 71st year. His wife, two sons and four daughters survive him.

Joseph M. Gleason.

J. M. Gleason, well-known in the seed trade, passed away on Sunday evening, July 20, after a very brief illness. He left his place of business in Boston on Thursday evening in apparently good health and was taken sick on Friday morning. The trouble was intestinal and on Sunday an operation was decided upon as the only possible means of saving his life and he was taken to the hospital but the effort was futile.

Mr. Gleason had been in the seed business for many years, having been with the Allan Seed Company of New York, with Everett & Gleason, of Boston, with Schlegel & Fottler Co., of Boston, for over 20 years, being treasurer of the latter company for many years, and at the time of his death was treasurer of the Thomas J. Grey Co., of Boston. He was 69 years of age. He is survived by his widow and two sons.

J. M. Gleason was a gentleman, quiet and unpretentious in manner, suave and courteous to everybody—always the same under any and all circumstances. He was highly respected in the trade, a good evidence of this fact being the closing of every seed store in Boston during the time of the funeral services, 2 to 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

Julius Roehrs.

Death has again been making some awful devastation in the ranks of horticulture. In the passing away of Julius Roehrs an irreparable loss has been sustained. He was, in truth, a great man. None but a great man could have built up from small beginnings the splendid establishment and far-reaching business at Rutherford, N. J., noted all over the world for its product.

The founder of this company, who has now gone to his eternal rest after a long period of failing health, was born in Hamburg, Germany, in 1844. After serving for three years in the Botanical Gardens at Kiel, Holstein, he went to Erfurt and Dresden, where he added to his technical and practical knowledge and then in 1865 to America, where he first found employment as gardener for Mr. Lienan, Jersey City, N. J. Mr. Lienan decided to return to Germany three years later and Mr. Roehrs took over the greenhouses and began business as a florist. He also erected greenhouses at Jersey City Heights and five years later moved his entire business there, and soon became well-known in New York and elsewhere for his splendid hybrid perpetual roses, forced into bloom for the winter and spring cut flower trade. A few years thereafter he moved to Rutherford, N. J., where he acquired a large tract of land and gradually laid the foundations for the immense ranges of glass devoted to orchids, palms, stove plants, Easter plants, and other high-class florists' material. In 1877 he married a German lady, Miss Schroeder, and they had seven children, five sons and two daughters, the two eldest sons, Julius, Jr., and Edouard, being associated with him in the company incorporated a few years ago.

Mr. Roehrs has been a sufferer from that insidious disease popularly known as hardening of the arteries for some time past and went to Italy a few months ago, accompanied by his wife, in the hope of obtaining some relief, but failing rapidly and there being no possibility of recovery he was brought home and death came Sunday, July 20, the immediate cause being given as bronchitis.

One of Julius Roehrs' great services to commercial horticulture was his enterprising spirit which led him to experiment constantly on new things and new methods. He was far-seeing and optimistic but, after testing anything out and finding it lacking, he would become a conservative of conservatives.

JULIUS ROEHRS.

At his home he was cordial and hospitable, fond of congenial company, but first, last and always a keen-witted and astute business man.

A WELLESLEY HOME.

On Tuesday, July 22, the Garden Committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society visited, on invitation, the estate of David R. Craig at Wellesley, Mass. The visitors were delightfully entertained by their host, who conducted them all over his place which is a model rural home. Located on an eminence a splendid view of the surrounding country is obtained, well wooded hills, valleys and neatly kept fruit and vegetable gardens making an ever-attractive landscape. Mr. Craig's place is well furnished with fine woods and shrubbery plantations, flower gardens and kitchen gardens and is a typical New England garden lovers' home. So agreeable did the visitors find the atmosphere that it was well along in the evening before they started reluctantly on their return to the city.

HYDROCYANIC GAS FOR MEALY BUG AND BLACK FLY.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

Dear Sir:—I would like to ask whether any reader of HORTICULTURE has had any experience with Hydrocyanic Acid Gas in graperies, for mealy bug; whether it would be liable to injure fruit in any stage and what strength could be used? Any information on this subject will be thankfully received.

Respectfully yours,
Massachusetts. G. W. W.

Replying to G. W. W., would say with regard to use of Hydrocyanic Acid Gas in graperies for mealy bug, that for a dormant grapery I have had good success by use of the following formula, viz.: One ounce cyanide, two ounces sulphuric acid and four ounces of water for each 1000 cubic feet of space, and exactly one-half the above formula when the berries have taken their first swell. By this time the foliage is sufficiently hardened, so that no injury will result. The cyanide is especially effective when used in the early stages of forcing before buds swell, using major formula. The bugs crawl out as warmth is applied and are easily exterminated and each one killed represents a whole colony. I also find one-half ounce of cyanide, one ounce sulphuric acid and two ounces of water for each 1000 cubic feet of space very efficacious in killing black fly on violets without the slightest injury to flower or foliage.

Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston.

The Grand Annual Picnic of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston came off as scheduled, on Wednesday, July 23, the usual happy group of ladies and children being present and the interest in the various games well maintained. President Wm. J. Kennedy made a model ringmaster and with his several associates on the various committees, judges, umpires, etc., worked hard and successfully and everything was done with a system and promptness that did great credit to all. In the absence of Peter M. Miller, attending the funeral of Mr. Gleason, W. N. Eaton of the Cunningham Gymnasium officiated as starter and in the absence of W. N. Craig, nursing a case of lumbago, J. R. Ness made an efficient clerk.

Walter Mott's Reflections on the Picnic.

The game of baseball between the married and single ladies was most exciting. Billy Cahill was referee and assisted by some of the rising stars he rendered excellent service and although the game was decided in favor of the single, the married ladies opined that in the long run they would win. No one disputed this. Arthur Griffin, one of the interested spectators was overheard to remark that he would hate to return home late at night were one of the wielders of the bat his better half.

While owing to unpreventable circumstances many old time attendants were absent, it was a representative crowd that fraternized with each other. The best side of one's nature is seen and many friendships formed that are impossible otherwise particularly among the younger element.

Fred C. Green, superintendent of Parks at Providence, was heard to remark that such a gathering would be a grand thing for his fellow-craftsmen, who so seldom see each other especially since the flower market was abandoned.

The Lancaster County Florists' Club.

Tuesday July 15th was picnic day for this club and about 125 of us left Lancaster, 8 A. M., for Hershey and a day's recreation. The out of town guests were S. S. Pennock, Mr. Bailey and Max A. Fierstein of Philadelphia: Mr. and Mrs. James Brown of Coatsville and Percy Bernard of Chester Co.

Any ride through Lancaster County is interesting from both a pictorial and an agricultural point of view and always enjoyable. Purely nature lovers were regaled while going through the mountains at Penryn Park. The iron ore mines and works in the vicinity of Lebanon were a revelation to many and the ride from Lebanon to Hershey through the Lebanon Valley was not without interest.

Arriving at Hershey, 10 A. M., we were taken in charge by Mr. Haverstick who has full charge of the floral and landscape work in and around Hershey. The park surrounding the works first attracted our attention and we were then taken through the factory itself where about fourteen carloads of chocolate candies and chocolate and cocoa are shipped out every day of the week excepting Sunday. There are about twenty three acres of floor space and fourteen hundred employees at work here, but this was a side issue with us and we were then conducted to the residence about a mile distant, the whole one continuous landscape effect rivaling the best in the country.

At the residence we grouped faithfully for two pictures but sad to relate both were failures, the first no doubt through the reflection of the sun from the President's bald head and the second supposedly from trying to get S. S. Pennock's full length focused on the plate.

After a sumptuous dinner we all went to the Hershey Park and Picnic grounds where boating, swimming, dancing and all other imaginable picnic sports were the order of the day.

To properly settle their noon lunch a number of real sports indulged in a game of baseball, with Elmer Weaver of Ronks as umpire and W. B. Girvin of Leola as star batter. Stunts were pulled off that can never be seen in any of the National League games. Any ball that was within four feet of the plate was called a strike, and Girvin's home run hit was knocked thirty feet from the plate by actual measurement and dropped by each base player successively until he reached home in safety. Of course we could not blame our out-of-town players for a few errors as they were not used to Lancaster County base ball.

In the bowling best out of three games it narrowed down to our treasurer, Harry Rohrer, Elmer Weaver and the president, A. M. Herr and Mrs. A. M. Herr, the latter winning out with strikes and spares and some sixty pins to the good, Mr. Weaver felt so badly being beaten by a woman that he rolled a consolation game all by himself and made a score of 171. Dancing was at a discount, but sliding down the cellar doors was an allurement that even some of the dignified aristocrats could not resist.

The run home was made in the cool of the evening and fittingly ended a very pleasant day.

August 21st will find us seriously discussing the Aster proposition with an exhibit connected with it. Ye Aster experts note the date.

ALBERT M. HERR.

St. Louis Florist Club.

This long looked for event took place on Thursday, July 17th, at Romona Park. It was the largest crowd that ever attended a picnic given by the St. Louis Florist Club. Two much credit cannot be given the club's trustees. A splendid band of music was on hand mostly for the benefit of the younger folks, who spent most of the day in the dance hall. At 3 o'clock the crowd was estimated at 400 and the committee on games started their work at the upper end of the park—and the following persons connected with the trade in some way won the different events:—

K. Ogle and Joe Hauser won 1st and 2nd in 50-yard race. Henry Emunds and W. Ogle won the time-walking match. Misses Potter and Rienecke won the young ladies' race of 30 yards. The little girls' race, 15 years and under, was won by Miss H. Emunds, and T. Nighwander, G. Cerny and J. Roehn won the boys' race, 16 years and under. K. Ogle won the shot-putting contest, throwing the shot 36 feet. Mrs. Patton 1st in the ladies' ball-throwing contest; Miss Spiegel 2nd. Oliver Sanders and Al. Gumz 1st and 2nd in the hop, step and jump contest. The ladies' tug-of-war, fifteen on a side, was one of the features on the programme. Mrs. Faber's team beat Mrs. C. Beyer's team after a hard pull. The finding of the shoe, for small boys, was amusing. A. Flanagan won 1st and Cluet Faber 2nd. Geo. Walbart's novelty race, for ladies, brought out a field of 45, the winners being Miss Wacher and Mrs. F. Fillmore, Jr. Girls' novelty race was won by Paula Emunds with Miss Kuhleman 2nd. Ladies' egg and spoon race, Mrs. W. J. Pilcher 1st and Mrs. O. Kuehn 2nd. The men's tug-of-war brought out great excitement, and when Jules Bourdet's French team bucked Geo. B. Windler's German team the Germans won after a 10-minutes' hard pull. The St. Louis Seed Co., the Schisler Grain Co. and the Schisler-Cornell Seed Co. held a guessing contest with jars of beans. The winners in this were Mrs. J. Hauser, Miss Engel, W. J. Meyer, J. H. Baracher, Ella Lippert, L. Meuser and A. Cerny.

After a good dinner the older folks gave way to the younger ones, who stayed until late hours, when all went home and will long remember the day.

Cincinnati Florists' Society.

At the picnic last Thursday, the following were the winners in bowling: 1st, Ben George, Jr.; 2nd, J. Van Welke; 3rd, A. C. Heckman, Jr.

The team captained by A. C. Heckman, Jr., and composed of A. C. Heckman, Jr., Chas. Windram, Roy Murphy, Alex. Ostendarp, Ed. Murphy, Roy Harkman, R. Jennings, Chas. Garvey and Linfoot, won 10 to 3.

BODDINGTON'S "QUALITY" CHRISTMAS-FLOWERING

SWEET PEAS

WE ARE SUPER-HEADQUARTERS

All true stocks of Winter-flowering Sweet Peas will be scarce this season. Some varieties are a total failure owing to the exceptional season in California this Spring. Our advice to intending planters is to order at once.

Mr. Wm. Sim, Cliftondale, Mass., the great Winter Sweet Pea Specialist, sows our seed almost exclusively.

Our stocks of Christmas-flowering Sweet Peas have stood the test for years, and we can refer you to the largest growers of this increasing popular flower, as to the trueness and quality of our seed, earliness of blooming period and strength and habit of plants.

The following varieties are the "best by test" including Zvolanek's and our own introductions, grown for seed, from selected stocks by the leading California grower and specialist in Sweet Peas.

Our output last year was nearly 3000 lbs. No kicks and plenty of testimonials as to quality, germination and trueness to type.

ARTHUR T. BODDINGTON, Seedsman, 342 West 14th St. NEW YORK

NEWS FROM THE CONVENTION CITY.

Minnesota State Horticultural Society.

Forty-seven years ago at the state fair held at Rochester Minn, a dozen enthusiastic horticulturists got together and organized the Minnesota State Horticultural Society. This organization has held annual and most of the years semi-annual meetings ever since and has steadily increased in members and influence until the past few years the membership has been approximately 3000. Of this number about 300 are life members, the rest paying an annual fee of $1.00 each. Like most of the state horticultural societies of the country, and especially those of the northern states, the society is supported by the state to such extent as is necessary in addition to the amount received from membership dues.

Of the twelve members who organized the society the last one, Mr. Wyman Elliot, passed away a few weeks ago. There is a very limited number of the older members who joined the society a year or two after its organization still living, and one of these is A. W. Latham, secretary of the society who is holding the office now for the twenty-third year.

The society publishes besides its annual report a monthly magazine of forty pages, which medium of communication within the membership is found to be very helpful and strengthening to the organization. In this northwest country, with its peculiar climate and soil conditions there are many new problems to work out in horticulture, and especially in fruit growing, and the urgent necessity of their solution have something to do no doubt with the strength and vigor of this organization.

Acting under the advice of the State Horticultural Society the state a few years ago purchased a tract of land suitable for the purpose and has now in operation for some time in conjunction with the society a farm for the sole purpose of breeding new fruits adapted to local conditions. Many of these new fruits are now being distributed, and they are going largely to the members of the State Horticultural Society for testing. This fact is adding much to the general interest in the work of the society. While it is strictly a state organization yet it has been found advisable to accept memberships from adjacent states as a fraternal bond is found to be very helpful in prosecuting a work common to a much larger area than contained in the State of Minnesota.

The society has a fine library and well furnished suite of three offices in the Kasota building in the city of Minneapolis. The various bulletins on horticulture issued by the state experiment stations of the country and the government stations are to be found here readily accessible through the medium of card indexes. These offices are not confined to members of the society alone but are open to the public also, and are quite generally used as the means of securing horticultural information as regards any part of the country.

SEED TRADE

Crop Reports.

A report of crop conditions and prospects for 1913 harvest has been received from L. Daehnfeldt, Odense, Denmark, under date of June 24, 1913. In general, it appears from this report that the mild winter was favorable to most varieties, but a severe drought in the spring, accompanied by attacks of insects, did more or less damage. June was well supplied with rain, but much is still dependent on the weather conditions of the remaining summer months.

Beets show a low germination and will be a short crop. Early varieties of cabbage are also short, but the later varieties are somewhat better, although also below average. All carrots are in good order and promise a satisfactory supply. Cauliflower is a fair crop, but with germination below normal. Mangels are slightly below average. The later sorts of peas are also below average but of the early varieties there is a full crop. Radishes were weakened by the wet weather, and will be a light crop. Spinach makes an excellent showing. Of turnips there are short crops of all varieties, particularly of rutabagas, which will be high in price.

Sweet and field corn, cucumbers and other vine seeds, are grown quite extensively on contract for seed purposes in South Dakota. A report just received states:

"This particular section (Yankton) has been favored with plenty of rain and sunshine, and all crops are looking good. Record of rainfall at this point: April 2.80, May 2.90, June 4.27, July, up to 17th, 1.52, equals for 3½ months 12.49 inches. Early sweet and field corn in tassel. Will probably have a surplus after filling contracts."

Notes.

Bloomington, Ill.—Funk Bros.' Seed Company have purchased land in St. Charles Parish, which they will use as a seed farm.

Burnett Bros., 72 Cortlandt St., New York, have leased the premises 98 Chambers St., consisting of five stories, basement and sub-basement. They will occupy the entire building, which will be ready for their occupancy september 1, 1913.

Lilium candidum in southern France is reported to be a practical failure. Those who want candidum bulbs will have to depend on the northern grown stock which, however, is not wholly a misfortune as this is much preferable to that grown in the south of France.

Chicago, Ill.—A. Henderson Co. have advices that the Dutch bulbs, especially hyacinths and narcissi, will not be up to usual standard of excellence. Orders will be filled complete as it is a question of quality rather than quantity. French bulbs, paper whites, freesias and Roman hyacinths, are now afloat and Lilium Harrissi are on their way from Bermuda.

ICE CHEST TALK.

To sell goods you must show them, and there are two ways of doing this—the right and the wrong way. When you receive a lot of new plants or some article you consider worth showing, you take special pains to give them an advantageous spot in the show window, but cut flowers that are kept in the ice chest are frequently neglected in this respect. Study the stock each morning and get an original arrangement for each day. A vase of cut flowers should look inviting and give the onlooker a fair idea of what they would look like were they standing on the dining room table or mantel.

Don't crowd the chest so full that it looks like a wholesalers' box. To spread out and show the stock properly use glass or even a cheap vase of pottery will answer very nicely, providing it holds two dozen roses, carnations or lilies, etc., as this number will usually show up better than one dozen or four dozen.

A loosely arranged chest where colors are kept togther, or colors are brought in harmony, will tempt anybody to select flowers to take home or send elsewhere, but a lot of flowers thrown into jars in fifties and carelessly placed, will hardly appeal to anyone.

Stands are always an important factor where height is required. To have a few dozen of these on hand is very convenient. Get a few strips of lumber, 3x4, planed on all sides and cut up in various lengths from fifteen to thirty inches long. Next get some pieces of cypress eight inches square and one inch thick, planed on both sides, and nail to top and bottom of the strips, making one end the bottom and one the table to set the vases on. Two coats of white or any other colors as preferred will finish the job at very little expense.

MR. STOREMAN.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES.

Miss Robinson of Dreer's who has been on the sick list for a week goes to Atlantic City for a rest on the 26th inst.

William F. Dreer has been recuperating at North East Harbor, Me., for the past two months. Latest reports announce a good improvement.

The sad news of the death of Julius Roehrs reached this city today (21st) and the expressions of sorrow are universal. He was a man among men and was liked and respected by everyone in this community who knew him—and their name is legion.

The Leo Niessen Co., wish us to state that our market report on the sweet pea crop last week was incorrect. We said that sweet peas were on their last legs. We still think so; but make our courteous bow to superior wisdom.

A visit to Norwood, Pa., finds the Craig place in perfect order and everything flourishing. Talk about color on crotons! Wonderful! But if they can't be grown there in that pure air and fine location by past masters in the art, they can't be grown anywhere. Cocos Weddeliana are magnificent.

Charles E. Meehan is moving this week from Germantown to his new house at Ocean City. This resort seems a favorite of the fraternity. George Burton is there at present; also Chas. Henry Fox, Alfred M. Campbell, E. J. Fancourt, J. Liddon Pennock, and others too numerous to mention.

George H. Cooke and William F. Gude of Washington, D. C., were the guests of Commodore Westcott at the Waretown villa on the 19th and 20th. Robert Craig and others helped to enliven the party. Passing through Philadelphia a visit to Norwood was in order—in which Samuel S. Pennock ably assisted.

Celery plants are a scarce commodity in the market at present in consequence of the dry weather. One dealer said, "why don't we grow more? Simply because last year we had two hundred thousand to throw away. We always have plenty when other people have plenty; and when other people haven't any we haven't any either."

Paul Huebner, landscape superintendent for the Reading system, has moved his evergreens from the old triangle in Philadelphia to Trenton Junction to escape the deadly oil deposits from the Midville steel works. In a few years from now the old location will likely be abandoned. Mr. Huebner's next headquarters will probably be at Ryers in the Cheltenham district. But, of course, nothing finally settled as yet.

You seem to have had quite a good Sweet Pea Convention and exhibition in Boston in spite of the season. Professor Beal's report is worthy of careful study and everyone should read this. Also George W. Kerr's carefully considered synopsis of the situation as it is up to the present minute. We hear much favorable comment in this locality on both these outgivings. Splendid work; and HORTICULTURE strikes a good keynote in advocating examining committees similar to those of the Chrysanthemum Society and others. Let the novelties run the gauntlet of public opinion before being disseminated. This would keep out a lot of "no-betters" and hold our swollen list within reasonable bounds.

We hear that Harry Bunyard is looking for a successor, but has failed so far to find anyone as good as himself for the secretary job—and so had to accept it for another year. Modest Harry! We suggest to him that he put a salary on the job, and he'd soon find them, a whole army, better than he—absolutely prepared to beat all records on any proposition. And, by jinks, they'd prove it too, to 75 out of 100 of our ordinary go as you please, non-thinkers. There is rich humor in Harry's offhand remark, and not the faintest suggestion of shirk in doing fine work and laborious work for nothing. And that's what differentiates him from the army which would loom up if there were a salary attached. Which brings me to what I wanted to say—three cheers for any glorious worker, who has worked and is working and will always work, not for his own emolument alone, but for the cause—the advancement of horticulture.

CHICAGO NOTES.

Wm. J. Smyth and family are at their summer home in Antioch, Ill.

Herbert Stone, head of the design department of A. Lange's, is having a trip to Michigan.

A. T. Pyfer and H. Philpott left July 21st for a lake trip to Mackinaw Island.

A. Miller and Guy Reyburn, of the A. Henderson Co. left for mid-summer trips, July 20th, the former going north and the latter west.

Fred Lautenschlager says that the July business done by the Kroeschel Bros. this year far exceeds that of any other July in the history of the firm.

Visitors: Frank Schaefer, Aurora, Ill.; Mr. Miller, of Austin Floral Co., Austin, Tex.; G. H. Thomas, Traer, Iowa; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Balluf, Indianapolis, Ind.

Mr. and Mrs. Tim Matchen will spend the first half of August in the South, visiting all the principal cities. Mr. Matchen is store manager for Peter Reinberg.

At Poehlmann Bros.' supply department their large catalogue is well under way and they hope to complete it by August 1st. This firm will have a space in the exhibition hall at Minneapolis, Minn.

The Farmers' and Florists' Tankage Fertilizer Co. have secured the services of T. T. Clark on their city salesforce. Mr. Clark was receiver for E. H. Hunt and formerly that firm's bookkeeper and the fertilizer people have secured a good as well as a popular man to represent them.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON A light supply in general, together with a constantly augmenting call from the summer resorts is giving a fairly firm tone to this market. There are no carnations to speak of but asters are beginning to come into the ring and they are bringing fine prices for the quality offered. "Summer" roses are in their glory and they sell satisfactorily. There are lots of gladioli and plenty of lilies. But nobody is perspiring in the effort to develop commerce and so the goods sell if they are needed—otherwise they stay in cold storage.

BUFFALO There is very little to report only that the cut flower market is still on the quiet side. There seems to be enough stock for the little business that is had, though the quality on roses and carnations is not of the best. The latter are shortening up considerably and it will be only a matter of a week or so that there will be but very few to be had. Asters have made their appearance though quality lacks. There are some gladioli, which have taken quite satisfactorily. Beauties are fairly good and lilies are good and plentiful. The wholesaler still continues to carry the stock and the retailer buys only what is necessary.

CHICAGO A good shipping trade has cleaned the market of all good stock during the past week and much more could have been used to good advantage had it been available. Carnations are practically out of the race except in very limited quantities, the few asters now in being insufficient to take the place of the carnations, but a decidedly larger supply of these is expected by Aug. 1st. New American Beauties are fine for July and there is no lack of buyers. All kinds of summer roses, the old standbys and the newer sorts, are to be had, good in quality and sufficient in quantity, and are perhaps the mainstay of the market at present. In lilies, longiflorum are now most in evidence and sell quickly. A few sweet peas are seen daily but it is out of season and stems are short. Lily of the valley is exceptionally good for midsummer and sales are keeping up well. Tuberoses have made their appearance but are rather small. Many of our wholesalers received large orders from New Orleans last week, which made things lively, for shipping stock is none too easy to get.

CINCINNATI The good demand that started about the time the market became tight is lasting to date and is even better for everything good. Increased receipts are cleaning up easily. Shipping business is pretty good. The rose cut is increasing and most of the blooms are of a good summer quality. Gladioli have increased rapidly. Good ones sell readily, while a lot of poor stock cannot even be jobbed. Very few carnations are coming in. The lily cut is decidedly limited and as a result receipts sell at sight. Lily of the valley are cleaning up well. Smilax is still on the short side in the green goods market.

NEW YORK Quiet times in the wholesale district. The chief operators are usually to be found at the seat of war regularly every morning—others, newly-rich and otherwise are at their country seats. If you really want to consign your goods to the New York market or if you wish to buy in that market, consult this office and we can tell you a lot about the proposition. Our advice you will find to be safe, and a cure for all ills. There is some good business going on now for the July hiatus is at an end. The new season has come in and it is time for all to get busy.

PHILADELPHIA Record of week's trading in our local flower markets here very fair. In fact, we find things in some quarters unusually brisk for this season of the year. Of course, we find spots where the non-advertisers dwell in which they say business was very bad. But on the whole the situation was distinctly encouraging. Those who take advantage regularly, year in and year out, of HORTICULTURE'S publicity service, are adding new customers all the time, and so are able to make good reports even in the doldrum period. Good roses were in demand, and good roses were more in evidence. Much of the short, miserable, soft, mean, little buds that loaded the counters ten days ago, have disappeared. Marylands are especially good. Beauties plentiful—the long ones particularly. The gladiolus situation remains the same as reported last week—only more so. Never have we had such quantity or quality. And they all go and at good prices—so far. Princeps and Mrs. Francis King, those magnificent big scarlets, are marking new time in the gladiolus world commercially. America commenced it, of course, but she has good company now. Some Kunderdi Glory around—splendid and unique in size, fine color, and beautifully frilled flowers. What we have seen, however, seem easily bruised and require extra careful packing to show up as they should to the buyer.

ST. LOUIS

The market is not in a very good condition owing to the scarcity of good quality of stock. The demand last week for Beauties and white flowers of any kind was large. There is at present a large supply of high grade gladiolus spikes in all varieties, the best sellers being Maize, America, Augusta and Mrs. Francis King, and all bringing top prices. There are also a lot of mixed varieties of various colors for which there is hardly any demand. Call during the last week was good for Beauties, lilies and lily of the valley.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

An additional special prize to be awarded at Minneapolis, Minn., by the American Gladiolus Society has been donated by Jacob Thoman & Sons, Rochester, N. Y., for "25 spikes of the best white gladiolus." This will be known as open class 19.

The monthly meeting of the Cook County Florists' Association was held at The Tavern, Chicago, Thursday, July 17. Picnic arrangements were reported by Chairman John Zeck, picnic to take place Sunday, Sept. 7, at Earthhauser's Grove. It was voted to invite Mr. Wallace to speak at the Sept. meeting, on greenhouse insurance. The next meeting will be on Aug. 14th instead of 21st, on account of the S. A. F. Convention. Steps were taken to ascertain how many members of the club are also members of the S. A. F.

The Yonkers (N. Y.) Horticultural Society held their monthly meeting in Hollywood Inn on Thursday night, July 3rd. Howard Nichols read a very interesting paper on "The Sweet Pea, Its Origin and Culture." A lively discussion followed on the different ways of getting the best results outside, some favoring sowing in the fall with winter protection, while others thought as good results could be had by sowing in pots and boxes under glass in the spring. Harry Wells was awarded the prize presented by Mr. Nichols for collection of sweet peas, also a cultural certificate for Telegraph cucumbers grown in frames. The next regular meeting will be held on the first Friday in August.

A joint summer meeting of the Maryland and Delaware Horticultural Societies will be held at Berlin, Md., July 31, 1913. The Societies will be the guests of J. G. Harrison & Sons.

The object of the summer meeting is to enable the members to observe practical operations in horticulture. The firm of J. G. Harrison & Sons conducts one of the largest nurseries in the East, having about 2500 acres under cultivation. In addition they are planting out large orchards in the vicinity. They have 10,000 peach trees bearing a full crop this season. The crop was saved by careful and persistent spraying with self-boiled lime-sulfur against brown rot.

A short meeting of the association will be held during the afternoon with an address by Congressman J. Harry Covington.

The Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society met in Dorans Hall, Greenwich, Conn., on July 11th. Discussion took place on the preliminary prize schedule, nothing of consequence being altered, and the final schedule will soon be out. Adrian Iselin, Jr., of New Rochelle kindly donated a prize of $50.00 for the fall show. A few choice exhibits were made and were judged as follows:

Wm. Morrow, cultural certificate for Eucharis Amazonica. J. McAllister, honorable mention for Buddleia variabilis magnifica. Mrs. Paul F. Dwinger, honorable mention for pot-grown hydrangeas. P. W. Papp, honorable mention for Allamanda Shotti. Thos. Ryan, vote of thanks for canna Mrs. F. Conard, Wm. Morrow, vote of thanks for Gypsophila paniculata flore pleno. P. W. Popp, vote of thanks for mammoth zinnias. Dehn & Bertolf, vote of thanks for Catananche coerulea, Stokesia cyanea, Delphinium chinensis.

OWEN A. HUNWICK,
Cor. Sec'y.

PEONIES

Peonies. The world's greatest collection, 1200 sorts. Send for list. C. BETSCHER, Canal Dover, O.

Peonies—French Peonies. Write for my new descriptive catalogue which will be issued July 25th. DESSERT, Peony Specialist, Chenonceaux, France.

PEONIES 4c. to 8c. PER STEM.

We have a surplus of Peonies and we are determined to move them. Choice sorts such as Delicatissima, Festiva Maxima, Floral Treasure, Livingstone, Richardson's Dorchester, etc., at 8c. per stem. Standard sorts at 6c. Terry's seedlings, mixed single and double, 4c. Not less than ten stems of a kind at these prices. We can furnish any size clumps wanted. We grow all our own Peonies and guarantee them true to name. Write for complete list of over 300 varieties. HENRY FIELD SEED CO., Shenandoah, Iowa.

"PEONIES FOR PLEASURE."

This book of "Peonies for Pleasure" gives information on peony history, soil and plants to use, how and when to plant, fertilizers and how to apply, and describes the most extensive planting of really valuable peonies ever gathered together under the sun; describes the old and new, as well as the plebeian and aristocrat of the peony family. If you want information on the plant that stands next to the rose in beauty, that is practically known to the amateur as simply a red, white and pink peony, then send for "Peonies for Pleasure."

We also issue a special wholesale price list of peonies for fall sales, 1913. Send for both of the booklets.

Our catalogue of everything you need mailed on application. Write for it today.

What the Users Say

KROESCHELL BEST OF ALL

The Kroeschell Boiler I installed last year usually runs from 10 p. m. to 6 a. m. without attention. I do not have the least trouble to keep temperatures in the coldest weather. The boiler has given entire satisfaction.

The Kroeschell is the best boiler we have ever handled.

Boiled Down Boiler Facts

IN spite of the fact that we are one of the largest makers of cast iron greenhouse boilers, we are not so narrow-minded we can't see that wrought iron boilers have their merits and their uses.

But for the uses that our cast iron boiler is intended, we do know there's not a boiler made that can beat it.

Cast iron boilers have many undebatable advantages—such as easy erection. Easy enlarging. Easy to care for. Easy on coal. Easy on the pocket-book for repairs, because they are slow to rust and require no retubing.

The fact that we were absolutely the first concern in the country to make a special business of greenhouse heating, (that was along in the seventies) is a pretty strong guarantee that any boiler we sell for greenhouses is the best of boilers for the purpose. Hitchings boiler is a full blooded greenhouse boiler; not a mongrel residence and greenhouse boiler combined. Being economical for greenhouse heating, it is doubly so for residence work.

Our Full Bloods will heat from 300 to 18,000 square feet of glass. Peter Henderson last Fall put in three of them in preference to one of the big tubular kind.

Now is the time to talk heating with us. Be ready before Jack Frost gets ready. He does not put his work off.

The First Rays Make Most Growth

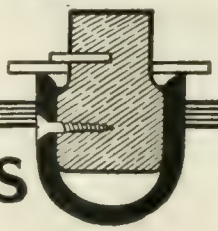
THE fact that in the first few hours of the morning plants make more growth and better growth than in all the rest of the day, is a very vital point to have in mind when deciding on buying a greenhouse.

The lighter the construction of your greenhouse is, the quicker and stronger will be the growth. The greater will be the returns on your investment.

U-Bar Greenhouses have a complete galvanized, aluminum painted steel frame, that makes them not only the lightest houses built, but rigid, enduring, and low in up-keep costs.

The first rays and the last rays of light count with U-Bar houses because their extreme lightness permits the greatest amount of light to reach the plants.

Graceful and attractive as the U-Bar construction is, its efficiency is after all, the thing.



They cost more but they are worth more, because results are more and cost of maintenance less.

We tell you these facts as a matter of protection.

Send for catalog or send for us—or both.

The Wonderful Thing

about Horseshoe Brand Lily bulbs is not the price—but the quality given for the price. It don't matter so much what price you pay—it's what field your lily bulbs come from that's the criterion of real value. Some fields are dear at any price and some are worth your money. Horseshoe Brand bulbs come from fields which are positively the best in Japan. Prices in catalog—get one.

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Cattleyas

Cattleyas Trianæ, Percivaliana, Schrœderæ, maxima, Mossiæ, Walkeriana and others should now be showing very active growth. Do not keep them too heavily shaded. It is always better to provide some movable shading that can be put on from about 9 o'clock in the morning until about 3 in the afternoon on bright days. On dull days it can be left off entirely. Watering should be carefully attended to every day. Give light overhead syringings and damp down the floors and benches two or three times a day during any hot spells. Give plenty of ventilation during the day and leave a couple of inches of air on the top ventilators which will prevent too much humidity. Look the plants over for insects about every ten days.

Care of Smilax

Smilax benched early in June should now be advancing very rapidly. Smilax when doing well makes very vigorous roots and will want water abundantly supplied. Always avoid careless watering which usually leaves the surface wet, while the under soil remains dry. Syringe on all bright days. This will keep red spider in check. Provide strings just as soon as the plants are willing to climb. Keep the beds well cultivated between the plants and during torrid weather ventilate freely.

Mulching and Feeding Chrysanthemums

Earliest benched chrysanthemums will now need to be mulched. A layer of about an inch evenly spread over the surface will serve the purpose of preventing rapid escape of moisture, and the richer it is in readily available plant nutriment—barring for the present all mineral fertilizers—the better it will be. Start with a light mulch of well-rotted manure. Don't put the manure on too thick; just enough to cover the soil to the depth of about an inch is sufficient, remembering that it is better to apply it at two or three different times than to give one heavy coat. Give all pot-plants that are well established, liquid manure once a week. When the bench stock show their buds they should have liquid feed, too. Where you want short jointed and sturdy growth give abundant ventilation. Keep the beds clean by frequent stirring of the surface and give extra attention to watering.

Poinsettias in Pans

Keep right on propagating poinsettias. You will have use for plenty of dishes and pans filled with them for Christmas trade. Any ordinary greenhouse or frame can be used for propagating purposes. Never let them wilt. If you do they will shrivel up and perish in the sand. It is also necessary to keep them shaded from the sunshine. Guard against sunshine and draughts and see that the bed is kept saturated and you will have no trouble in rooting a high per cent. Just as soon as they are nicely rooted pot them into 2 or 2½-inch pots using a compost of fibrous loam three parts, well decayed cow manure and leaf mold one part each. Keep shaded and moist until they take hold of the compost after which they should have full sun.

Propagating Crotons

Now is a good time to propagate these plants and the sooner a beginning is made the better. Old plants that have become lanky and unsightly will give good material for propagation. There is no better method than by mossing. Make a cut with a sharp knife upward about half an inch through the wood on any tops that have been denuded of some of the leaves. To keep the incision open place a little sphagnum moss in the cut, and then cover it with some moss about the size of an egg and tie it on. Plants so treated should be placed by themselves where they can be kept moist all the time. By keeping the moss wet and the atmosphere well charged with moisture they will soon show roots through the moss. Keep the roots of the plants themselves on the dry side.

Repairing Heating Apparatus

Now is the time to look after heating apparatus and get everything in perfect working order for winter. It frequently happens that a close inspection will reveal defects in the boiler or piping that have escaped detection up to now. These defects which at first seem but a small affair often rapidly augment themselves in proportion and seriousness, so now see that they are remedied.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Callas; Cinerarias; Lilium Harrisii; Primulas for Late Winter and Spring; Sweet Peas for Early Winter Flowering; Roman Hyacinths.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

A Contrast

Yes it was quite a contrast indeed to see a bench planted to that good old variety, Bridesmaid, and another bench planted to Mrs. George Shawyer. There they were, each in its glory. The only difference was the old and the new. We say the only difference, but it was not the only difference after all, for the Bridesmaid, good enough in days gone by, could never begin to be in the race with its newest rival, not only in the quality of the cut flowers, but all the way around, including stem, foliage, productiveness, keeping qualities and all the rest of the points. There are less Brides and Bridesmaids grown for the market in the east now than there ever were before. In fact ask many wholesalers for some of these and they will look at you for a while to see if you mean it.

Mildew

When the Killarney made its first appearance, its great drawback was its greater liability to mildew than the varieties then in cultivation. In fact it was said by many that Killarney could not be grown without mildew, and this was thought to be true, and yet there are thousands of Killarneys grown today without even a speck of mildew, and it will be the same with the new varieties just now being commercialized.

Black Spot on Beauties

Although it is still early in the season it is best to keep a sharp lookout for this disease on all the early planted houses, and it is not a very bad idea to take all the necessary precautions to prevent spot setting in. Experience will show that spot will usually set in on and among the clusters of bottom leaves, leaves that come in contact with the soil. It is therefore advisable to go over the plants every now and then and pick off any leaves that may be too low for safety. It is best not to do this all at once as it might then have a weakening effect on the plants. Begin when the plants branch out and the shoots begin to reach the first wire, and then keep on picking off all the surplus foliage. Another advantage to be gained when the lowermost leaves are picked off is the fact that red spider generally manages to secure a foothold among these leaves, and once it has been admitted it will not be so very easy to rid the plants of it, as it is very difficult indeed to reach these with the hose while syringing.

Lime

The season is far enough advanced now to make it necessary to use lime regularly, dusting or blowing it underneath the foliage last thing at night, and not being afraid of using too much. There is a little trick in doing this just right, as has been stated in these columns before and that is to blow the lime underneath the plants rather gently, so that the lime dust thus produced will rise slowly, instead of blowing out on the other side of the bench as it would should too much force be used. Properly applied dry air-shacked lime is of great value to the rose grower.

Liming the Benches

It is yet rather early in the season to apply much lime to the benches but still in the early planted houses it may be necessary to use a little to insure good sturdy growth. When applying the lime, it is best to use only a little at a time, just enough to whiten the surface of the benches. Then go over it and rub the lime around so as to make sure that it will stay where it was put and soak into the benches evenly when water is applied, instead of settling too much in one spot, and very little in another.

Greenfly

In spite of all said and written this pest still finds plenty of room for existence on many places, and a word or two on this old topic will not be altogether out of place. With the hot weather of the past two weeks, fumigation could hardly be resorted to, and yet that is no excuse whatever for not having the plants free from Aphis. With the many good spraying materials that are now on the market it ought to be a simple matter to keep them all free from insects. Only do not try to do it all at once. The doctor gives us medicine to take a little at a time and thereby helps us to get well, whereas if it was taken all in one dose it would no doubt kill us then and there. Apply this same principle when spraying or fumigating the houses. A weak spray applied last thing at night followed by a syringe the next day, and another spray right after syringing while the plants are still wet, will go a good ways to rid the plants of all insects. However it is best not to wait until the plants become infested, but spray or fumigate regularly every so often, and by doing this no greenfly will ever get a chance. This constant war on the pest will help keep red spider out, too. Although the spray has to be made quite strong to kill spider a weaker one is very distasteful indeed, and more congenial quarters are usually sought by Mr. Spider and his kin.

Commercial Fertilizers

Do not be in too much of a hurry to feed the plants, especially with highly concentrated chemical fertilizers. This may be all good and well later, when the supply of plant food in the bench soil has been practically exhausted, but at present it is much better to let the plants find all nourishment in the soil. This will not only insure sturdy growth, but will insure well rooted plants as well, for if the plants find all they require right within easy reach, the roots will not spread far and near to reach the necessary food, etc. We had a good proof of this one time when two houses were torn out for replanting. One bench of Beauties was found to have hardly any roots at all, for it had been given too much water, etc., and the plants in the second house were rooted right down to the bench boards, so that often a board would lift with the plant. Of course the boards were not fastened in the least. To go further we found that in the latter house two and almost three roses were cut for every one of the roses cut in the first house, because of proper care and treatment which meant good roots, and good roots mean cut flowers good and plenty.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

George H. Penson

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Penson. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Care of Late Vinery

The late vinery will be the chief consideration amongst the grapes from now on until Christmas. The earlier one will be either finished or have ripe fruit waiting to be cut, which is easy from a growers' point of view. In the late house the berries will be swelling fast, demanding all the care possible in anticipation of the best crops. Keep the border watered well and also give the roots plenty of feed. If a mulch is already on the border give it some clear water first, then dust on the manure and water it in. Artificial manures are all right for vines but if good liquid manure-water can be had from the farmyard there is nothing to beat it. Keep all sub-laterals pinched out and at the same time keep a sharp lookout for the numerous pests that are liable to make an appearance, chief of which is red spider. The late house will be more susceptible to spider than the previous ones as the hot weather during its growing season necessitates open ventilators, making the air drier than the earlier houses would be at the same stage, with perhaps only half the air on. When spider is discovered lose no time in having the foliage sponged with clear soft water. Some gardeners may prefer to syringe, or spray with insecticides, but once seeing a fine lot of Gros Colmans marked on every berry through this method of eradicating spider I prefer to take the longer and safer course.

Care of Strawberries

Strawberries that were potted up some two weeks or more ago and placed pot-thick to husband the moisture will now need going through. First remove any rhizomes (or runners) the plants are making, also any bad foliage they may have. Follow this up by pricking up the surface soil with a pointed stick or label, not deeply, just enough to break the hard crust that has formed restricting the free passage of air to the roots. After this the pots should be spaced, giving the foliage plenty of room to develop. Do not, however, overdo this or the pots will dry out very quickly. See that all pots are stood level on a bed of ashes which will always make them clean on the bottom and the weeds will not grow so easily as they would on bare soil. During the hottest part of the day we find a shading of one thickness of cheese-cloth beneficial to the plants. After the pots are nicely filled with roots some weak soot-water twice a week will help them.

Melons in the Frames

If the plants growing in cold frames show any signs of starvation soon after the fruit is set feed them, but do not overdo it if they have a quantity of soil to grow into or some of the fruits will crack later on. The quantity of soil they are growing in is a thing that has to be reckoned with right from the start and the longer they are growing the greater part it plays. With no restriction to the roots, sometimes we find no limit to the size of the fruit, which excels itself and bursts, or cracks open about the time it should start to ripen. Water very carefully as the ripening stage approaches. Opinions differ as to whether the fruits should be left in their natural position on the soil or raised on inverted pots. With the same subjects growing in a house the fruits are suspended beneath the foliage which affords shading. By raising them on the pots they are above the foliage and exposed to the full sun which must in some degree make them harder and be a detriment to their swelling, which brings me to the conclusion that they are best left with the natural shading of their own foliage. A piece of wood about an inch thick, to allow a groove to be put into it, will keep the fruits off the soil and give them a better appearance for the table. The groove in the wood is to allow the moisture to drain away.

Tomatoes

It may seem early to talk about sowing tomatoes for winter work, but there is always a possibility of an early frost and the tomatoes are one of the first things to go under. In those districts where early frosts are frequent a sowing now will have ripe fruit in time to keep up a continuous supply. These can be grown in pots, until a later sowing comes into bearing and then be done away with, thus not utilizing any of the regular bench room devoted to them. A six-inch pot will furnish about three hundred plants.

BRITISH HORTICULTURE.

Sweet Pea Show.

The National Sweet Pea Society held an excellent show in London, on July 17th. The cup presented by W. Atlee Burpee, of Philadelphia, was awarded to F. A. Wellesley, Westfield, Woking. In the trade section a fine display was made by Dobbie & Co., who received a gold medal. The varieties included: New Marquis, mauve; Thomas Stevenson, orange scarlet; Mrs. Heslington, lavender; Duplex, semi-double cream pink; King White; Lady Miller, apricot tint on cream ground; Inspector, semi-double orange salmon; Lavender George Herbert, bluish lavender; Edrom Beauty, orange salmon; and others. Robert Bolton also received a gold medal for a well-arranged group. W. J. Unwin, of Histon, was another successful exhibitor. Four novelties were exhibited on the stand of Bertrand W. Deal. These were: Sincerity, deep cerise; Delight, carmine rose; Annie Sculpher, salmon cerise; and Brooklands Queen, salmon shading on soft rose.

Sweet Pea Trials.

The awards in the trials of sweet peas organized by the International Committee have lately been published. Awards were made to: Walter P. Wright, light lavender, and Leslie Imber, blue, from W. J. Unwin, Histon, Cambs.; Deal's 226, provisionally named May Morgan, from B. W. Deal, Brooklands, Kelvedon; R. F. Felton, lavender, and Red Chief Improved, red maroon; R. Bolton, Warton, Carnforth; Seedling C., provisionally named Mrs. G. L. Hutt, from G. L. Hutt; Hercules, large pink, and Florence Wright Spencer, from G. Stark & Son, Ryburgh, Norfolk. Silver medals were given to Edna May Improved, and Walter P. Wright; the gold medal was withheld, as the committee did not consider that there was any novelty of outstanding excellence to which it could be awarded.

Reckless credit-giving

Notwithstanding all that has been said and all that has been written in recent years urging the need of more caution in extending credit in the flower business there seems to be no diminution in the number of preposterous business failures. The latest is a Chicago firm, scheduling liabilities of $2,300, and assets amounting to $6! No need of any lengthy argument to elucidate what such a statement means in the way of lax credit giving. The old-time system of asking for payment of accounts once in six months so long prevalent among the retail florists in dealing with fashionable customers, and extended sometimes to even a year by the bulb dealers who were willing to wait for their money until the bulbs had been flowered and the product disposed of, dies a slow death. Whatever progress is made towards more prompt settlements in any department of the business makes it easier for all to follow suit and helps all around. Short-time debtors make long-time friends.

Parcel post menaced

We are in receipt of a letter from Congressman David J. Lewis of Maryland, the parcel post expert, sounding a note of warning over what seems to be very like the first serious effort of the express companies to destroy the parcel post. Mr. Lewis declares that should the "administrative powers" clause of the parcel post law be stricken out as is threatened the vital force of the parcel post will be killed and the hard work of forty years lost. He asks that letters and telegrams be sent to senators and congressmen, demanding that the law be let alone and the service of the parcel post expanded and cheapened as the postmaster general may find it needful and feasible. We were pleased, as no doubt the majority of our readers were, when the announcement was made that a larger limit of weight and a lower rate of postage would go into effect August 15. This announcement, it seems, has stirred up the express and railroad interests. The American people, however, have had their fill of express domination and we do not believe they are in the temper to submit to any interference with what has been so laboriously secured. "Hands off."

Floral art in the flower show

It is generally acknowledged, we believe, that a larger participation by the retail florists in the public flower shows would be most desirable for many reasons and would add much to the public interest in these affairs. The difficulty of getting this element to exhibit is well known and has been frequently commented upon in these columns and elsewhere. As we have before remarked the competitive idea is undoubtedly the great stumbling block. One can hardly blame the florists either, for the prestige placed in jeopardy when a decorator of wide repute enters a competition of this character is a matter of much more serious import to him than the chances taken by plant or flower growers in their competitions can ever be. The only possible way we can see by which the retail florists can ever be induced to enter enthusiastically into the flower exhibitions is to do away with all competitions on tables, mantles and the like in the commercial classes and assign booths to all retailers who will accept same and agree to display examples of their flower work as has been done so successfully at several of the large exhibitions in Chicago. We hope the management of the International Flower Show will find it feasible to give this plan a practical tryout at New York next spring.

Dendrobium thyrsiflorum

Grower Donald McKenzie, Chestnut Hill, Mass.

The subject of the illustration is one of the best species of the beautiful and variable genus Dendrobium. Its large trusses of white and orange flowers are produced freely from the two-year-old and older pseudo-bulbs and a well-flowered specimen forms a lovely picture. There are several other species closely allied to the foregoing and all are well worth growing. D. Farmeri comes perhaps the nearest to it and it is hard to say which of the two is the more beautiful. In this species the sepals and petals vary from pure white to the most delicate shade of pink and rose; the lip is orange as in D. thyrsiflorum. It is easily distinguished from the former by its four-angled dark green, pseudo-bulbs. D. densiflorum has the whole of the flowers orange with the lip a shade darker than the sepals and petals and the flowers are set closer together than in the two foregoing species. The pseudo-bulbs are shorter and stouter than in D. thyrsiflorum.

All three are natives of hot climates (India) and therefore require lots of heat and moisture during their growing season, which begins soon after the flowers have faded in late spring or early summer. They will be found to do their best suspended from the roof of the warmest house obtainable from the time they start to grow until the new bulbs are completed, during which time they should be slightly shaded and not be allowed to get dry for any length of time. As the new growths reach maturity, an occasional dip in weak liquid manure water will be of benefit to them. This can be kept up until the new pseudo-bulbs are fully developed, when the plants may be removed to cooler quarters and gradually exposed to full sunshine in order to ripen the new growth. The amount of water, both at the roots and in the atmosphere, should also be reduced at this time and during the winter and up to the time when the buds begin to push forth, very little water should be given.

The plants can be potted in good osmunda fibre to which a little live sphagnum moss can be added. Pot rather firm in pans, baskets or, better still, common flower pots with three holes to permit suspending. Give ample drainage to allow the water to pass off quickly; the water should run through the compost as it would through a sieve. This applies to all orchids; no orchid thrives good in a compost which retains the water for any length of time.

Walter Mott's Notes by the Way

Providence, R. I.

The new seed store of the W. E. Barrett Co. was completed in time for the season's business which was even better than the year previous. Mr. Fisk, the manager, who has been many years connected with the house, will now take a short vacation.

Willis N. Pino reports a big call for insecticides following the seed business, which averages up equal to former years. He predicts a fairly good general harvest of stock seed at steady prices. The first shipment of Lilium Harrissii are in; bulbs are plump and of average size. Manager H. C. Neubrand is on a vacation in the White Mountains.

Jas. Budlong Sons Co. are shipping a heavy late crop of tomatoes, which have given place to chrysanthemums. First shipments from new crops of roses show stock to be in fine condition.

On the way to Newport is Carl Jurgens' big field of lily of the valley; it is an unusual sight and attracts considerable notice. At the houses they are throwing out a crop preparatory for a new one. The new rose houses are producing well. Beauties are the chief variety grown and they give promise of heavy crops from now on.

Cambridge, Mass.

F. C. Becker has his houses planted with Nephrolepis Bostoniensis, more stock than usual. It is notable, in passing, that while every grower seems to add more space each year for this popular fern, there are not enough young plants to go halfway around.

Jno. McKenzie is a strong admirer of Nephrolepis Roosevelt; its sturdy habit and graceful appearance makes it very popular.

New Haven, Conn.

The Doolittle Floral Co., who took over the floral section of the Platt Co., are increasing their store space with the intention of adding a full line of insecticides next season.

Springfield, Mass.

Wm. Schlatter & Son have long since adopted the plan of keeping the extra help employed through the summer in going over the houses, so that they are in excellent condition and ready for replanting in due season. They notice a considerable increase in local trade of late.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS AND ORNAMENTAL HORTICULTURISTS.

Arrangements have been made with Skellet Company, 201 South Fifth street, Minneapolis, Minn., to do the hauling of freight at the time of the Convention. The rate will be 50 cents minimum from depot to Armory, and 10 cents per hundred. Freight arriving before the Convention will be stored by them free of charge. It will avoid a great deal of trouble if the shipments are billed direct to the Skellet Company, or, at least, in care of the Skellet Company. If you have not already done so you should let me know about signs, whether you wish benches erected, etc. Benches will cost you about 6 cents per square foot. If you wish benches or tables covered with green burlap, it will cost 10 cents per yard laid. Roll-top desks with chairs may be hired for the four days of the Convention at a cost of $5.00. It will avoid delays and confusion if you would give these matters your immediate attention.

BOSTON TO MINNEAPOLIS.

But two weeks away and Minneapolis will be the Mecca for many florists and horticulturists and from present indications it will be one of the best conventions in the history of the Society. Massachusetts will be represented and that worthily by those who have already signified their intention of taking the trip, but the number is all too few under the circumstances. Taking into consideration the beauty of the trip and the excellent arrangements made for the comfort and pleasure of those who will go must be added the fact that there are two other very important reasons for a large delegation from this vicinity. We have the honor of a Massachusetts man as President of the Society and furthermore it is hoped that Boston will have the convention in 1914, which the delegation is going to work for, re-enforced by a special representative from the city government who will carry an invitation from the city of Boston. Up to the present time about twenty-five have signified their intention of joining the special party, but it is hoped that the party will number at least fifty. Undoubtedly, there are many more who will attend, but it is absolutely necessary that the committee should be informed, not only to make berth arrangements but for hotel accommodations in Minneapolis. August 8th is the very latest possible date that this can be done. The tour will be personally conducted and everything possible will be done by the committee for the comfort and convenience of those going. Train leaves the North Station at 8 P. M., Friday, August 15. Saturday will be spent in Montreal on special invitation. Write at once to the Chairman of the Committee, W. P. Edgar, 5 Park Square, Boston, or to Horticultural Hall, for all particulars or of your intentions.

W. P. EDGAR.
Vice-President for Eastern Massachusetts.

PHILADELPHIA TO MINNEAPOLIS.

The Florists' Club of Philadelphia's Minneapolis Convention party, Chairman John Westcott, announces that they will leave Broad street station, Pennsylvania R. R., on the 10.25 A. M. train, Sunday, August 17th. Any one wishing to join the party should communicate at once either with the chairman, Mr. Westcott, or with the secretary of the club, David Rust, at Horticultural Hall, Broad and Locust street, as there may be a saving—according to the number in the party. Act at once on this and be sure to advise one or other of these gentlemen before buying your ticket.

ST. LOUIS FLORIST CLUB.

The St. Louis Florist Club committee of twenty-five met with Manager Frank Robinson of the Coliseum Flower Show on Tuesday, July 25, to devise some plans to raise $2,000 for prizes for the down-town stores for window decorations for Flower Show Week. A subscription started at once and $700 was raised by those present and the committee will raise the other $1,300 by August 15th. The members enjoyed a pleasant evening and at the close refreshments were served by Mr. Robinson.

The Florist Club meeting will be held on Thursday, August 7th, one week ahead of the regular meeting day. Election of officers, convention and Flower Show matters will be the features of the meeting.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The American Rose Society will hold its summer meeting during the coming annual convention of the Society of American Florists at Minneapolis. At this gathering the new president assumes control and direction of the Rose Society's interests.

Roland D. Gamwell, of Bellingham, Wash., who has been visiting East, showed great interest in the spread of the American Rose Society's work. One point he made was that the rose plant growers of this country do not realize their advantage in the work of the American Rose Society in creating a widespread interest all over the land in rose bushes for home planting.

The directors of the Panama Exposition at San Francisco, to be held in 1915, are awake to the fact that the rose grows on the Pacific Slope to a degree of profusion perhaps not equalled elsewhere. A prize of $1,000 is offered for a new rose. The division of Horticulture of the Exposition wish to have emphasized the effort which is to be made to bring about the most extensive show of roses in all phases during the time of the exhibition, and to do this the interest of rosarians the world over is invited.

The certificates of merit awarded at the Hartford Test Garden examination have been sent out. This Hartford Rose Garden Show seems to have exercised considerable quiet interest in its results. Superintendent Parker of Hartford ascribes very high praise to Theodore Wirth, now Superintendent of Parks at Minneapolis, for the work in planning the garden at Hartford. At Minneapolis the American Rose Society asks for a large attendance of its members, and would be glad to receive many new members. "A Rose for every Home, a Bush for every Garden." The new president is Wallace R. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn.; the new vice-president is Robert Pyle, of West Grove, Pa.; the new members of the executive committee are J. H. Dunlop, Toronto, Ont., Canada, and S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, Pa.

RHODE ISLAND-GREYSTONE SWEET PEA EXHIBITION.

The first joint exhibition of sweet peas by the Rhode Island and Greystone Horticultural Societies, held in the Methodist-Episcopal Church parlors, Providence, R. I., July 19, was a complete success. Miss Isabella H. Miller of Bustin's Island, Me., made a clean sweep in five classes, shown in vases without competition. Thomas Brooks, of Providence, excelled in keen competition in other classes of peas, winning four firsts and one second in seven classes.

Primarily, it was a pea exhibit; however, there were many other things shown. A notable part of the show was non-competitive exhibits from Newport. One was from the garden of Miss Fannie Foster, at Ridgemere, where C. M. Bugholt is the gardener, and the other from the gardens of Mrs. W. B. Leeds at Rough Point, of which William Gray is the gardener.

Burke & Burns, Providence, made a large display of greenhouse roses. Other displays included peas by the Malvern Farm, Bar Harbor, Me., palms, by William H. Appleton; ornamental plants, by T. J. Johnston & Co., Providence; ferns and tuberous begonias, by John F. Wood. The display of gladioli by John Lewis Childs of Flowerfield, L. I., was said to be the best display ever made in New England. Herbaceous plants were shown by the following: Roger Williams Park, Fred C. Green, superintendent; B. A. Jackson, Frank L. Gay, Mrs. E. Orsborne; Scotch heather, John Marshall; "Harry Kirk" rose, Mrs. W. A. Clissold. Plans were made at this meeting for the annual dahlia exhibition to be held in September.

The committee in charge of the sweet pea exhibit included E. K. Thomas (chairman), State College, Kingston; Joshua Vose, Pontiac; Arthur Sellew, Providence; F. T. Jenckes, West Barrington; Prof. John E. Hill, Arthur C. Miller and President Thomas Hope, ex-officio, all of Providence.

THE HORSECHESTNUTS.

From Bulletin No. 41 of the Arnold Arboretum, Boston.

The Horsechestnut (Aesculus Hippocastanum) growing naturally in a restricted area has the power of flourishing and reproducing itself in regions with climates as unlike as those of eastern New England and western Scotland. The home of this tree among the mountains of northern Greece is of such limited extent that, although the Horsechestnut has been cultivated in Europe for more than three centuries, it is only in comparatively recent years that the wild tree has been discovered. The Grecian Horsechestnut is one of the noblest of the exotic trees cultivated in the United States, but for the development of its greatest beauty it requires deep, rich, moist soil and abundant space for the spread of its branches. Few other trees suffer more from smoke, dust, and the other unnatural conditions of city life. There are a number of forms in cultivation but none of them equals the typical tree in beauty. One of the best known of these abnormal forms is the variety with double flowers (var. Baumannii, flore pleno). This form flowers later than the single-flowered tree and the flowers last a long time in good condition. There are varieties with erect branches (var. pyramidalis) and with erect and spreading branches forming a round-topped tree (var. umbraculifera); and there are varieties with variously incised leaflets (var. incisa and var. laciniata), and with leaves blotched with yellow (var. variegata), but these are all horticultural curiosities and of no interest to the general planter.

The so-called red-flowered Horsechestnut, which appeared in Europe many years ago, although its origin is not entirely clear, is probably a hybrid of the common Horsechestnut with the red-flowered A. Pavia of the southeastern United States. The right name of this tree is A. carnea, although it is often found in nurseries under the name of A. rubicunda. It has the general habit and appearance of the common Horsechestnut, but it is a smaller tree and blooms later, and the flowers on different individuals vary from red to pale rose color. The handsomest form (var. Briotii) has deep red flowers and is one of the most ornamental of the arborescent Horsechestnuts. The Japanese Horsechestnut (A. turbinata) is rather closely related to the Grecian tree and resembles it in general appearance, although the flowers are less showy. In its native country this is a large and handsome tree, and it promises to be a valuable ornamental tree here. The largest specimen in the United States is in Rochester, N. Y., where the Japanese Horsechestnut has flowered and produced large crops of seeds for several years. The Himalayan Horsechestnut, the species from central China discovered by Wilson, and the California species are not hardy here, and the north China Horsechestnut is not yet established in the Arboretum.

Southeastern North America is the real home of the Horsechestnuts, judging by the multiplication of species in that part of the world where a number of interesting and valuable new forms have recently been discovered. The earliest of the American species to flower is the so-called Ohio Buckeye, A. glabra. This is a small tree with pale yellow flowers, fruit like that of the Grecian tree covered with prickles and dark bark exfoliating in thin flakes. A form of this tree with usually seven instead of five leaflets (var. Buckleyi) is not otherwise different from the common form. Another form of this tree (var. leucodermis) from southern Missouri and Arkansas, with pale bark, blooms about two weeks later than the type.

The other yellow-flowered arborescent Horsechestnut of the eastern states (A. octandra) differs from the Ohio Buckeye in the absence of prickles from the fruit. It is a larger tree, growing sometimes on the slopes of the southern Appalachian Mountains to the height of eighty feet, and blooms a week or ten days later. This is a valuable ornamental tree which is now rarely found in collections. The other arborescent species of the southern states, the red-flowered A. Pavia, is not yet established in the Arboretum, although some garden forms of this tree (var. atrosanguinea and var. Whittleyi), flower here freely.

From a race of hybrids between A. octandra and A. Pavia some valuable garden plants have been obtained. This hybrid appeared in Paris at the beginning of the last century and the correct name for it is A. hybrida, although in recent European publications it is sometimes called A. versicolor. The flowers are of different shades of red, and individuals differ in foliage, in the size and color of the flowers, and in their time of opening. Of recently described species from the southeastern states only A. georgiana from central Georgia will flower this year. This is a broad, round-topped shrub, growing sometimes to the height of five or six feet, with large red and yellow flowers in long compact clusters, and a plant of much promise as a garden ornament. A. parviflora is the last of the Horsechestnuts to flower and its tall narrow spikes of white flowers do not open before midsummer. In the Arboretum are beds of young plants of the yellow-flowered A. arguta, a small shrub from eastern Texas, and of the beautiful red-flowered shrub or small tree from the southern and southwestern states usually called A. austrina. Much attention has been paid to the formation of the Arboretum collection of Horsechestnuts and it will well repay the attention of persons interested in a beautiful genus of now too little known trees and shrubs well suited for the decoration of northern parks and gardens.

NEW AZALEAS SHOWN AT GHENT.

Mr. Winfried Roelker, who has just returned from Europe on the S. S. Vaderland, says that the Ghent show was a pronounced success, especially in the azaleas and rhododendrons. For his group exhibits in eighteen sections, August Haerens of Somergem, Belgium, obtained nine first prizes, seven second prizes and one third prize. The following names and descriptions of his group of twelve azalea novelties will interest our readers who grow azaleas.

Winfried Haerens; an early bright Christmas-red flower; a seedling of Ernst Eckhoute × Prof. Wolters.

Brillianta Belgica; a very early bright scarlet; a seedling of Prof. Wolters × Simon Mardner.

Lady Roosevelt; salmon pink; sport of Rudolf Seidel, which sported from Madam Jos. Vervaene, a sport of Perle de Ledeberg.

Miss Elsie Roelker; blush rose, flowering camellia-like and erect; sport of Lady Roosevelt.

Tricorolle; an early crimson red, with three rows of petals; a seedling of Simon Mardner × Hexe.

Easter Greeting; a bright crimson color, and good keeper; a seedling of Camille Vervaene × Hexe.

Christmas Star; a deep blood-red seedling of Postmaster Stephan by some other seedling; better color than that of the parent.

Star of Belgium (Etoile de Belgique); a seedling of unnamed novelties; the color deeper than Postmaster Stephan, the petals pointed, cactus dahlia-like, eight to nine petals to the row in place of five; a very double flower. Will not be ready for the trade until 1915.

Regina Graciosa; very large double white flower; a seedling of Mme. Hermann Seidel (white Kerkhove) with a seedling of Louis Cavelier. Will not be ready for the trade until 1913.

President Alexis Cailler; glossy crimson pink; a seedling of E. Eckhoute × Haerensiana; larger in the flower than Eckhoute. Will be ready this fall.

Susanna; a very early double white; a seedling of Mme. Petrick × Anne Hunkel. Will not be ready for the trade until fall.

Angelinde; a large double white flower of fine shape; is a sister plant to the former, having the same parents; very double but not so early as Susanna. Both are good keepers. Will not be ready for the trade until 1915.

Mr. Roelker says that Lady Roosevelt and Miss Elsie Roelker were also exhibited by the Kuyk firm but under the names of Daybreak and Blushing Bride respectively and that Haerens is now contesting Kuyk's right to so change the names, before the Chambre Syndicale Horticole.

CONTROL OF TWO ELM-TREE PESTS.

(From Bulletin 333, N. Y. State College of Agriculture.)

The elms of the eastern United States are subject to the attacks of two serious insect pests, the imported elm leaf-beetle and the elm leaf-miner. The leaf-beetle attacks both the American and European elms. Many inquiries are received each season regarding these pests and methods of fighting them.

In this bulletin are given the results of two years of work in spraying for the leaf-beetle and the leaf-miner. The types of machines used in spraying large trees are discussed in some detail. Considerable definite data are given also on the cost of spraying large trees. Observations on the life history of the beetle are also included.

It was found that the imported elm-leaf-beetle could be kept under control very satisfactorily by spraying the trees with arsenate of lead at the rate of four or five pounds to fifty gallons of water. Perhaps two sprayings are best during the first year, but one thorough application each season thereafter seems to be sufficient. Large elm trees can be sprayed at a cost of thirty to forty cents per tree for one application.

The elm leaf-miner attacks the European elms by mining out the inner tissues of the leaves. This insect apparently becomes more injurious and widespread each year.

It was discovered that an application of "Black-leaf 40" and soap to the leaves would kill a large majority of the miners if made while the larvae were young. Spraying experiments extending over two seasons show that the "Black-leaf 40" should be used at the rate of one pint to one hundred gallons of water, to which has been added five pounds of ordinary laundry soap or whale-oil soap. The trees should be sprayed just as soon as the mines begin to show and while the larvae are young.

Notes on the life history of the miner are given in the bulletin.

KROESCHELL HEATERS FOR LONDON.

Two No. 14 Kroeschell Boilers are now under construction at the works of the Kroeschell Bros. Co. at Chicago, and which are to be used for the new central hot water heating system (forced circulation) for Lowe & Shawyer, Uxbridge, London, Middlesex, England. Each boiler measures 60 inches in width, 50 inches in height, and 16 feet in length. These boilers will be constructed complete at the Kroeschell factory, and when finished will be loaded on board freight cars to begin their long journey from Chicago to London. The cars will be placed alongside of the ocean steamer and loaded direct.

The shipping weight of Kroeschell's No. 14 is in the neighborhood of 14,000 pounds, and it will be interesting to learn that the freight on these boilers from Chicago to London is less than the freight charges from Chicago to the Pacific Coast.

The capacity of a No. 14 Kroeschell is 12,000 lineal feet of four-inch pipe in addition to the mains. The immense glass capacity of these boilers can be grasped by their rating converted in 1¼-inch pipe, of which a No. 14 Kroeschell will heat 5¼ miles of this size pipe for hot water heating if placed from end to end.

Obituary

Robert Sydenham.

The announcement of the passing away of Robert Sydenham, of Birmingham, England, is received with sorrow by his many friends in the United States. His was a most unique personality and he had warm friends everywhere all over the world. He had many enthusiasms in succession during his horticultural career, the latest and perhaps the most ardent being the sweet pea. Among others in the sweet pea field he was a warm, personal friend of W. Atlee Burpee, who is at present visiting in England and to whom this loss will be particularly sad. Mr. Sydenham died on Saturday, July 19.

INCORPORATED.

Cincinnati, Ohio—J. Chas. McCullough Seed Company; capital stock, $150,000.

Plymouth, Mass.—Old Colony Nurseries; capital stock, $6,000. Incorporators, T. R. Watson, John W. Leonard, Jr., and E. W. Watson.

Cleveland, Ohio—The James Fadie Company, flowers, plants and nursery stock. Capital stock $10,000. Incorporators, M. C. Maher, V. J. Free, H. B. Wright and R. L. Toben.

ANOTHER NEW LILY.

Lilium Sargentiae, a gem among the Chinese introductions by E. H. Wilson has been blooming gorgeously at the Farquhar nurseries in Roslindale, Mass., during the past two weeks, being about a fortnight later than myriophyllum. The garden committee and plant and flower committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society visited the nurseries to inspect this new comer, on Thursday, July 24, and were much impressed with its effectiveness in garden work. It is perfectly hardy. We shall have something further to say about it later on.

Of Interest to Retail Florists

THE LARGE DESIGN.

The use of the large funeral design, so much in vogue the past twenty-five years, has been diminishing to such an extent that the average florist of the present day rarely carries any wire frames other than the ordinary run of flat designs that he knows are ready sellers. The reason of the shrinkage in large floral tributes has never been made clear; nor do I think it ever will be. Years ago there were very few funerals without the broken column, gates-a-jar, large arch, open book, etc. While these designs were sometimes attractive they were bulky and cumbersome to handle and very often did not arrive at the house in the same condition as when they left the store, especially on a cold winter day when heavy paper wrappings were necessary to keep the flowers from freezing, because there was no automobile delivery service as we have at the present time.

Today the first suggestion of the salesman seems to be a flat wreath or a spray, never taking the price into consideration, whether it be one dollar or fifty dollars, as these simple designs can be made for any price, the sky being the limit. One reason in my mind for side-tracking the large fancy design seems to be the saving of the wire frame and the time of making, especially when the flowers are wanted in a hurry. Still, the public do not ask to see the large set designs as they did before, but there are a few large designs going around for special occasions such as society and lodge emblems.

Another reason seems plausible for this falling off, but only among the poorer class; that is, the apartments being small, the large designs must be given the proper space on their arrival, so as not to offend the senders. Then comes the expense of extra carriages for the conveyance of the flowers, and this is not always within the means of the deceased one's family; and here is where we must stop trying to figure out the problem.

MR. STOREMAN.

CHICAGO NOTES.

Johnson & Chronis, 47th street and Lake avenue, are re-decorating their store.

A. T. Pyfer and Harry Philpott have returned from a short trip to Mackinaw Island.

H. Hilmen, "The Kenwood Florist," has returned from two weeks at Savannah Lake.

F. Blondeel of Oak Park has about finished the rebuilding of the older section of his range of greenhouses.

O. F. Larson, who has a store at 63rd street and Ashland avenue, will open up another store, August 1st, at 954 West 59th street. Fred Wietterling will be in charge.

F. O. Franzen of Summerdale avenue and Clark street has purchased land and is erecting a store and greenhouse on Clark street, about a half block from present location.

To teach Floriculture in the Public Schools of Chicago is the plan adopted by the School Board of which Peter Reinberg is president. If the proposed plans do not miscarry the Vocational School for Florists will be in operation with the opening of the school year next September.

The present plan is to establish classes in the Nicholas Semi High School and build one or more commercial greenhouses in connection for practical work. The instruction will include a wide range. In fact every branch of the business will be covered and in the most practical way.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES.

G. A. Strohlein, of Dreer's, sailed on the steamship Lapland of the Red Star Line on his usual European business trip on behalf of his firm, July 26th.

Taking time by the forelock and making insurance doubly sure, M. Rice & Co. shipped their exhibits for the Minneapolis Convention, July 19th—a month ahead. Two weeks ought to be ample, but a month is still better.

Visitors: J. J. Cummings, Baltimore, Md.; J. D. Cockcroft, Northport, N. Y.; Mr. Hayman, Hayman Greenhouse Co., Clarksboro, W. Va.

The above advt. is one of a series of paid advts. that Penn the Florist, of Boston, is publishing weekly, alternating in the four florists' papers, to become better acquainted with the florists of the country. These advts. have been published daily in the different Boston papers. Any florist desiring to use same in his home town, may do so without further consent. These advts. have been the means of establishing our present great volume of business.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON

Very quiet this week. Little doing either in local or shipping circles, and stock moves only at low figures. Roses of the summer standard such as Carnot, Taft and Radiance show good quality, but others are very poor. Asters come in freely, although only a few of them—purple and white preferably—reach the required standard of quality. Others sell with difficulty. Beauties are in abundance, but of low grade as to bud even when stem and foliage are all that could be desired. Of carnations there are very few. Gladioli plentiful and getting too common. Sweet peas—lots of them and most of them very inferior.

CHICAGO

With a very short supply and a brisk demand, considering the season of the year, the trade has had a good deal of trouble to supply their wants. Of roses there are but few of fair length and good quality; this is particularly true as to white. In pink, Maryland helps out. Some fair stock of these in limitable quantities is available. Sunburst and Ward may be classed as among the best summer varieties and are in brisk demand. Beauties are scarce and as to quality are nothing to boast of. Peonies are still quite a feature on this market and sell at a good figure, but the coming week will about finish them. Lilies, both longiflorum and auratum, are about equal to demand and generally of good quality. Carnations are practically out of the running; a few field-grown are making their appearance. Asters seem to be late. A limited quantity of Queen of the Market is coming in, but so far they have made little impression on the market. A few sweet peas short stemmed, are still coming in. Gladioli are increasing in supply and are meeting with a good demand.

CINCINNATI

Good summer conditions prevail in the market. A good demand has kept up steadily throughout July. The supply, however, has increased greatly and has brought about conditions that are such that only the good stock sells readily. Only ordinary prices prevail. In roses the receipts of all teas are heavy. The greater part of the stock is short stemmed. Giganteum lilies clean up at fair prices. Auratum lilies are fine and are enjoying a fair call.

NEW YORK

No change is noted thus far in the wholesale market situation, which continues to stand at lowest mid-summer mark. Asters are getting quite abundant, as are gladioli, but outside of these two summer specialties very few flowers are being sent in. There are more than enough for any call that is likely to materialize at present, however. Roses as a rule are poor and carnations are worse. Plenty of lilies, lily of the valley, etc. Prices on the average have sagged a little since last week, although it did seem almost impossible for them to drop any further.

PHILADELPHIA

Very few words are necessary to tell the tale. About as good as could be expected at this season of the year. Asters and gladioli dominate the market. Roses are fair, but more good ones could be used. Here and there a few decent carnations are to be seen, but the great bulk of them are small and sleepy. Easter lilies surprisingly good and selling well. Lily of the valley plentiful and brisk. Orchids few, but enough for the demand. Gaillardia, coreopsis, centaurea, and delphinium are conspicuous among the minor items.

ST. LOUIS

The condition of the local market during last week was not healthy as far as business was concerned. Stock of all kinds is plentiful, but poor in quality—especially so in roses and carnations. Prices remain as they have been all this month on all stock except on gladiolus, which, owing to the over-production have sustained a drop in price. Beauties are best among the roses. Killarney, Richmond and Maryland are all coming in with short stems. Lilies and lily of the valley are not over plentiful.

During Recess

Fun at Detroit.

In these days of enforced idleness we are very willing to follow the call of the good fellow and so more than fifty of us assembled at the grounds of Thos. Browne, who again proved himself the king of entertainers. A hotly contested ball game ended with a score of 9 to 8 in the ninth inning in favor of the Retailers. Quoit games and other sports furnished a good deal of enjoyment while all this time Mr. Browne and many willing assistants passed refreshments suitable to all ages and sexes present in a most liberal fashion. As evening drew nigh long tables were spread on the front lawn and many a good speech and timely jest testified to Thos. Browne's standing in the community. Among out-of-town guests were Mr. Bissinger and family of Lansing.

Notes.

The Chicago Ladies' Bowling team is practicing as often as they can get together, preparatory to the convention contests.

The Cook County Florists Association (Chicago) Baseball Club beat the Acorn Athletic Company Club by a score of 8 to 5 on Sunday, July 27th.

The Ornamental Growers' Association will hold its summer session at Hotel Walton, Philadelphia, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, August 6th, 7th and 8th. Theo. Smith, of Geneva, N. Y., is president of the Association and C. J. Maloy, of Rochester, N. Y., is secretary and treasurer.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

The Missouri Botanical Garden Bulletin for July, 1913, contains interesting articles on Water Gardens, The Red Sunflower, Angraecum sesquipedale and other timely topics.

The Report of the Commissioners of Rockford Park District, Rockford, Ill., for 1912, has been received. The book is handsomely illustrated with half-tone views, etc., and shows that Rockford has a park system of which her citizens have a right to feel proud.

American Carnation Society—Proceedings of the Twenty-second Annual Meeting, held in New York, N. Y., April 8-10, 1913. Contains the usual interesting reports, list of members, etc., and, as a frontispiece a very fine portrait of President Phil. Breitmeyer.

New York State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y. The "Announcer" for July contains some interesting information concerning the Department of Floriculture, its equipment and work. The "Announcer" is published for the purpose of acquainting the people of the state with the kinds of work that are in progress at the State College of Agriculture. It announces the investigations, extension enterprises on farms and with the people, forthcoming bulletins, reading-courses, local schools, and other events and programs of which the public should have knowledge and which are not announced in the usual publications of the college. Any resident of the state may be placed on the mailing-list to receive the "Announcer," on request, so far as the size of the editions will allow.

Word that the annual recreation period is on and the lighter things of life particularly appeal, some pleasant reading for the leisure hours in the country or at the seaside is very acceptable. L. C. Page & Co., the Boston publishers, have turned out some excellent summer fiction in which all ages are provided for and, as in all the publications emanating from this house a healthy tone and clean sentiment as well as literary excellence characterizes each book.

The Blossom Shop, a story of the South, by Isla May Mullins, is a most delicious story—one that when you start to read it you want to keep on to the close. Price $1.00.

Peggy Raymond's Vacation, by Harriett Lummus Smith, is another engrossing story that the young ladies will especially enjoy. A party of girls spending summer in a country house and their experiences, amusing or thrilling, furnish the theme and introduce the reader once more to The Girls of Friendly Terrace. Price $1.50.

The boys are not forgotten either and The Pioneer Boys of the Mississippi, by Harrison Adams may be relied on to hold down the liveliest of them. It is teeming with hair-breadth escapes and thrilling adventure with wild animals and crafty Indians and has the merit further of accuracy of conditions, environment and historical reference. 345 pages, price $1.50 net.

Our Little Austrian Cousin, by Florence E. Mendel, and Our Little Bulgarian Cousin, by Clara Vostrovsky Winlow, while well adapted to the young reader will also be found interesting and instructive by those who are older, in their portrayal of customs and conditions as found in those far off countries. These books are 60 cents each, handsomely bound and illustrated.

For the little ones there are Jenny's Bird House, by Lillie Fuller Merriam and Little Rhymes, by Nell Thornton, both well adapted to engross and amuse the six and eight-year-olds. The latter has quaint dedication verses by Glenn McClaughry and type and illustrations in two colors. Price 50c.

All of the foregoing just out may be procured from L. C. Page & Co., 53 Beacon street, Boston.

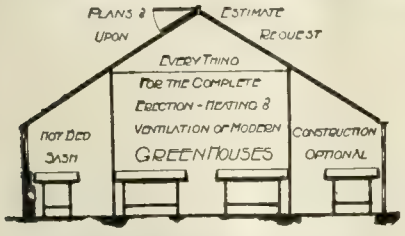
What the Users Say



KROESCHELL REPLACES CAST IRON

¶ We are heating 6,000 sq. ft. of glass with the Kroeschell House Boiler you furnished last fall, and we think it can take care of more.
¶ We maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in the greenhouses and have no trouble keeping temperatures, even in the coldest weather.
¶ The boiler does not require attention after 9.00 p. m., except in the coldest weather, when we bank at 11.00 p. m.
¶ The boiler has given entire satisfaction. We doubt if your boiler could be improved upon; it is by far the best we have ever used, and we've been using heating systems for the past 30 years.

Greenhouse Given to Gaffney Park by Mr. H. D. Wheat

Words from the Sunny South

MR. H. D. WHEAT, of Gaffney, S. C., gave this house to the Gaffney Park. He has a charming little Lord & Burnham Curved-Eave house on his private grounds. Here is what gardener, Mr. G. Janes has to say about the park house.

"I have worked in the Lord & Burnham greenhouses for the past three and one-half years, growing fruit, flowers, and vegetables, and we have always had the finest results—which I believe is partly due to the amount of light and proper ventilation.

Mr. G. Janes

Here, where I have to raise a good number of bedding plants beside the usual cut flowers and pot plants, I fix up shelves on which I can stand a surprising lot of plants, besides hanging heavy fern baskets in every little bit of spare room—which of course, is possible with the iron frame construction.

The neat way in which they are built too, gives a pleasing effect to any park."

G. Janes.

GERANIUMS

MARYLAND Ever since we have been in the Geranium business we have endeavored to find a novelty on which we could stake our reputation. In this endeavor we have raised hundreds of seedlings ourselves and discarded innumerable very promising seedlings offered by others as not possessing the quality we desired should be in our first novelty. Several years ago we placed in the hands of an expert hybridizer certain stock from which we believed the desired results could be obtained, with instructions that he was to spare neither time nor expense to produce a variety that would embrace as far as possible all that was required in a Geranium:—Color, healthfulness, habit of growth and freedom of bloom and we have no hesitation in claiming that these qualities are all found in our novelty of 1914, the "Maryland."

The "Maryland" is the result of a cross between Alph. Ricard and LaPilote. In habit of growth it resembles the LaPilote, only much stronger, being more robust, vigorous and branching. The foliage is handsomely marked with a chocolate zone. The individual flowers are magnificent, semi-double, perfectly formed and of grand texture, being profusely produced in enormous trusses. The color is of the most intense dazzling fiery red, of such marvelous beauty that words are inadequate to accurately describe its wonderful coloring and the exquisite finish of the plant.

"Maryland" is a variety that we introduce to the Florist and the great mass of flower lovers with every confindence that it will, with its most pleasing habit and strong constitution, prove satisfactory in every way, and meet every requirement of a first-class Geranium.

Ready Jan. 1st, 1914, 50 cts. each. $5.00 per Doz.

SCARLET BEDDER In "Scarlet Bedder," introduced by Elmer D. Smith, of Adrian, Mich, in 1913, we have an ideal Scarlet Geranium in every sense of the word. It is an intermediate color between S. A. Nutt and Alph. Ricard but being brighter or approaching nearer to Scarlet than either of these. It is a short, stocky, sturdy grower, making flower stalks at almost every joint. It is necessary to pinch out the buds to get a good growth in pots. The trusses are medium size, not quite as large as Nutt, but any deficiency in size is more than made up in the number produced, as the bed will become literally covered with the bright scarlet flowers. In comparison with S. A. Nutt it is superior in every way, much freer in bloom, more brilliant in color and the habit of plant is more compact. During the past summer it has been tried out in all parts of the country as a bedder, and has done remarkably, giving universal satisfaction, and the general verdict is that it is the coming scarlet bedding Geranium.

Ready Jan. 1, 1914, $1.00 per Doz., $6.00 per. 100.

A PREJUDICED BUYER

is an expensive luxury to any modern business. The successful buyers in all lines first determine the kind of merchandise they want, and then buy that kind where they can buy it best. They don't accept anything "just as good" and are never misled by shrewd salesmen. Before you buy your lily bulbs ask yourself these questions: Shall I buy because of price? Shall I be influenced by Smith because he's a nice fellow, or Jones because I've bought there for thirty years? Does the purchase price of lily bulbs regulate the profit I can make out of them? You will then probably come to the conclusion that it does not pay to buy just because the price is low; that while you like Smith and Jones, neither one carries the grade your business requires; and that if you want to compete and make money, when it comes to lily bulbs, you had better buy Horseshoe Brand, because the bulbs packed under this brand come from the most highly cultivated and best fields in Japan, and are not packed under any other mark. Besides this the prices are reasonable and deliveries have always been made at the right time.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Callas

It is time to start callas. Roots that were grown in pots or benches last season, that have had a good rest and are now showing the beginning of a sturdy crown growth of a broad, hard button of yellowish green, are good for another season. Shake them out and replant into 5, 6, or 7-inch pots. For a compost use fibrous loam three parts, well decayed cow manure one part. See that each pot has good drainage and place them after they are potted in a cold frame where they can stay until the first week in September. When planting in a bench use a rich, heavy loam, and plant the roots a foot or a little more apart. If they are very long, lay them in a slanting position, always exposing the crown above ground. It is well to have the soil at planting rather moist, and if surfaced with a thin layer of moss or rotted manure, will stay moist until growth has made somewhat of a start. If this can be managed very little in the way of watering will become needful at this initial stage of growth.

Cinerarias

To be just about right with a batch of fine cinerarias in full bloom for next Easter, it is necessary to sow them now without delay. Mix up a compost of new loam two parts, peat or leaf mold two parts, and one part of sand. See that the pans are well drained with plenty of crocks. Upon the crocks spread some sphagnum moss and then fill the pans to within half an inch of the top, with the compost, but the last half-inch should be finely screened. Press the surface firm, absolutely level, water thoroughly and after they have drained out scatter seed all over the surface and cover each pan with a pane of glass. These pans should be placed immediately in a cold frame and kept moist and under heavy shading, to be made lighter after the plants are up. When they have their third or fourth leaf, plant into small pots or out free into a nicely prepared friable soil under frame protection.

Lilium Harrisii

If lilies of the Harrisii type are wanted for early flowering the bulbs should be planted as soon as you can get them. This lily holds again a most prominent place and is by many considered as valuable as any we grow for profit; especially for early flowering. Any good soil that does not contain green manure will do. It is best to place the bulbs entirely below the soil in planting, after a good watering has settled the soil, the tops to be just even with the surface and barely visible. Then stood closely together under a cool bench or in an outdoor frame, and covered with a thickness of two or three inches of sand, ashes or soil to hold evenness of moisture, the pots hardly ever need any further attention until renewed life shows, unless we happen to have a very dry spell when they should have some water.

Primulas for Late Winter and Spring

Now is a good time to make a sowing of primulas that will bloom good from the end of February and until Easter. From the date of sowing until the time of blooming, primulas usually require about seven months. If the seeds are soaked in water for a day and night, more even germination will be obtained. In sowing, use shallow boxes or seed pans filled not quite full with a mixture of light loam, leaf mold and sand. Cover the seeds with sand so that they will merely be out of sight. Place the seed pans in a temperature of about 60 to 70 degrees and keep them always shady and moist, never allowing the soil to become parched. If the seeds are fresh, which is of vital importance, the young seedlings will be ready for pricking out in five or six weeks from time of planting. For this, instead of pots, use flat boxes or seed pans filled with a mixture of one part of common soil and two parts of peat. Keep the plants in these flats or pans shady and continue same temperature as when germinating. When the young plants have three or four leaves, pot them in small pots, being careful to pot rather loosely and not too deep.

Sweet Peas for Early Winter Flowering

Sweet peas have been so greatly improved of late that it is possible to have them do fairly well during the early winter now. Procure the best known varieties in white, pink, lavender and scarlet which are among the best sellers. Sweet peas to do their best should be in a house by themselves and at least six feet headroom. Sod that was piled up last fall will make a very congenial soil to use. Make the compost rich by adding to every three loads of soil one load of well rotten cow manure and a pailfull bone dust. They will need at least four feet between the rows and do not sow the seed too thick. Use care in watering until the seeds begin to come through when they should be kept in a nice moist state. These plants like a syringing on all bright days. Keep them as cool as possible by giving plenty of ventilation both day and night and keep the surface between the rows stirred frequently.

Planting Roman Hyacinths

Roman hyacinths should be planted as soon as received. Do not use old worn-out soil, but give them a good compost of fibrous soil intermixed with about one-third well-decayed manure. After they are planted give them a very thorough watering. Where you have a bulb cellar you can place them there, but if not they can be put outside on a level piece of ground and covered all over about six inches with soil. If the weather remains dry they will need waterings at intervals.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Bulb Compost; Calceolarias; Carnations; Gardenias; Dendrobiums; Paper White Narcissi.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

The Boilers

It will not be so very long now until the artificial heat will be required to keep the temperature of the houses up to the mark, and then the worry and rushing because the boilers are not in shape, and new parts needed, and to make things worse there are many bad places in the pipes that will be blowing out as soon as the heat is turned on. Much of this can be avoided if the matter is taken in hand now, and the whole system well overhauled and put into first-class condition by the time fall sets in. Begin with the boilers. If they have not had their cleaning and their dose of oil, clean them all thoroughly, and apply the oil. Any oil will do, although fish oil is generally used, as it is the cheapest and goes further than any other oil. Now see that all parts of the boiler are sound and will carry through the coming winter. Any parts that are rather doubtful had better be replaced at once, or if the part is not very difficult to replace order it so as to have it ready, and then let the part stay until it breaks when it can be removed and the new part inserted. We would much rather replace all poor parts at once and thus do away with all worry and work at the unseasonable time of the year that this would happen. Then go over the mains and finally over the returns and coils in the houses. After a thorough overhauling it is not a bad idea to start the boilers and make sure that all is O. K. and in good working order. This seems like an awful lot of trouble, but it is nothing compared to the anxiety and worry caused by a break in the pipes in midwinter. Another good thing to make and have constantly on hand, are large wooden plugs that will fit all the different sized pipes on the place. Then if a break occurs in spite of all precautions one of the plugs can be driven into the pipe, and will hold the hot water until the break can be repaired and the heat turned on again.

Grates

Do not try to save money by leaving the old broken-down grates in the boilers for another season. That is poor economy to say the least, for poor grates will waste more coal than a half dozen careless firemen. With the constantly decreasing prices for cut flowers, and the constantly increasing expenses, to economize in the right way is a great help in making places pay neat dividends, and bringing fair returns to all who labor thereon.

Crimson Clover

Now is about the right time to sow the crimson clover that is to be plowed under next spring as a manure for the sod lot. Nothing like working ahead all the time to make sure that the supply of this essential will not give out. It is not a very good idea to put old greenhouse soil on the ground that is to be used for sod very soon as it is likely to contain certain fungi that may have a bad effect on the welfare of the plants when they are finally planted in this soil. Not that it is impossible to produce good stock with old soil. Many growers have to use old soil over and over again but where virgin soil is to be gotten, never use any old soil at all. A little lime applied to the land and harrowed in will greatly help the clover and will also help the soil. Another dose may be applied just before plowing this clover in, as it will then help decompose it, and put the soil in a much better condition to receive the plants.

Cutting from the Young Plants

Do not be in too much of a hurry to cut long stems from the young plants. Give them plenty of chance to make headway, always leaving at least one shoot on the plant uncut. This applies to Beauties; with Teas it is somewhat different, for they come in crops more or less, and when one plant is cut off clean the others will likely be the same. Should it happen that the surrounding plants are all growing, do not cut off one plant altogether, but pinch one or two shoots to give it a chance with the others.

Pinching for Long Stems

This hardly pays commercially as the short-stemmed roses sell much better than the longer stemmed grades. But on many places where only long stemmed are wanted pinching will give the long stems desired. To accomplish this without harm to the plants or the cut bloom, pinch the buds out when they are still very small, so small that they can just be seen. Usually the shoot will then continue to grow right on and there will be but little difference in the hardness of the wood from the lower part of the stem to the bud. If the bud is allowed to develop to any size before it is pinched, it will cause the shoot to stop growing for a while and then start, thus making a joint. In the early part of the season there is no objection to this but later when the wood becomes exceedingly hard, water will not flow through this joint as freely as it ought to, and when the cut blooms are placed in a shallow vase, in a hot room, they are very apt to wilt above the joint, for the evaporation through the foliage and petals is much greater than the supply of incoming moisture through the stem from the vase.

Vacation Time

It is very nice indeed to have a vacation and realize the dreams of the seashore, the mountain resort, or other pleasures sought at these times. But how often it is spoiled by thoughts of the duties neglected or left undone that vacation may be made possible! Perhaps not so very often after all and yet the man who cares and to whom the work is a pleasure and the production of prize-winning stock an interesting game will never enjoy his outing if he feels that all is not as it should be at home. The only way to have a right good time, is to have all work done on time, and have it all done well, and then an outing is certainly enjoyable. To go out having to feel that work has been neglected is worse

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

George H. Penson

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Penson. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Fruit Rooms

Through the recent hot weather the great advantage of possessing a good fruit room will have been very apparent. Not only greenhouse-grown fruit but all fruit will keep longer if the conditions are made right for it, and no place has the equal of a properly constructed fruit room. What satisfaction there is in knowing the fruit is good to keep for several days after gathering! Or it may be some of the fruit from the houses has to be cut and is good to keep here for quite a while. Many we know resort to the ice box but our experience has taught us that an extended stay on the ice causes fruit to lose its flavor and a second (perhaps greater) detriment is that they are more easily bruised. You will also notice how a melon, for instance, will sweat after being removed from the ice box to a warmer room. Comparing an ice box to a fruitroom we find a great difference in the atmosphere. Both are cool yet the one is a dry air while the other is very wet. One of the chief aims when building a fruit room should be to make provision for keeping the room moderately dry through the damp weather. I say moderately dry because this dryness can be overdone and the fruit will shrivel instead of keeping good and firm. A single line of hot water pipes placed near the bottom of the outside walls will keep the room dry enough. Hot water is preferable to steam heat as it is not so erratic and will stand even for a considerable length of time. The building itself offers a great variety of architectural possibilities when building, from the plainest looking building to something very fancy and ornamental. Whatever form it takes do not sacrifice any of the essential points inside to gain in appearance on the outside. The walls should be thick enough or—better still—contain an air chamber to nullify the quick changes of outside temperatures. The roof should be made of material that does not attract the sun. In some instances water towers have been built over them and the whole thing made to look very good. In Scotland many use a thatch of heather and some places in England still possess the straw-thatched fruit rooms. The interior offers just as large a scope for fitting up as the exterior does in building, from glazed brick walls, enameled fittings and glass shelves down to the roughest shelving. A good layout of such a room would be to erect shelves not more than 3 ft., 6 in. wide around the sides having a 2 ft. 6 in. elevation. This will make it easy to look over the fruit that is stored for any length of time, detecting any that may be going wrong. These shelves would store apples and pears well. If grapes have to be kept as late as possible make provisions for the bottles to be hung on a properly constructed rack in the center of the room, utilizing the remaining space for shelving as on the sides. Have a packing table plenty large enough to accommodate the amount of fruit to be handled, with packing material near at hand. Do not cut the walks down to a minimum or you will repeatedly regret it, as baskets, trays, etc., will always seem to be in the way, getting upset or otherwise damaged. Careful handling of all fruit is the keynote to good keeping. No matter what the reputation of any variety for keeping, if it is handled roughly it will soon start to decay and be a menace to any fruit near it.

Mildew

With the cooler evenings now coming on we shall soon see signs of mildew, especially in vineries that have finished and are standing wide open. As I have remarked before some districts are more susceptible to this trouble than others and lucky are those that do not know of its existence. Although there is nothing to be feared as there would be in the spring do not let it run ahead just as it pleases. Young vineries growing up for the first year will be liable to get it as the air is steadily increased on them. Use sulphur in the same form as during the trying spring months, either by blowing it on to the affected parts with bellows, using any of the various fumigaters on the market, or if there is steam in the house, turn it on for an hour and paint a little at intervals on the pipe. An hour will be long enough to keep the house shut up and will kill all the spores.

than staying at home and doing it, for then you at least have a peaceful mind.

The Pots

Now that all the planting is done get right after the pots. It may be too hot to work in the houses but it is not too hot to wash pots. Places where all pots are washed by machinery will generally make a quick job of it, and it is a wonder that more places do not have such things as the electric motor to run all the different machines that are operated by hand. It is surprising how much labor can thus be saved, which can be directed in another way and bring double the results. Be sure to sort out all the different sized pots and now is the time to do it. A most important part of the pots often left unwashed is a ring right around the top where the surface of the soil would be when a plant is potted. This little ring of green is very good seed indeed, and will quickly spread all over the pot if allowed to remain. Therefore be careful to have the pot perfectly clean on the inside at least, although the cleaner they are the better. First prize stock is seldom grown in dirty green pots that have never been washed.

SWEET PEAS

This summer with its prolonged drouth has been very trying for the sweet pea as even where the facilities are at hand for giving copious waterings it never seems to exactly take the place of a good rainfall. With us diseases of several kinds have been a little more common than in the past and we suffered from a hard frost on May 9th. These notes, however, are to deal more with the quality of the several varieties and are written now while everything is fresh in mind to help the readers of HORTICULTURE in selecting their varieties for next year. We are fortunately placed for doing this as we grow about a hundred varieties of what we conceived at the beginning of the year to be the best of the newer kinds. Taking the colors separately I shall mark those of superb quality with two asterisks () and those that are very good with one; I propose to name all the varieties we have grown so that the reader may see the kinds between which the comparison is made as of course there may be others of extra fine quality of which the writer has never heard.

CERASTIUM

Belonging to the order Caryophylleae, cerastiums are low-growing Alpine plants distinguished by silvery or grayish white, wooly or hoary foliage. As garden perennials they prove useful for edging on herbacous borders and may be employed to cover ground surface on said sunny slopes. I have also found them valuable for dry-wall planting, but by far the most congenial conditions for their perfect development and effect, the rock garden usually offers. Of the six species known to horticulturists Cerastium Bibersteini, with grayish white leaves, a native of the Caucasus Mountains; Cerastium grandiflorum, silvery white large-flowering type of strong growth, about six inches tall, hailing from the Balkan districts, and the old-time Cerastium tomentosum, frequently used for carpet-bedding, merit general attention. Thriving best in light sandy soil they respond readily to a reasonable amount of care. During May when in full array of countless blossoms, plantations appear strikingly handsome. Our frontispiece, a reproduction of a photograph taken in the rockgarden of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., in Riverton, N. J., last spring, gives a fair idea of the effect of the species tomentosum. Cerastiums can be raised from seed and propagated by cuttings and divisions in spring or fall.

Riverton, N. J. Richard Rothe

LILIUM SARGENTIAE

No picture, however good, can do full justice to this superb lily collected by Mr. E. H. Wilson in Western China and now being introduced to Amer can garden lovers and the horticultural trade by R. & J. Farquhar & Co., of Boston, Mass. The flower is pure white with a bronzy flush on the outside, of enormous size and as here shown the plant is of remarkably sturdy growth and bears its blooms in great profusion. The plants form little bulbils in the axils of the leaves as with Lilium tigrinum. For large decorative effect in florists' work no lily can excel this newcomer and it has the advantage of a pleasant odor not oppressive in the least. It is absolutely hardy in New England gardens and coming as it does, after the elegans group, myriophyllum, etc., and before the speciosums and other late bloomers, it bridges over the summer gap in a manner that makes lilies in the garden a continuous possibility from July till fall.

Affiliation

The frequent allusion to the advantages of "affiliation" between the S. A. F. and other organizations, by men active in the affairs of these bodies, would indicate that this topic will be one of the most discussed questions at Minneapolis. One fault with convention debate on far-reaching problems of this character is one is that they are apt to be short-viewed and the ultimate success of their agitation is frequently weakened by the acts and declarations of the most zealous of supporters, so that ways and means carefully and with great effort matured by those who have given long time and much thought to the subject are sometimes badly deranged and thus the sincerest friends of a movement really stand in the way of its realization because of unconsidered yielding to or urging relatively unimportant details and expedients of the moment. We certainly hope this important subject may come before the convention in some well-thought-out committee report and that the men who have done the thinking may be on deck to fully explain the "why and wherefore."

To safeguard parcel post

Our editorial "Parcel Post Menaced" in last week's issue has received much favorable comment from our readers. One letter from a prominent florist in Albany, N. Y., is so particularly pleasing that we reproduce it here.

Dear Sir:— August 5, 1913.

Referring to your editorial in the last issue of HORTICULTURE in reference to the Parcel Post I have taken this matter up with our Congressman in such a way that I think things will be left as they were with the increase in weight, of course, that we desire. I know that Congressman Ten Eyck will take care of us and if there is anything more I can do in this line, why let me know.

Yours very truly,
WILLIAM C. GLOECKNER.

Simultaneously there appeared in the Knickerbocker Press of Albany an article editorially approving the sentiments expressed in HORTICULTURE on this subject and voicing the anxiety of the merchants of Albany that no interference with the development of Parcel Post be tolerated. We hope that many more florists in every congressional district of the country will promptly emulate and vigorously follow suit to Mr. Gloeckner's timely action.

A good substitute for an experimental garden

Our news notes during the summer months make frequent mention of the visits of the garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society to interesting private estates or commercial horticultural establishments in eastern New England. This committee has been more active this season than in any recent year, President Farquhar having strong views on the great value of this particular branch of the Society's activities. This committee has been held in very high esteem from the early days of the Society's existence. We find in Robert Manning's History of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society frequent reference to its work. In the year 1856 the garden committee was very active, visiting many places of note. Mr. Manning quotes from the report of the committee for that year as follows:

"The Committee cannot close this report without expressing their high approval of this portion of the Society's labors. A spur and new life have been given to horticulture, and a laudable ambition and emulation encouraged. The rich specimens of fruit which adorn our tables, and compete for the prizes, are now, in most instances, but fair and true representatives of the gardens from which they come, and need not be ashamed of the places where they grew. We are happy to believe that the pleasure and satisfaction of these visits have been mutual. Few persons are without the desire for praise or approval, which it is always a satisfaction to receive from those considered best competent to judge, and having official position. The awarding of liberal premiums, and a careful inspection, when invited, of the numerous and increasing gardens dotted over this Commonwealth, may be justly considered a good substitute for an experimental garden (one of the early objects of this Society,) and perhaps is the best method of expending our funds for the promotion of horticulture and improved gardening."

The committee nowadays does not wait for an invitation always but sometimes makes visits of its own choosing. Its awards are much coveted.

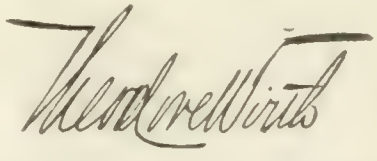
CONVENTION TOPICS

Our Duty to one Another

Are all the many advantages of our conventions and trade exhibits understood and recognized, and are we all doing our share to advance those advantages for the common good of the trade in general?

This question has undoubtedly presented itself to all who make it a practice to attend the S. A. F. and O. H. conventions regularly or at intervals, and no one will undertake to answer same in the affirmative. True, we are progressing continuously, but we do not, in fact not even a majority of us, show the spirit which should enthuse us to really great work. More of the many men who, through their own personal achievements, are prosperous and have won for themselves positions of prominence in the trade, and power and influence amongst the craft and fellow citizens, should recognize that to the trade, through which they have gained the position they enjoy in life, belongs a certain amount of support, assistance and sacrifice which they do not now give in full share. This is true, notwithstanding the fact that there is no body of men who, as a whole, can cancel the spirit of friendship, good-will and comradeship as it exists among the horticulturists, not only in the states, but all over the world. Such friendship and good will, however, do not accomplish all they are capable of unless we employ them in a more telling and effective manner in some of our business relations amongst ourselves and with our trade in general. I believe that the speaker at a recent meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia was entirely right in saying that "we do not always give each other the square deal," and his remarks which were dealing in the main with existing relations between growers and retailers, can well be applied and are equally true in a still broader sense when we consider the relations between the craft as a whole, and our endeavors to advance and explore to the fullest extent our large and ever promising field of work.

An Opportunity Neglected



The truth of this fact is well demonstrated through the comparatively small interest shown by the growers and dealers of this country in the undertaking of an outdoor exhibit in connection with the coming convention. No better opportunity has ever been offered to any grower or dealer to display his plants adapted for outdoor culture, than the garden now planted, which from a cultural point of view is now in a very promising condition. The expense for space was very low and the assurance given for the proper care, cultivation and protection of the exhibits could not have been made more satisfactory.

The benefits of such exhibits are manifold and must be clear to all progressive and wide-awake horticulturists. From a strictly business point of view they cannot help but be a good advertisement. They are an education to the craft as a whole, and also to the public in general, whose love and understanding of plants and flowers are well worth stimulating and cultivating. What better means can we employ to call attention to good, meritorious novelties, and to make comparisons between classes and varieties of plants? In what better way can we demonstrate the achievements of our skill and our endeavors—not so much amongst ourselves as to the public whose servants we are, must be, and want to be.

Every horticulturist should be willing to contribute his share and sacrifice to gain the attention of the public to the work and accomplishments of our noble profession and to do this he should be able and willing to give a page in his ledger for the intrinsic value of his goods and forget for a moment the grind of the dollar.

The answers to our appeal for exhibits received from some of the leading firms, and the marked indifference shown by the great majority of growers and dealers, is, to say the least, discouraging, and not very creditable to the craft as a whole. Out of the thirty-one exhibitors in the Convention Garden, seventeen are outsiders, and fourteen local concerns who came to the front to help make the garden a success.

The only reasonable excuse for the lack of better support for this undertaking is that it is a new venture in connection with our convention. Good weather prevailing, the success of this Exhibition Garden is assured, and it is hoped same will result in similar displays at future conventions, to which the trade will surely give better support.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS AND ORNAMENTAL HORTICULTURISTS

Twenty-Ninth Annual Meeting and Exhibition

A state of preparedness for the Convention of the S. A. F. & O. H. may be said to exist at this time—the beginning of the Convention month. All the local committees have been and are working in harmony, and all details are so arranged that no one expects the slightest hitch to occur during convention week.

The main hall of the Armory, where the trade exhibits are to be located, is ideal for exhibition purposes. The plantings in the outdoor exhibition have progressed well, and should be just right when the convention opens.

Intending visitors should avoid the possibility of disappointment in obtaining hotel accommodation to their liking by making room reservations at once. Minneapolis has many good hotels, but at this time of the year they are generally well patronized by tourists, hence the wisdom of booking accommodations early.

The halls and rooms where the Convention sessions, committee meetings, and society meetings will be held, are pleasant and well adapted for meeting purposes. Hours for all meetings have been arranged with a view to avoid confliction with general functions.

Great preparation has been made to care for the comfort and pleasure of the visiting ladies. The Minnikahda Club, where the luncheon will be given on the Wednesday afternoon, is one of the attractions of Minneapolis. The ladies' trip to St. Paul on Friday, starting at 9.15 A. M., instead of 10 A. M., as mentioned in the program, will be made by trolley instead of automobiles. On arrival in St. Paul the visitors will be taken in automobiles on a trip through the city and its surroundings, returning to Hotel Radisson, Minneapolis, at 5 P. M. The St. Paul boys are making every endeavor to ensure that this day shall be a red letter one.

Tonka Bay, where the outing will be held, is a lovely place, and nothing will be left undone which will in any way contribute to the pleasure and comfort of the guests. One of the commodious boats plying on Lake Minnetonka has been chartered, and it will make hourly trips around the lake, affording opportunity for a sight of the many beautiful residences on the shores of this beautiful body of water. Arrangements have been made for a series of water sports, in addition to the sports on shore as outlined in the program. There will also be plenty of opportunities for boating, fishing and bathing. There is a splendid bathing beach and excellent grounds for the sports and ball game.

The bowlers have been well provided for. Fourteen of the best alleys in the country, centrally located, are at the service of all who wish to take part in the bowling tournament.

The local committees, headed by Vice-President Wirth, have worked hard on the preparations for the Convention, and deserve every success. It will not be their fault if the 1913 Convention does not pass as one of the most enjoyable and instructive in the history of the Society. Your Secretary has been privileged to be among the workers for a month or more in advance of the Convention, and is deeply impressed by the enthusiasm displayed. He is delighted with the city as a Convention city, its attractions are so many. With its beautiful lakes, parks, and miles of boulevards, it is well worth a visit at any time, whether a visitor come from the far East or the far West. What, then, will it prove to the florists, who will come in their numbers, and in addition to the beauties of the city that fraternal spirit which characterizes all our Conventions and results in friendships that are only broken by our passing over the border which we all must pass?

No one who is able to go to Minneapolis should miss the opportunity to do so, for the city is one of the most beautiful in the United States, and its florists from one of the most generous and courteous sets of men to be met with anywhere, men whose particular aim at this time is to do everything that could possibly be done to make our Convention the success it is bound to be.

Minneapolis is justly entitled to the name "City of Homes."

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

August 1, 1913.

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

Dear Fellow Member:—

Of course, you are going to the Minneapolis Convention.

I say "of course," because the convention is going to be so full of delightful possibilities, that you and the other members of your family including ladies, can't afford not to afford to go. The club committee have asked me to be sure to ask you and your friends to join our party and go out with us in our special car. We are all certain to have a jolly time. All the various comforts that go to make such a trip a pleasure have been looked after very carefully.

The railroad fare one way will be $27.80 and the round trip fare by rail will be $54.20. This does not include the charge each way of $5.60 for upper berth, or $7.00 for lower. If you are considering coming back by boat, you will find the cost, etc. in the "Official Tour" folder, which fully describes everything about the trip.

We want you to go with us. Don't delay in writing your decision. Send along the money so I can make your reservation. None can be made without it. Don't do as some of the boys did last year—put off sending word until the last minute, and then feel put out because the special car was full.

Yours very truly,
THOS. B. DE FOREST, Sec'y.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

At the meeting of the Detroit Florist Club, August 4, J. R. Stock, who grows a great number of fancy gladioli, showed a wonderful specimen of gladiolus Europe, a pure white variety from Holland. The club meets now regularly at the establishment of A. Pochelon. The following officers for the coming year were elected as follows: President, Frank Danzer; vice-president, Alb. Pochelon; secretary, Ral. Wells; treasurer, Rob. Rahaley.

The monthly meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held in the Town Hall, Lenox, Mass., on Saturday, August 2nd. A vote of thanks was accorded to Ed. Jenkins for an exhibit of three new varieties of sweet peas—namely, Burpee's Seedling, King White and Floradale Fairy. August 13th was fixed as the date for the annual field day. The summer show, which falls due on the 20th and 21st, was freely discussed, and Messrs. Harry Allan and Walter Angus are the judges.

JOHN MAIR, Ass't Sec'y.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

MARYLAND-DELAWARE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETIES.

The joint summer meeting of the Maryland and Delaware Horticultural Societies was held at the home of J. G. Harrison & Sons, Berlin, Md., today. The meeting was largely attended, there being between 1200 to 1500 present with representatives from Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York, the membership of the societies of these representative states being invited by the hosts and the Maryland and Delaware Societies. The main object of a summer meeting is to permit the members of the societies to observe practical horticultural development and at the home of this notable firm can be seen trees from their earliest stage as seedlings, then budded on improved varieties to produce successful nursery trees and in turn develop into profitable orchards. One of the most striking demonstrations to be observed at this place is the remarkable peach crop on 10,000 peach trees which have been saved by a successful treatment of spraying under the auspices of the School of Horticulture, Maryland Agricultural College, to prevent the loss of the fruit by fungus disease known as "brown rot." The rot was so persistent that it was necessary to continue spraying the trees for more than three weeks at a time during the early stages of the fruit, but under the careful supervision of the School of Horticulture and thorough co-operation of the firm, a most successful crop of peaches has been produced amounting to over 35,000 baskets of fancy marketable fruit.

The visitors were cordially met by the representatives of the Associations, the firm of J. G. Harrison & Sons and invited to dinner, after which a brief formal meeting was held. President E. P. Cohill of the Maryland Society was unable to be present on account of sickness and in his place Vice-President Robert L. Graham of Baltimore City presided. Hon. Orlando Harrison extended in a few well chosen remarks, a hearty welcome to the visitors. A response was given by W. E. Sanger, president of the Peninsular Horticultural Society. Dr. H. J. Patterson, president of the Maryland Agricultural College made a few remarks, expressing his gratification at the remarkable progress that has been made in the general horticultural industry on the peninsular. He pointed out where the agricultural college is trying to do its best to promote the development of this industry and expressing a hope that the institution would in the future be able to do much more. Prof. T. B. Symons, Dean of the School of Horticulture and Secretary of the Horticultural Society, made a few remarks calling the attention of those present to the annual meeting of the Maryland Society which will be held at the Fifth Regiment Armory, Baltimore, November 17 to 22. After having a most delightful day the visitors repaired to Ocean City to enjoy an evening on Maryland's most famous beach.

SOUTHAMPTON (N. Y.) HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

This Society is planning now for its Exhibition. Overlooking the fact that we have had a very dry season, it promises to go ahead of any exhibition we have had, both as to quantity and quality. This being called the Newport of Long Island, we have many wealthy summer residents from various states. There is a strong competition among them and their respective gardeners are furnished with money and other facilities to produce the best. Some of them give their gardener a handsome sum for each first prize they obtain and a smaller amount for each second prize, thus making it of double interest to the gardener to do his best.

We will pitch our tent this year on a plot that has been especially prepared and graded in Prospect Park, near Lake Agawam. Our president, Julius King, is head gardener on the estate of the late Salem H. Wales, and also the adjoining summer place of Hon. Elihu Root. Our secretary, Mr. Palmer, is a man who puts his energies into anything he takes in hand. Our financial secretary, F. Smith, is head gardener at the Meadow Club, where they demand the best in everything. He always adds much to our exhibition and carries off many prizes. We have several large summer residences here and I may speak about some of them later, but if you can, come and see them for yourself.

D. T. Wells,
Corresponding Secretary.

FLORISTS' CLUB OF PHILADELPHIA.

The August meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, held on the 5th inst., was fairly well attended for a mid-summer event. Routine business of little public interest took up most of the time. The only ripple of liveliness arose over the propriety of the Club's extending an invitation to the S. A. F. to hold its next International Show in Philadelphia. Most of the members expressed themselves as perfectly willing to shoulder the responsibility and quite confident of carrying the big affair through on the same high standards as set by Chicago, Boston and New York. But there is one initial difficulty which up to the present seems insoluble, and that is that Philadelphia has no suitable building available. The matter was finally left open so that if any new solution of the difficulty turned up a special meeting might be called and appropriate action taken. From present indications the party from Philadelphia to Minneapolis will not be large. Chairman Westcott reported that the 10.25 A. M. from Broad street on the 17th, allowed them an hour in Pittsburgh for supper, etc., and a day in Chicago to visit friends. From Chicago the intention is to join the New York and Boston delegations. Of course, a good many Philadelphians go on ahead to prepare their exhibits. Among the firms who will have interesting displays are the Robert Craig Co., Henry A. Dreer, Joseph Heacock Co., Pennock-Meehan Co., M. Rice Co., H. F. Michell Co., and H. Bayersdorfer & Co. Nothing has been heard of a bowling team this year, so that if Philadelphia is represented in that line it will have to be by a scratch aggregation and not by the usual bunch of picked experts.

STORM IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

A 70-mile-an-hour wind, accompanied by hail and rain and a drop in the temperature of over thirty degrees, did damage approximating $250,000 in less than half an hour. Trees two feet and more in diameter in the White House grounds and the public parks were lifted up by the roots and everywhere blooming plants were destroyed. The storm seemed to center in the northwest section, although all parts of the city suffered to a greater or lesser extent. On the property of George Field, on Georgia avenue, about one hundred boxes of glass was destroyed. A large rose house was blown down and while all of the other houses will be repaired, this one will not be rebuilt. The wind and hail threatened to destroy his orchids, but the wrapping of the plants in cotton batting prevented this additional loss.

The grounds of William F. Gude, which are located nearby, also showed considerable wreckage, for the Japanese pagoda and the rose arbor were demolished. The galvanized iron supports of these, set in cement blocks running fifteen inches below the surface of the ground, were pulled up by the roots; large trees on the lawn were splintered and ferns and other potted plants on the porches around the house were blown across the lawn. Nearly all of the windows on the north side of the house were blown in.

In the downtown section, the large plate glass window in the new building of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Company, at 1216 H street, was splintered. A gust of wind split one of the larger windows of the store of Z. D. Blackistone, at Fourteenth and H streets, across the center and another gust deposited the upper portion in back of the lower within the store. At about the same time a smaller window was also blown in. Florists in Anacostia, D. C., and in Alexandria, Va., also suffered the loss of glass in varying amounts.

A large section of grill-work, 20 feet long, about three feet high and nearly a foot in thickness on top of the store of O. A. C. Oehmler, 1329 G street, N. W., was thrown into the street within a few feet of where Mr. Oehmler was standing and the roof of an adjoining building was also blown away.

ARE STANDARDS OF PURITY PRACTICABLE IN SEED LAWS?

A Paper Read by George S. Green Before the American Seed Trade Association, June, 1913.

I have agreed with our President to open this subject for discussion, and not to prepare an exhaustive study of it. The title of the paper, as printed in the program, was selected for me, and not by myself, but really it is too narrow to cover the questions at issue with regard to seed legislation, and I think discussion should go into the general features of practicable seed legislation and not be confined to the question of standards of purity.

Laws Wise and Unwise.

My opinion as to the proper province of criminal law is, that it should be invoked only to punish or restrain the man who has done, or would do serious injury to his neighbor or to society at large. Laws which hamper or restrict the action of the man who is, upon the whole, performing useful service to society may easily do more harm than good, unless very carefully considered. Progress toward perfection in human conduct will always come rather from the growth of better ideals in individuals and in the community than from the compulsion of law.

Some well-meaning but unwise reformers think that law should so closely hedge about the conduct of individuals that any slight departure from their own ideals will be met with severe punishment. Laws based upon such ideals frequently are faulty because natural conditions prevent their enforcement.

Any law which is unenforced or unenforceable, works a great injustice against the law-abiding man who tries to conform to burdensome or impossible conditions only to find the law is dead, and does not, and cannot regulate the conduct of his less scrupulous or less careful competitor.

Absurd Standards.

Many seed laws have been proposed, and some of them passed, which have established standards of purity so high that it has been impossible to produce or re-clean seeds in quantity so that they would conform to the law. In some instances the first official act of officers charged with the enforcement of the law has been to practically nullify portions of the law, because they could not be enforced. Such standards of purity are absurd and should never again be incorporated in a law. Every such law enacted defeats and delays that reasonable regulation of the seed business which will undoubtedly sometime be in effect in most of the states. A reasonable standard of purity to which seedsmen having proper equipment can conform, is probably a wise and proper provision of a seed law, but it is my belief that when seeds have been cleaned to such a standard they should be salable in any and all states, without tags or restrictions of any kind. Seeds below this standard should be tagged with reasonably full information, showing the relatively low grade of the seed, and a second and lower standard might also be provided, and the sale of the seeds below this standard prohibited. The Iowa seed law is constructed somewhat along these lines, and it has probably been the most effective and beneficial law in force in any of the states. If some of the defects of the Iowa law could be corrected, and if it could then be made the law of every state of the Union, seedsmen would know how to conduct their business, the farmer would be protected and the general food of agriculture conserved.

The trouble from which seedsmen suffer most now is the multiplicity and variety of standards, and of laws. Standards too high, standards too low, standards wise, standards foolish, germination standards, tags in many styles and sizes, licenses, requirements to state the place of growth, the year of growth, the purity by count the exact percentage of each and every impurity in every parcel, of seed; all these confront the seedsmen doing a general business. As yet no eminent lawmaker has proposed that each and every seed shall be labeled with all these facts, but the decade is still young and the brains of the lawmakers busy.

The "Boston Bill."

If, in some way, we could secure one reasonable, sensible, effective law which could be enacted in each and every state, repealing existing legislation, and be backed up by appropriations sufficiently large to fully enforce it, I believe reliable seedsmen would have much cause for congratulation.

It has now been three and a half years since the date of the Boston meeting between seed analysts and seedsmen. The so-called "Boston Bill" was the result of that meeting and was a compromise between those of us who favored a law with a reasonable standard of purity and those who wanted every package of seed tagged. "Boston Bill" seemed to be quite a lusty infant at the time of his birth, but he hasn't grown much. He now looks to me like an orphan, and I question whether the seed analysts who helped with his "borning" will do much more for "Boston Bill."

The "Boston Bill" proposed no standards of purity, except freedom from certain obnoxious weeds, but since the date of the Boston meeting a number of state laws have been passed, most of which, I think, have established standards of purity, and many of which have established standards of germination.

Germination Standards.

You all know how we seedsman regard the requirement of some laws that seeds sold shall be labeled to show their germination. The testimony of nearly all seed expert analysts is against the reasonableness of such requirements, and practically all seedsmen and the most conservative seed analysts are agreed upon the fact that wide variations in tests on duplicate samples are obtained from well equipped and reliable testing stations. This fact, of itself, makes a germination clause in any seed law highly objectionable. It is like a law providing that goods must be sold by the yard, subject to test by an elastic yard-stick, which may vary all the way from 20 to 36 inches in length. It the people interested in the improvement of agricultural conditions will start a propaganda which will induce the farmer to test the germination of all seeds he uses in the same way that he has recently been testing his seed corn, this vexing question of germination in seed laws would soon be disposed of, for the reason that the occasional seedsman who is not careful to sell only seeds of reasonably high germination would very soon be put out of business. There would then be no more complaint on this score, and no more demand for such provisions in a seed law. In a case where it is so easily possible for the buyer to protect himself against fraud it seems unnecessary to burden the statute books of our states with legislation so difficult of enforcement, so uncertain in application, and so unfair to seedsmen as any law dealing with germination of seed must be. I feel that I am well within the facts when I assert that much over 99 per cent of the field seeds now sold by reputable seedsmen are of sufficiently high germination to produce a good stand when sown on a properly prepared seed bed, with reasonably favorable weather conditions. To subject a trade with such a record as this to the inconvenience and injustice attending a germination requirement seems unwise when the means of preventing a very occasional fraud lies so easily within the reach of every buyer.

Purity Standards.

I know that there are many serious objections which may be urged against standards of purity, but if we could have uniform laws containing standards somewhat similar to those contained in the Iowa law, and could have free and unrestricted trade in seeds above these standards, I believe the advantages to the trade would far outweigh the disadvantages. I believe the lack of standards of purity in the Boston Bill has been one reason for its not being more generally acceptable to legislators and to state seed officials. The Boston Bill has many excellent provisions which should be contained in any workable seed law, but I believe the Bill should be re-written to include standards of purity such as I have suggested, and should then be introduced and aggressively pushed in the legislature of every state at the earliest opportunity. The time for delay has passed, and if we can line up a united support among the seed trade for an aggressive and progressive fight in favor of reasonable legislation, and not confine ourselves to an obstructive and negative attitude, I believe we can accomplish more good for the future of the seed trade in the next two years than we can ever hope for under our present program. It is only necessary to enumerate the highly unsatisfactory seed laws, which have been passed during the past year in many states, to realize that the fight has been going against us.

JOHN G. ESLER, Secretary.

It is now almost impossible to determine, without very careful laboratory and legal investigation, whether any special parcel of seed may be offered and sold within certain populous and important states.

Good Bills and Bad.

Time is so important an element in the conduct of our business that we are very seriously hampered by the fact that these investigations take so much time that the opportunity for the sale of the goods is frequently lost before the necessary tests are completed. These conditions should be changed and if we want them changed for the better, and not for the worse, I believe we should start a genuine and wholesouled campaign in favor of proper and reasonable seed legislation. We should prove our faith by our deeds and put fair and honest seed laws into the hands of legislators who will agree to introduce the bills. We should explain the merits of these bills to seed officials and to agricultural committees, write letters to our correspondents asking their help, and really get behind and push the good work.

The people naturally distrust the men who oppose all reform measures affecting their business and yet offer nothing to correct the alleged abuses at which these measures are aimed. This attitude gives an untold and unfortunate advantage to the dreaming theorist who tries to bring down Heaven upon Earth by lassoing angels and cherubs, not realizing that every little street gamin has much of the angel in him if you will only give it room to grow.

The man who makes an unreasonable seed law isn't always a bad fellow, but he may not know much about the seed business. Let's hunt him up and tell him where he is wrong and what we can offer toward making a start at correcting those things in our business, which he believes to be wrong.

A Success.

When I offered the first draft of the Import Seed Bill for the consideration of the trade, five or six years ago, I received but little encouragement. Many of you feared that if we offered this Bill it would be amended until we would not know it. Your apprehension seemed justified by Senator Gronna's proposed amendments, but perseverance and team work finally brought success, and I think if those of us who have, at various times, helped toward the enactment of that law, had never done anything else for the good of our country, we might rest content in the knowledge that because of this law our country will, in the years to come, have fewer weeds and more clover blossoms.

Let us now take up in the same spirit the question of state laws and make an earnest and continous endeavor to do something worth while for the permanent good of American agriculture, by checking the sale of, and discouraging the use of inferior or harmful qualities of field weeds.

Even if, for a time, it may seem that such effort is, in some respects, contrary to our interest it will eventually benefit us and bring to us the personal satisfaction of having acted for the general good. Let us, in seed legislation matters, adopt the hackneyed but worthy motto: "Look up, and not down; forward and not backward, and lend a hand."

NEWS NOTES.

Boston, Mass.—The Massachusetts Horticultural Society will hold an exhibition of gladioli and phlox, Saturday and Sunday, August 9th and 10th. Other flowers, besides fruits and vegetables, will also be shown.

Rugby, N. D.—The "Rugby Greenhouse," N. P. Lindberg, proprietor, has now completed office building, boiler room and palm and fern and plant display houses and are now breaking ground for three more greenhouses, 83½ feet long.

Boston, Mass.—Wm. C. Bowditch has been awarded the sum of $3,600 for damages to the contents of his greenhouses on Warren street, Roxbury, caused by gas from a broken service pipe. Both the city of Boston and the Brookline Gas Light Co. are held liable in the sum of $1,800 each.

Millville, N. J.—The lease on the florist establishment of Mrs. Rae Henderson, on Seventh street, which was held by Ralph Parent was sold July 24th and was bought by Mrs. Henderson, which will thereby terminate the lease which would have expired next October. Mrs. Henderson is now in sole possession of the property.

Detroit—A very heavy rainstorm accompanied by a cyclonic gale last week destroyed the greenhouse plant of Geo. Browne. We all sympathize with him and his family most sincerely. His brother, Thos. Browne, with a much larger establishment next to him, only lost the lights out of the ventilators from five houses. Woodmere sent out a report that much damage has been done by hail coming from the same storm, yet this cannot be verified because all telephone service is cut off. Let us hope that damage is small.

BODDINGTON'S "QUALITY" CHRISTMAS-FLOWERING

SWEET PEAS

WE ARE SUPER-HEADQUARTERS

All true stocks of Winter-flowering Sweet Peas will be scarce this season. Some varieties are a total failure owing to the exceptional season in California this Spring. Our advice to intending planters is to order at once.

Mr. Wm. Sim, Cliftondale, Mass., the great Winter Sweet Pea Specialist, sows our seed almost exclusively.

Our stocks of Christmas-flowering Sweet Peas have stood the test for years, and we can refer you to the largest growers of this increasing popular flower, as to the trueness and quality of our seed, earliness of blooming period and strength and habit of plants.

The following varieties are the "best by test" including Zvolanek's and our own introductions, grown for seed, from selected stocks by the leading California grower and specialist in Sweet Peas.

Our output last year was nearly 3000 lbs. No kicks and plenty of testimonials as to quality, germination and trueness to type.

Pansies in Separate Colors.

seeds are all grown by myself and are offered in the following mixtures and separate colors:

KENILWORTH STRAIN—The flowers are of perfect form and substance; many of the immense flowers are from 3½ to 4 inches; it is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings, rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention.

KENILWORTH SHOW—An extra fine strain of large flowers; the immense flowers are of circular form and great substance; a beautiful collection of colors and markings.

KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE—Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower or for exhibition purposes, for inside or outside growing; the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 7 or 8 inches long, in the most graceful manner, and stand the hot, dry weather well.

Walter Mott's Notes by the Way

Newburgh, N. Y.

Chas. L. Masten, the veteran seedsman has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his mother by death as the result of an accident. Some very beautiful floral pieces were sent from members of the craft.

Kingston, N. Y.

Wm. Williams is figuring on tearing down and rebuilding several of his older houses, to keep up with the times.

Fishkill, N. Y.

Lou. Wood of Wood Bros. say the most remarkable feature of their business is the late rush orders which seem to lengthen out each year longer than previously. This necessitates considerable maneuvering and such a thing as an empty bench is now unknown. They will not be affected by the change of name from Fishkill-on-the-Hudson to Beacon as recently made. Benjamin Hammond of the noted Paint Works expects their address will not be changed for some time. It is expected to cause some confusion especially to foreign correspondents.

Marlborough, N. Y.

Velie Bros. expect to grow their usual quantity of paper white narcissi, but have cut down on Roman hyacinths. Comet is considered the most profitable tomato for indoor culture. States Searles has practically abandoned his greenhouses, devoting his energies to the auto business.

Milton, N. Y.

P. Lyon finds Enchantress still his best carnation, the soil being well suited to it, for it is as vigorous and prolific as when first sent out.

DEFECTIVE LILIES.

We have been having trouble with our Giganteum lilies. We plant about fifteen hundred every ten days and up until the last two batches the blooms were splendid, stems of fair length and foliage very good. The last two batches have good foliage, a very short stem and the bud will develop to about one-half inch and then blight. I would think it was cultural reasons but the plants sitting adjacent will develop a good stem and a good flower. Fully fifty per cent of the last batch went bad. Can some of your readers give a reason or suggest a remedy?

I would suggest light shading and keep in cool, airy side bench with front ventilation and not too much water at the roots, or frames outside with lath shading. We always find good results in that way. It will give good stems and flowers.

H. H. Bartsch.

Waverley, Mass.

All agents of European seedsmen now in this country are unanimous in stating that a decided shortage exists in seed crops of carrot, beet and Golden Self-Blanching celery. Late peas are slightly short. All other seed crops are reported as much better than they were last year.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES.

Business misfortune has overtaken an esteemed retailer, George S. Faulkner, 15th street above Walnut. A meeting of the creditors will be held in Attorney Amram's office, R. E. Trust Building, Broad and Chestnut streets.

Alvah R. Jones, chief of staff in the wholesale commission house of Philadelphia, and C. H. Grakelow, a distinguished retailer up-town, sailed at high noon on the 9th inst. from New York for a month's vacation in the West Indies, South America and Panama.

B. Eschner, of M. Rice Co., reports that the advance sale of red cape flowers, red ruscus, red frieze and Japanese chenille is unprecedented. He attributes this to the high price of immortelles due to the short crops and the combination of the European growers. From present indications immortelles will cost more than ever before.

A million dollar pier from the viewpoint of a garden lover is the "Garden Pier" at Atlantic City. Louis Burk, our dear, delightful democratic orchid enthusiast, is the power behind the throne. Samuel J. Irvine, his able superintendent, hopes to send HORTICULTURE a good picture of this innovation one of these days. Orchids were air plants long before aeroplanes were; also safer, and they smell better. And there's lots of hot air for them to thrive on at Atlantic City.

THE FUNERAL SPRAY.

The making of the funeral spray of today, compared to the spray of former days, goes to show how much we are steadily advancing in our ideas and coming nearer to nature in the arrangement of a few dozen cut blooms when intended for funeral purposes.

The methods of the old school have been thrown in the discard long ago, and now we have a handsome loose bunch of flowers carelessly put together and held lightly at the stems with a piece of wire, or a few turns of thread, then a few pieces of adiantum or asparagus put through and it is finished, fit to send anywhere and capable of standing all criticisms.

Let us now turn back to the old-fashioned spray, and note the difference in its construction, also appearance when held alongside the up-to-date spray, and note how the latter day shows up far better with less material than the old style make does with twice the amount; not mentioning the difference in time, if that counts for anything.

The old "flat bouquet" suffers in comparison with modern work, in the same degree, where flowers are loosely arranged and simply tied with a piece of wire at the bottom, all done in ten or fifteen minutes, and a far better job than the crude and clumsy work that takes probably three-quarters of an hour or more to make, and which is still being carried on in a few unprogressive flower shops. I trust they will try the more modern way for their own benefit and that of their customers, at the same time saving flowers, time and money.

MR. STOREMAN.

FLORISTS' TELEGRAPH DELIVERY.

Advertising this facility is up to the florists themselves. The grocer, butcher and coal dealer will not be able to tell the public that the florist can deliver flowers on short notice almost everywhere. Help to advertise this facility and whether you are sending the order or getting it from some out-of-town florist to deliver, do your very best with same and let it be a credit to the florist trade. This will help to advertise and increase the annual sale of flowers considerably. The Florists' Telegraph Delivery is doing a great deal to work this field up and bring it to the high standard it should have been long ago.

The advertising of this facility should be carried on all your stationery and go out with every letter you mail. Also include it in your newspaper ads. The public, of which 90 per cent do not know the existence of a telegraph delivery system used by florists and the 10 per cent who do know it, think it is only for funerals or steamer deliveries, but just think how many friends, relatives, etc., are away from home and taken sick, to whom the people at home will only be too glad to have some nice fresh flowers delivered wherever they are. Still there are so many occasions where flowers could be sold if the florists would install a little more up-to-the minute business ways.

ALBERT POCHELON,
Detroit, Mich. Sec'y.

CHICAGO NOTES.

Henry Wietor and C. A. Alles are spending a week at Port Washington, Wis.

Miss Gertrude Lewis is spending a well earned vacation in Winnipeg, Man.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Washburn returned August 4th from a month in the west.

The Misses Nettie Parker and Olga Tonner are taking a lake trip to Sault Ste Marie.

Phil Schupp reports lily of the valley meeting an unusually good demand, July sales being equal to those of June.

Geo. Economopulus of the Alpha Floral Co., and Andrew Chronis, who operates the cut flower department at The Fair, are spending a month in Michigan.

A. Lange and family have returned from a vacation in the fruit belt of Michigan. Mr. Lange was very favorably impressed with the opportunities for growing and marketing fruit in that country.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Oechslin are on a western trip. A card from them written at the Yellowstone Park says they are having a fine time, but were surprised the morning of July 30th to find two inches of snow on the ground. The temperature was 32 degrees.

Rather small or medium sized baskets, filled principally with out-of-door flowers, and suggestive of an old-fashioned garden, at one down-town store sell readily. Each day from four to six dozen of these baskets are sold, showing that they please the public taste. Both the baskets and the nosegays as offered in the best stores here all the summer, have been reminiscent of a past time, yet the work was so carefully done and the blending of colors so artistic that they appeared as strongly to the young, as to the older buyers.

Visitors: G. Papas, Des Moines, Ia.; C. S. Ford, Philadelphia; John Faber, Kankakee, Ill.; Max Morris, New Orleans, La.

During Recess

The Washington-Baltimore Outing.

Members of the Florists' Club of Washington, the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Baltimore, and Kallipolis Grotto, No. 15, accompanied by their families and friends, spent a very enjoyable day at Chesapeake Beach on Tuesday last on the occasion of the annual joint outing of the three organizations. While the Baltimoreans beat the Capital City florists at baseball with a score of 4 to 1, the latter took the bowling honors and thus strengthened their chances of victory at the Minneapolis Convention. In the ladies' bowling (singles) tournament, Mrs. Bauer, of Baltimore, was the winner with Mrs. Simmonds, of Washington, second, and Mrs. George Cooke, also of Washington, third.

Considerable interest was also taken in the quoit events, Messrs. Fritz, Kearns and Cook of Baltimore being winners of the singles, and George C. Shaffer and George H. Cooke, of Washington, taking the prizes in the doubles. Washington florists also won the 100-yard dash for members of the trade, George C. Shaffer running first, and R. L. Jenkins, second.

PERSONAL.

Miss Florence Gude, of Congress Heights, D. C., will spend a few weeks in New York City.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Wax of Boston sailed for Europe on the Franconia, August 5th. This is part of their honeymoon trip.

Wm. Gammage of London, Ont., Can., was seriously injured, with several ribs broken and many bruises, in an automobile accident last Sunday.

A. Leuthy, of Roslindale, Mass., writes from Ghent that thus far he has encountered nothing but rainy and cold weather on his trip and that azaleas and other plants are in great need of sunshine to set their buds, which are as yet very backward. The exhibition in Ghent, he says, is even better than the Brussels show and is very well attended.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Business is very poor, even for midsummer. There is practically nothing being done locally and the shipping trade to summer resorts is much reduced from last year in volume. The practice of many large growers now of shipping direct to the beach and mountain resorts no doubt has some effect on the amount of business passing through the wholesale markets of the city. Beauty roses, lily of the valley, etc., are in full supply but the call is light. Colored asters are moved with difficulty and these together with the accumulating gladioli are the worst load the wholesalers have to struggle with. Sweet peas are very abundant, quality very nice and price very low.

BUFFALO The supply of stock has shortened up considerably for the past two weeks and there has been a shortage at times on good roses, especially Maryland and Kaiserin. Some good Double White Killarney are had and fill the bill. There has been only a fair supply of early asters which are not good.

CHICAGO The only flowers in really short supply are good white roses. The hot weather has made this stock smaller than usual even for mid-summer. The flowers most in evidence this week are asters and they are coming in, in such quantities that the market is over-supplied. They average quite small and it is only the largest that bring a price. Many asters are so small that the retailer takes a risk even at five cents a bunch. Large flowers are expected in another week. Lilies are still scarce. Gladioli, of the mixed and practically worthless sort are here, and as in past years detract from the value of the better sorts by putting them all in disfavor. American Beauties are in fair supply and new stock is considered good for the season. Carnations are not missed quite so much since asters made their appearance. Smilax is scarce and small. The opinion quite generally prevails that business this summer has not been so hopelessly dull as is usually the case. The increase does not seem to be along any particular line nor because of any special reason, but just because people continue to buy where they formerly did not. The retailers say that July was quite a busy month and August is starting in about the same. Sales are not in large amount but there is something to keep folks busy all the while.

CINCINNATI The market is firm. There is no lack of stock of any kind. In fact since the last report the supply has increased if anything. A good active demand continues, but is not sufficient to take up all the receipts. Fair prices prevail for the stock that is sold. The better roses find ready sales, but the shorter grades must often be jobbed or sold at cut prices. Gladioli are really the leading flower in the market and their quality runs good. Asters are on the increase. Each day is bringing larger and better receipts. Up to this time the good stock has sold easily. The poorer grades met with, at the best, only a slow market. All lilies are quickly taken up each day. Very fine hardy hydrangeas are offered.

DETROIT While trade reports at this time of the year are rather monotonous and not very bright, yet the amount of business done during the past week was not bad—in fact encouraging. The best sellers now are speciosum and longiflorum lilies, as also America gladioli; other staple articles, principally roses, move slowly because of their poor keeping qualities and small size.

PHILADELPHIA Asters are very plentiful. Good ones sell pretty fair, but there is a big proportion of lower grade, a good deal of which even the fakirs refuse to take at the week-end at any price. American Beauty roses are also in good supply. The locals would go better if the quality would stand the test. As it is, the eastern stocks still have the call, generally. Roses are selling better, but it is hard to move the shorts. Gladioli were never so plentiful in the history of the trade. Fine stock, but overdone for the present. Greens of all kinds more than enough.

NEW YORK Very little is happening in either wholesale or retail circles that is worth recording, at the present time. In this respect the situation is identical with that at the same date in former years, so no comment is called for and no deductions are worth the thinkng out. There are lots of asters and gladioli and they bring varying prices according to fineness of quality and the momentary emergency. Roses, lilies, lily of the valley and all the rest are also subject to the exigencies of immediate needs and this is all that makes existence bearable for the wholesaler as there is no steady current of demand for anything and consequently no bed-rock level on which values may be based. Quality is of the usual summer standard—excellent on a few things specially adapted to the climatic conditons and far below zero on the balance. Little change is likely until September and improvement may be still longer deferred.

ST. LOUIS The market is about as reported last week. Trade is principally made up of work for funerals and it ends with that—so the commission men report that only the lighter colored flowers move. Gladioli and Beauties are about the only flowers that come in which class with good quality, and these move well at any time. Carnations are poor in quality and not many are coming in. There are a good many asters coming in but only the best sell well. Hydrangeas are used up in funeral work; outside of this they have no demand. Smilax is very scarce; other greens in plenty and demand good.

THE GLASS MARKET.

L. E. Partridge, of Sharp, Partridge & Co., extensive dealers in glass, states that in his opinion the condition of the glass market has not undergone any very material change during the summer. Owing to the usual shutting down of the glass factories during the past weeks, stock has diminished and prices become firmer. The many severe storms throughout the country have emphasized this condition by causing an unusual amount of repair work. Statistics show the amount of glass on hand, at this time, to be below the average summer supply. More inquiries are coming in now from prospective builders than earlier in the season.

Show Houses Show Profits

THE first thing any kind of store owner arranges for, is the biggest possible display of his goods, not only in the windows, but in the store itself.
Seeing things, sells things—we all know that.
The man who can show his customers a variety of plants growing in addition to the cut kinds, has a big advantage. Time and time again, our customers have told us, their plant trade has increased surprisingly after building a Show House.

The profit on plants may not be as large as on cut flowers, but the losses are less.
People will buy plants, who never think of spending money for cut flowers.
Those who have always bought cut flowers from you, will buy plants in addition.
Don't these thoughts set you thinking?
Let us show you some of our Show Houses.

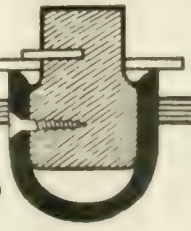
Making the Oblong Circle

A piece of the U-Bar, exact size.

A pipe shaped, or circular piece of iron, has no equal for strength, the amount of iron used being taken into consideration.
When a strain is brought to bear on any part, it is distributed to every part of the circle, so that every part is doing its part to stand the pressure.
Based on this engineering fact the U-Bar construction is constructed.
The steel part of the U-Bar itself is really a circle squeezed together a bit and the top cut off, making an oblong shaped member which, next to a circular shape, is one of the strongest shapes.

This oblong circle of galvanized steel, with its chemically treated cypress core bar, makes the complete U Bar.



Now you understand as you never understood before, just why U-Bar roofs, light as they are, are strong as they are.

The U Bar, although no larger than the roof bar used in other constructions, takes both the roof bar and rafter in one.

By using curved eave other constructions may look like the U-Bar—but that is the only way they are like it.
If it is not built with the U Bar it is not a U Bar curved-eave house. Send for a catalog or send for us—or both.

Group of parallel U-Bar houses.

ADAPTABILITY

There is no flower in the whole category of flowerdom that can be appropriately used for as many purposes as the pure white Easter Lily. And the best part of it all is, that by using lilies more profit is made. This is of course, generally speaking—the exceptions to the rule being caused by a poor quality of flowers. This may be avoided however, by securing Horseshoe Brand bulbs and giving them good care in forcing. You can have lilies any time in the year—reliable flowers. NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Bulb Compost

If bulb compost is not already mixed you should lose no time in doing so. It is well known that all bulbs give better results from new soil mixed with well-decayed cow manure. The general run of bulbous plants grow best in a light fibrous loam. Stiff or heavy soil should have a liberal mixture of leaf mold and sand. Bulb soil should be made sufficiently porous that no stagnant water will remain around the bulbs, after which you can add manure. Never use any new manure as it is very liable to prove destructive. A good preparation for bulbs is two-thirds light fibrous loam, one-third old and well-dried cow manure. Mix over and over so it will be in a good mechanical state.

Calceolarias

Why not grow a few of these beautiful show plants for next spring's flowering? Now as the end of summer approaches it is time to sow calceolaria. Well-drained earthenware seed pans are filled with a very sandy mixture of turfy loam and partly decayed leaf mold. After a good watering down of the soil the seeds are thinly scattered on the surface. This requires some care, since the grains are very small. With a smooth piece of board the seeds are pressed gently into the surface and the pans covered with panes of glass. The best place now for these seed pans is a cold frame with loosely fitting sashes. Keep the pan shaded until the little plants appear. In a few weeks they can be transplanted into flats, about an inch apart, using the same soil as mentioned above. After they have made four or six leaves a potting off into small pots takes place. As they attain size they will need a shift into larger pots every now and then, the richness of the compost for every shift being slightly increased, until at the end of the season a potting mixture coarse and unsifted, yet porous and mellow and containing fully one-fourth of well decayed manure is used.

Carnations

The varying circumstances that the carnation growers are placed in have much to do with deciding the question of why this or that, of the various methods practised in rearing young stock and its subsequent treatment, should be considered of greatest advantage. The behavior and condition of stock under one's immediate care should, therefore, be closely studied and the grower, thus fortified with knowledge gained by observation, will all the more clearly see his way through the maze of rules governing the culture of carnations. To encourage a healthful growth with proper moisture at all the roots without keeping all the soil in a continuously soaked condition, requires great care in watering. Air must be admitted freely through ridge ventilators, day and night, in spells of calm, warm weather. Give frequent stirring of the upper surface soil to keep it open, sweet and free of weeds.

Care of Gardenias

The days from this out will now be showing a shorter length which is liable to produce frequent and quite low drops in temperature, to guard against which it is always better to start the fires early. Give ventilation on all favorable occasions, guarding against any strong or direct drafts. The night temperature should never be allowed to go below 70 degrees, with a rise of from 15 to 20 degrees with sunshine. Do not allow the beds to become either too dry or saturated as extremes either way are bad. Now that the roots are working to every nook and corner looking for nourishment, give them some feeding in the line of mulch of equal parts of cow manure and loam, applying it about half an inch deep all over the beds. Syringe on all good days as it helps to keep them in a clean condition.

Dendrobiums

Dendrobiums that have had proper attention should now have made some fine growth. As such species as Dendrobium nobile, Wardianum, Jamesianum, Findlayanum, etc., finish up their new growth, in order to prevent a second growth at this late period they should be removed to a cooler house. It was necessary during the hottest part of the summer to have them well shaded, but now it should not be made too heavy, only enough to exclude the direct rays of the midday sun. By gradual means they can be given more airy, cool, dry and sunny quarters, but do not try to bring this about with too much haste. From day to day reduce the water supply at the roots, doing this gradually helps to perfect the ripening up of their growth. During all bright days give them a good syringing. Give them plenty of ventilation on all favorable occasions which will make the conditions right for their resting period.

Paper White Narcissi

The earliest shipments of paper whites will now be due so get a good batch boxed up as soon as possible. There is a good demand for these paper whites from the end of November on until the first of January. When they are boxed up they can be placed in a cold frame and when they show good root action with some top growth they can be brought into a good light house and grown on. Give a temperature of about 55 degrees at night.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Adiantum; Care of Chrysanthemums; Cyclamen for 1914; Show Pelargoniums; Sowing Pansies; Seed Sowing.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES UNDER GLASS

George H. Penson

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Penson. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Preparing for Mushroom Beds

With suitable accommodations mushrooms can be grown all the year round. To do so requires a good cool cellar, an underground cellar preferable, and then the beds are best made up before the hot weather sets in, thus doing away with the preparing and making up when the weather conditions are against one. August is considered early enough to commence the fall and winter crops here in New Jersey. Doubtless in cooler latitudes a commencement can be made earlier. The great trouble seems to lie in the curing of the manure when it is so hot and dry. A second thought reveals the fact that failures and poor crops the whole year round can generally be traced to this process, if traced they can be, for it is about one of the vaguest questions anyone can be asked to determine—the cause of a mushroom bed not cropping satisfactorily. The man who turns out an average crop every time will generally be found to be one who has the manure under his care right from the time it is collected until the bed is spawned, doing away with all assistance and doing all the turning, etc., himself. I have been fortunate enough to meet on different places that I have worked on, men who have made mushroom beds for years, each having some little detail worked his own way, but for a bed to miss or even be poor was seldom seen. This goes to show they have studied the conditions locally, met with success, and then followed the same routine yearly. Professional growers will work on a percentage basis and small wages so that they have to be pretty near the mark every time. There is money in raising mushrooms.

Making mushroom beds is the same as everything else—if you wish to be right, start right. The very first thing to find out (if the manure is obtained locally) is, have any strong physics been used on the horses from which the manure is obtained? Should this be the case wait a while, as there is danger of its affecting the tender mycelium later on. Get the requisite quantity of manure together as quickly as possible so that it is all in about the same state. Where there is a long wait in getting a heap together the first to come will be ready to be made up before the last has arrived. During this time of accumulation and until it is ready to be made up the manure should be under cover or showers and rains will prevent its drying and also cause a rapid raise in the temperature. A shed or room that has one side open or that can be made to be very airy will answer the purpose. Now we come to the hard part to define, that of saying when the manure should be ready to be made up. It requires turning once every day; twice will be better if it can be done. Do not skip a day and think it will be all right for it will not do. The manure will have got over-heated, white and dry. Although it cannot be used wet the other extreme should also be guarded against. Keep the heap a fair thickness so long as the weather is dry; this will help to hold some of the moisture. To be ready for making up the manure should be neither wet nor dry and heat up to an even heat each day. See that the cellar is ready to receive it the first day it is ready as each day it remains out after this stage is reached, is against the best results.

Over Feeding

This is a topic in season all the year round, and is one you can put right up to the man who says you can't have too much of a good thing. The majority of plant life will stand a quantity of stimulant if given in the proper form and at the proper time. For instance, do not try to feed a plant when it is dry for all the roots are able to take just then is some clear water. After they have been given all they need, then apply any feeding that you please. It is not only to the plant's advantage but also to us. Being dry a greater part of the feed will run straight through the pot or bench and the plant get little benefit from it. When the soil is on the wet side most of the manure will gradually soak down into the roots. Another point is to work the subjects up to taking it strong enough to get what you want out of them. It is a big mistake to feed anything full-strength right away. The roots have not been used to this kind of living, consequently it upsets them. Gradually is the way, and then you will find the roots looking for it. Should anything get an overdose get some clear water into the roots at once.

Borers

Little has been said in these columns on this devasting pest because as yet there is no satisfactory means of prevention. They are liable to attack peach and nectarine trees growing under glass just the same as those in the orchard. At times I believe they find the trees inside more to their liking and the mortality of their young is not so great. Wherever the dust is seen coming from the tiny hole lose no time in either cutting it out or get a piece of wire and push it down. If it comes in contact with the body they are easily killed but do not take any half chances with them. When you have them out you know for a sure thing they are dead. Do not make the cut any larger than is absolutely necessary to get it out. Keep a sharp lookout for them the remaining weeks of this month and next month.

Summer Pruning of Grape Vines

Since the crop was removed from the early vinery it will have been growing without restriction, which is a great benefit to the roots. The greater amount of vigorous top growth they have, denotes corresponding activities with the roots. These vines have a somewhat hard time of it and it does them good to let them roam for a while each year after the crop is cut. This must come to an end in favor of the buds that are to form next year's fruiting wood. These base buds on the laterals probably will be poorly developed and would remain so if this top growth was left to go ahead. To help these buds to plump up before fall gradually remove the superfluous growths, also cut back any laterals that have not made any extra growths to half-way. It will be advisable to do this gradually, removing some each day or about three times a week.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur C. Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Side Ventilation

Unless these can be handled by men who know what they are about, it is best to stop using them altogether, for the nights are getting real cool in this part of the country and the danger from mildew is too great to take any chances. Not that the side ventilators are responsible altogether, but they are very apt to be partly responsible if they are used after the cool weather sets in. We prefer by far the houses with no side vents which saves us a lot of time and worry, for the help that we often have to work with is not always A1. For private places where quality is always the first consideration, and where the time allowed to properly look after the houses is much greater than the time allowed on the average commercial range, the side ventilators can be used to good advantage, but keep them out of our commercial houses for ventilating purposes. Of course they are nice to you when planting or painting inside as they help reduce the temperature and make life more pleasant for all who have to work inside.

Ventilation in General

Now that cooler weather has set in, it may be necessary to lower the ventilators nights to keep the houses from dropping down too low. Even a little steam may have to be applied to hold up the temperature, which should not go below 64 degrees F. at this time of the year when the thermometer will register 80 or 90 during the day. Do not close the houses up, as the condensation on the glass and plants themselves would be so great as to have an ill effect with just a slight incline toward spot and mildew. Always leave the ventilators open at least half an inch.

Thunderstorms

Be very careful and not allow the plants to get wet at night (or in the day time either) by rain beating in through too-far opened ventilators. This is very disagreeable to the plants, even though it may not be so to the night watchman who is peacefully snoozing elsewhere. It is bad business, and any man who will neglect his work thus will never get ahead very far. Another "smart" way is to close the houses up tight and take a nap. Surely they will be dry in the morning—but the grower will no doubt wonder if the "fresh air" he gives them all the time really agrees with his plants.

Treating Wet Plants

When plants do get wet during showers, by accident or otherwise, about the first thing to be done is to see that they are shook off as much as possible, so as to give them every possible chance to dry very rapidly. As soon as the foliage is dry enough to keep it from sticking blow quite a little of air-slacked lime right under the plants, which will greatly help to absorb much of the moisture that would condense there, and thus help to prevent blackspot and mildew as well.

Cost Accounting

No doubt this receives but very little attention at most places—in fact, nearly all places. The only book kept is the check book, which determines whether there is gain or loss. At the same time, however, our business is coming to a stage where it will be absolutely necessary for the grower to know just "what's what," and to be able to tell to a cent what every rose produced has cost him. It all seems very difficult and complicated in the beginning, but when once started it is surprising how very simple it is to keep account of all little expenses and receipts. As places vary so very greatly it would be difficult to lay down one set rule for keeping all accounts, but the grower can generally himself determine just how this should be done. And it cannot all be done in a day. It will take weeks of careful study to devise and apply a system of cost accounting which will "fit," not only the place and conditions on it, but also the men, for at a good many places we find plenty of foreign labormen who cannot sign their names, let alone keep books. Yet they may be good workers and growers. To give an outline of this system we would advise numbering all the houses the very first thing, if this has not been done previously. Then attach a sheet of paper on one end of the greenhouse, and put a pane of glass over it to exclude water. Now let each man, no matter what he does in the house, take careful note of the time required to do it and carefully record it on the sheet, which has been ruled for the purpose. We make it a point to add 25c. for each $2.00 worth of labor, to cover wear and tear of tools. This is the only way we know of distributing this expense evenly. The whole amount is then charged to the greenhouse and as the record of the cut is carefully shown it is very easy to determine which houses are unprofitable or which of the growers are not doing their share. By applying this system at one place, the owners were real surprised to learn that certain varieties of roses and also certain members of the force were very undesirable, and it was not long before this was remedied. The coal bill is figured so much to heat one square foot of glass, and it is very easy to determine what it costs to keep the houses warm. Where the place is not heated from one point, the cost is considered separately for each heating section. This is the only fair way, for were the houses charged the average when the plant is heated by two or three different batteries of boilers from different points, it would not be square, as some boilers use more coal than others, also require more care, and may depreciate more rapidly.

The Convention

Never mind the expense if time will allow you to attend. The money required to take you there, and keep you until you return is well invested, and will bring great dividends in more ways than one. Who is the most successful man, he who travels or he who has not been out of his town in years? The former, of course, because travel will broaden one's views of life, business and all. You will be surprised how simple your great problems will look when you return after a chat with your neighbors miles and miles away.

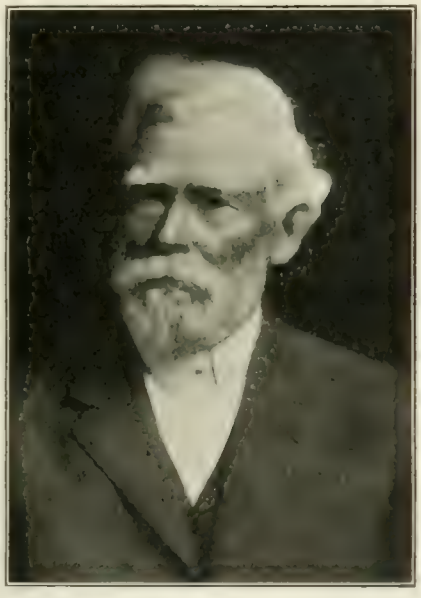
Convention Number

Once a year at S. A. F. Convention time, HORTICULTURE puts on a little gala trimming in honor of this annual event, and devoting a large section of its reading pages to convention topics, makes its bid for the advertising patronage of those firms who have something to sell to the florist trade. This issue is the ninth in the series and we hope it will prove as interesting and useful as any of its predecessors. The names that appear in the list of advertisers are a source of pride to us for most of them are known far and near as representatives of the highest type of reliable business houses. We should like to see many more on the list, and regret that so many still lack the enterprise to compete for the support of the desirable clientage composing HORTICULTURE's family of readers. There are thousands of such readers and we here appeal to them to help HORTICULTURE by purchasing, as far as possible, whatever they may need at any and all times, from HORTICULTURE's advertisers exclusively.

Minneapolis colors

This issue will come to the hands of most of the convention visitors just as they are about to start on the journey. Take the paper along with you and, through its gallery of portraits start your acquaintance with the active spirits of the convention by getting familiar with their physiognomy. The men who are directing and perfecting local arrangements in Minneapolis are the sort of men you want to know. We are doubly sure of this, for Secretary John Young who has sojourned with them for the past month says so. Mr. Young writes "Everything has been going along most satisfactorily. They are a splendid lot of boys out here, all working in complete harmony, no jealousies, and every one seems to be working with a will to insure the success of the coming convention." "True blue" and "white" seem quite applicable in this connection and so HORTICULTURE's cover page goes out on this occasion dressed in blue and white—the official "colors" of Minneapolis.



Choosing a president

That a considerable interest, not to say excitement, will attach to the choice of a president for next year, at Minneapolis, seems generally expected. This is desirable for nothing tends more to animate and infuse life into the membership of an organization than a lively contest over the election of officers provided always that no element of bitterness is injected and that nothing be said or done that will leave a sting after it. The selection of the officers of an association so widely distributed as the S. A. F. and so broad in scope, with a rapidly increasing membership and accumulating funds, is a matter of no small importance and each member should consider carefully the comparative fitness of every candidate whose name is presented, solely from the standpoint of the Society's welfare and needs, before deciding as to whom he will support. Other considerations of personal friendliness, sympathy or fellowship in other organizations should take a secondary place. The fact that a man has been a candidate before and has withdrawn once or a dozen times in favor of another does not, of itself, invest him with any accrued claim upon the office he seeks. Whether the next president be taken from among those whose names have already been publicly mentioned for that honor, or some other, we hope to see the choice fall on one endowed by nature with those qualities which make a man a leader among men, one having the horticultural training and experience and who has already done something to win distinction and honor in his calling.

IN WONDERLAND: THE UNSEEN ARTISTS

We are influenced by the company we keep. Association with the pure and beautiful will have its impress upon us. When we think of it, there has been large provision for our spiritual as well as material wants.

Beauty is for immortals. Animals cannot appreciate it. Along in the fifties I used to drive over the vast flower-sprinkled prairies of Minnesota. The fragrance was so profuse you seemed wading in it. In the far-off horizons the emerald of the earth blended with the sapphire of the heavens. I sat entranced, drinking in the scene. But my horse never could take any interest in it. Along with the world of matter there is a world of soul. And the soul has tastes as well as the palate. Sometimes I sit down among my flowers and think of them as the most skilled artists on earth, with a refinement of taste, a delicacy of touch no human brain or hand can imitate. In a group there will be an iris, a peony, a columbine and an oriental poppy. How courteous each one is to the rights of the other. Under the earth are unseen influences which baffle all human ken. These tiny roots down in their dark prison are doing what no human artist can do with wide open eyes in the full light of day. Each busy worker knows just what he is about. The peony never steals the tints that belong to the columbine. Flowers of the same variety never rob each other. How can those unseen artists pick out and send one color for the outer petals and another for the inner ones? Two varieties of the same family grow side by side. Each may have a dozen shadings and tintings. Never is there a mistake made. No red is sent up when the color should be blue. Each flower must have just what belongs to it—such exactness baffles all human effort.

Rev. C. S. Harrison

See that superb iris, the finest of the whole great Germanica family? The standards are immense petals of velvet and ivory, with that marvelous glistening reflex like that of the richest silk. How could those artists down in the dark manufacture that elusive sheen which flashes in the sunlight? Then those charming petals must be veined and traced with the most delicate tintings, while they are edged with deeper purple. Never is a mistake made in the blending of those harmonious colors.

The giant macrantha is the largest of all, with petals three inches across. Never a blunder made in the moulding and fashioning of those great blossoms—veining and tinting them with a beauty surpassing the rainbow. And there is Fairy, tall and princely, with the delicate fragrance of the peach blossom. Who manufactured that dainty little vial of odors and then uncorked it to pour the aroma out upon the air? Mark that tracery, interwoven with the pure whiteness of the flower.

There is no blind chance in all this. In this garden of delight I am at work with God. All these things are the expression of His love. "How precious are thy thoughts unto me, oh God." All these forms of beauty—these miracles of the highest art, are the translations of his thoughts to me. So much for the present. But just over in the unknown are new forms of loveliness which are yet to greet me—new creations. I take a dull piece of earth and plant it to bulbs, roots and seeds, and He and I created this section of Paradise let down to earth for our delectation. It is all a promise and a prophesy of the "glory to be revealed."

I am over fourscore, living on the margin of the two worlds, and instead of growing old I seem on the borders of eternal youth. So I am proclaiming the evangel of beauty far and wide. It is the Gospel of Hope. There is an uplift and inspiration in it. It will make people less sordid and greedy. It will lead the young into paths of pleasantness and peace.

NEWS FROM THE CONVENTION CITY.

The following additional exhibitors have taken large blocks of space in the trade section:

H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; J. B. Deamud, Chicago, Ill.; Peters & Reed Pottery Co., South Zanesville, Ohio; T. H. Wright, Los Angeles, Cal.; McNeff-Swanson Co., Chicago, Ill.

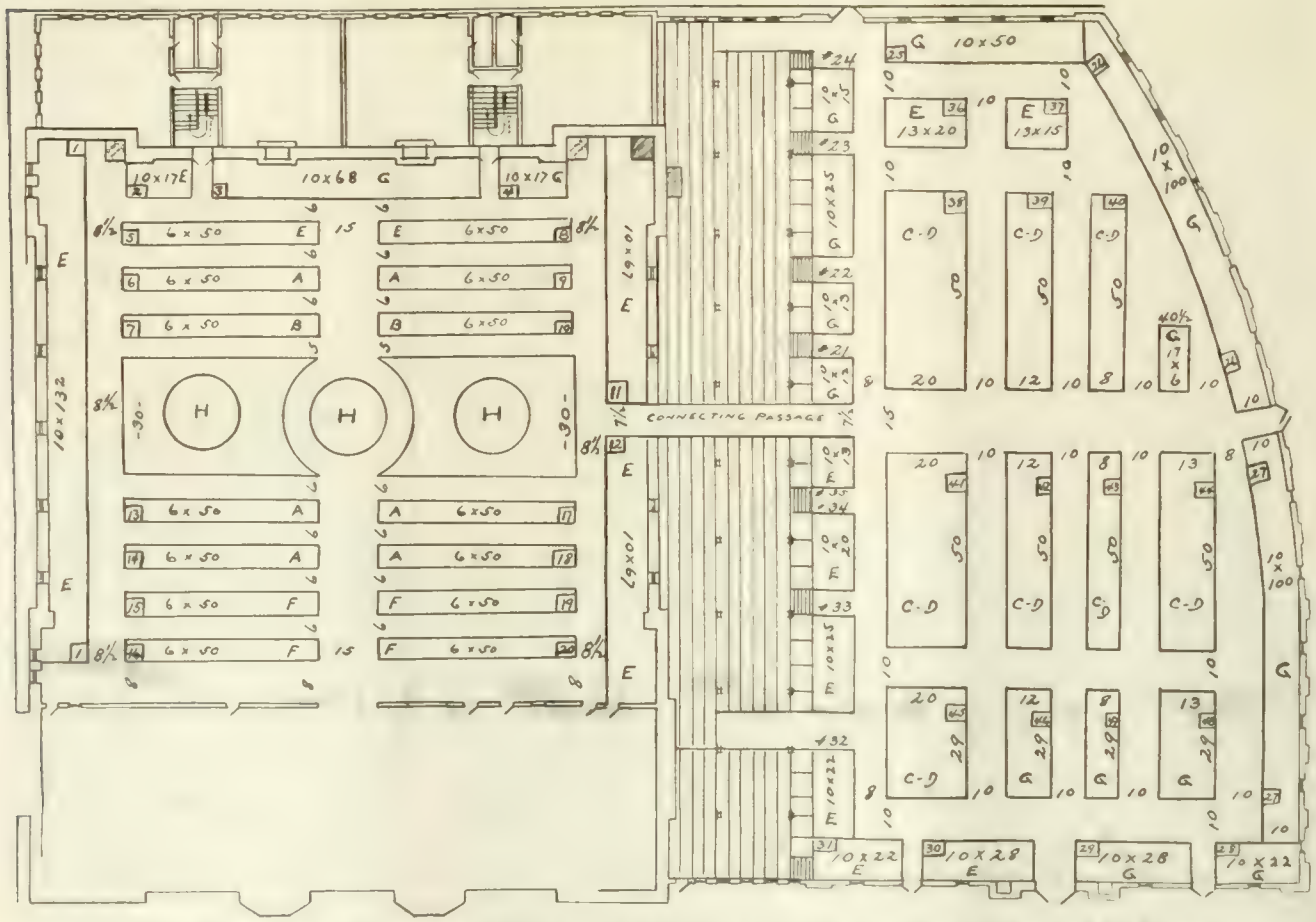
Arrangements are now all completed and the local committees deserve much praise for the very creditable manner, in which all details of the convention have been carried out. A large attendance is looked for. Indications point to a large attendance from the west and northwest. To show proper courtesy and consideration to the local societies visitors are requested to be seated promptly at 2 P. M. in the ball room on Tuesday where the opening exercises will take place, and Mayor Wallace G. Nye, will deliver his address of welcome. The Florist Telegraph Delivery will have permanent headquarters in the Armory, and Albert Pochelon, their hustling secretary, will be in constant attendance to enlighten those who are not already members of the great mutual benefit derived from belonging to this branch of the S. A. F.

THEODORE WIRTH

Vice-President S. A. F. and O. H., and Chairman Executive Committee of the S. A. F. and O. H. Convention Association, Minneapolis.

Applications for membership in the S. A. F. are coming in freely, and the record for new members will likely equal or exceed that of the great 1912 convention held in Chicago.

Retailers will please take notice.



R. E. Loeben, Gloversville, N. Y., has donated $50 to be used for some purpose at the S. A. F. Convention and Exhibition in the advancement of floriculture. The advisory committee has decided to offer this in two prizes—to be known as the R. E. Loeben prizes.

First—Loving cup, valued at $30; second, loving cup, valued at $20, for the Best Table Decoration.

Rules Governing Competition—To be a round table and not to exceed 6 ft. in diameter, set for four persons, floral arrangement only to be judged. The exhibit must be in place not later than 12 o'clock, noon, of the second day, or Wednesday, August 20th. Entries must be made to John Young, Secretary, S. A. F. and O. H. Flowers to be kept in fresh condition for the balance of the week. Table and accessories to be furnished by the exhibitor.

Mr. C. N. Ruedlinger, chairman of the local committee on sports, has been very busy securing prizes, and arranging the details of the bowling tournament, and the sports which will take place on the day of the outing at Tonka Bay. Mr. Ruedlinger announces that he has received from Hess & Swoboda, Omaha, the very interesting prize of a life membership in the S. A. F. This, to the writer, seems to be the most interesting prize ever offered at any convention, and if other donors of prizes would do likewise they would find that the same would be very attractive.

MINNEAPOLIS FLORISTS' CLUB.

The August meeting of the Minneapolis Florist Club was held Tuesday, the 6th, at Rice Brothers' store, with an attendance of forty.

Theo. Wirth spoke on the Convention and his remarks were to the effect that the Convention Association of Minneapolis which is the organization formed to carry on the work of this important event had indeed made a creditable showing, the work being well in hand and all in shape for the visiting trade.

S. A. F. Secretary John Young was in attendance, appealing to all not members to get busy and join the ranks of the National Society and his work is not fruitless as shown by the results. His aid here on work being done is certainly appreciated and saving valuable time.

Geo. Asmus of Chicago, also made cheering remarks.

A fifty-dollar donation was made by R. E. Loeben of Gloversville, N. Y., to be expended as the advisory board decides for the advancement of floriculture.

The Western Union Telegraph Company will establish an office at the Convention Hall and all incoming messages to delegates will be delivered promptly as names of parties attending and address will be kept.

There was a large attendance at the Florist Club's annual meeting, which was held Thursday afternoon, Aug. 7th, in the meeting rooms of the Odd Fellows building. Fred H. Weber presided over the meeting with all his officers and nearly half of the membership present. Reports were heard from the trustees, flower show committee and S. A. F. Convention transportation committee. $100 was set aside to be offered in special prizes at the fall flower show.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, W. J. Pilcher; vice-president, Adolph Jaenicke; secretary, J. J. Beneke; treasurer, Wm. C. Smith; trustees, Frank Windler, chairman, Wm. Ossick and John Connor.

State Vice-President Denker stated that all arrangements had been completed for the convention trip and that 32 would leave here Thursday, Aug. 14. A. NEWPORT HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

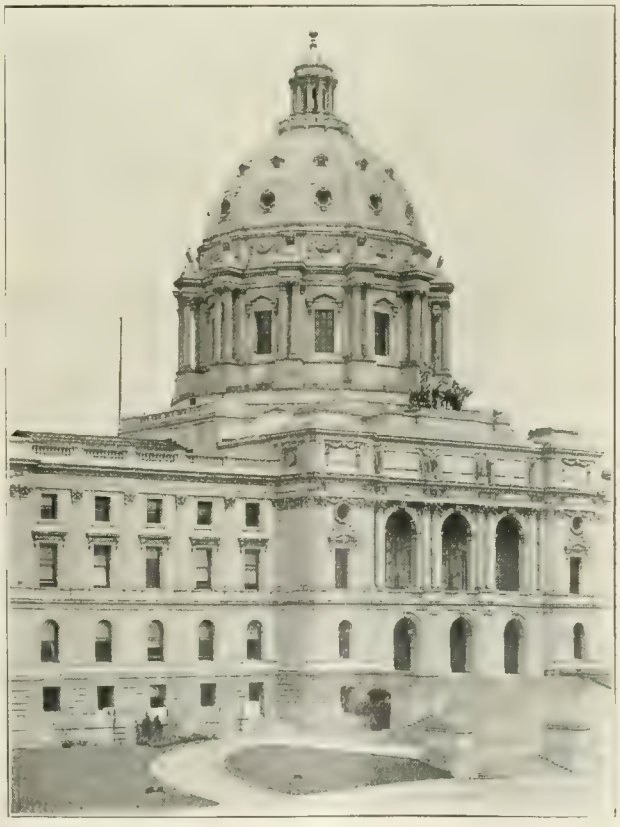
The regular meeting of this society, held on the evening of August 12, was of more than usual importance. It was voted to hold the autumn exhibition in the Convention Hall at the Public Beach on Sept. 16, 17 and 18, and to have the annual ball on the evening of the third day of the show at the same place. At the rquest of the Newport Garden Associaton it was decided to join that organization in holding a show in June, 1914, proper accommodations for all kinds of exhabits being promised by the Association.

William Gray was elected recording secretary, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of D. J. Coughlin, who has also resigned his position as gardener for Mr. E. Rollins Morse to take charge of the estate of Mr. H. P. Davison, at Locust Valley, Long Island. At the close of the regular business Mr. Coughlin was presented with a handsome gold watch and chain by the members as a token of appreciation of his valuable services as secretary of the society during the past six years. As a mark of respect for Mrs. Coughlin a handsome gold pin was also provided for her. The presentation speech was made by Treasurer A. K. McMahon, who is highly gifted in the art of such duties. Appropriate refreshments followed.

J. ROBERTSON.

WESTCHESTER AND FAIRFIELD HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.



The regular monthly meeting of this Society was held in Doran's Hall, Greenwich, Conn., August 8th. An interesting discussion took place on the diseases of shade trees, a subject now requiring very close attention. The schedule for the fall show which is to be held in Stamford, November 7-8th, is now in the hands of the committee, and will be out in a few days. Excellent classes are drawn up with substantial prizes offered. We are, therefore, hoping for large entries and keen competition. The few choice exhibits at this meeting were judged as follows:

Cultural Certificates to Wm. Morrow and Adam Paterson for grapes. Honorable Mention to Thos. Ryan for cannas and sweet peas; Thos. Aitchison for Laelio-Cattleya Bletchleyensis. Vote of Thanks to James Stuart for Viola atropurpurea; Carl Harkansen for Gladioli; Anthon Peterson for seedling delphiniums; F. CANADIAN HORTICULTURAL ASSOCIATION.

The annual convention of the Canadian Horticulturist Association opened in the Reception Hall of the

MINNESOTA'S MAGNIFICENT STATE CAPITOL IN ST. PAUL

Armories, Peterboro, Ont., on Tuesday, Aug. 5. About one hundred delegates attended. After a civic welcome by Mayor Bradburn, the report of the secretary-treasurer was presented, showing a credit balance of $173.16. The report of the Tariff Committee was presented, and, pending action on the tariff by the Government, was referred back to the committee. Park Commissioner Chambers, of Toronto, was to have addressed the meeting on "Parks and Boulevards," but was unable to be present on account of a fire at the Exhibition Park. The balance of the program for the three-days' convention was successfully carried out, much time being devoted to sight seeing and entertainment.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The annual exhibit of annuals and perennials of the Lenox Horticultural Society will be held in the Town Hall, Lenox, Mass., August 20 and 21. Fruits and vegetables will also be featured.

The St. Louis County Growers held a meeting at Kirkwood on August 6. W. J. Pilcher presented a list for subscriptions for the flower show, which was subscribed to by all present. Wm. Winter, a member, stated that he had been married that day and a fine spread awaited the members at the close of the meeting. Mr. Winter received congratulations on all sides and at the close was voted a jolly good fellow.

RUTHERFORD, N. J., NOTES.

Orchids are scarce at the Julius Roehrs houses at present, a few Gaskelliana and gigas being about the only bloom in sight but the labiatas will begin to come in early in September and then there will be an abundance. A house of calanthes impressed us as the finest lot of these desirable plants we have ever seen. The rest of the big establishment is in elegant condition, giving evidence in plenty that this well-known plant growing place will, under the management of the second Julius, fully maintain the prestige it attained under his late father. The outside nursery department is under the care of Rudolph Roehrs and the orchid range is in charge of Mr. Ianson, who is well qualified by experience to assume this important responsibility.

At Bobbink & Atkins' nurseries just now the special interest centres in the hybrid hibiscus which have been developed here to a wonderful beauty and perfection. The flowers are enormous with great luscious overlapping petals in every tint and combination from pure white to dazzling crimson. Some of the pink varieties come in the softest and purest tones without a trace of the crimson eye which is usually found in these flowers. The rose garden is also a prime attraction and now that the cooler moister weather is here the hybrid teas are beginning to sparkle with color. There are fully 500 varieties in this interesting collection. The herbaceous grounds, which are in the care of Mr. Ehrle, are an expanse of beauty at all times.

BRITISH HORTICULTURE.

Bitter Pit in Apples.

Professor C. T. Lewis, chief of the Divison of Horticulture of the Agricultural College, Corvallis, Oregon, U. S. A., is obtaining information in reference to bitter pit in apples. He has lately written to C. H. Hooper, librarian at the Agricultural College, Wye, Kent, asking his co-operation in collecting data, and efforts are being made to secure information from British fruit growers. The same disease is causing some anxiety in Australia. D. McAlpine, vegetable pathologist for Victoria, has been requested by the Federal Government to investigate this disease, which for many years has caused serious havoc in the orchards. In the first report presented it is shown that neither insects nor fungi, bacteria, nor external agencies are concerned in the production of bitter pit. The cause rather is internal, and must be sought for in a study of the structure and physiological processes of the apple itself.

Provincial Rose Show.

The National Rose Society held a highly successful provincial exhibition at Gloucester, on July 15th. According to the secretary, this was the largest provincial show held by the society, whilst the general quality was far in excess of anything they had seen before. The first prize in the chief trade class, carrying with it the Jubilee trophy and gold medal, was awarded to Hugh Dickson, Ltd., Belfast, Ireland. In the trade section silver medals were awarded to the following best blooms in the show:

H. T., H. V. Machin, shown by Alex. Dickson & Sons, Newtownards, Ireland; Tea, Mrs. E. Mawley by D. Prior & Sons, Colchester; H. P., A. K. Williams, shown by the King's Acre Nurseries, Hereford. There was an excellent collection of seedlings. S. McGredy & Son, Portadown, Ireland, received a gold medal for each of the following: Florence Forrester, a bold white; Colleen, rosy pink H. T.; Iona Herdman, decorative variety, similar in tint to old gold; Mrs. F. W. Vanderbilt, peach color. Hugh Dickson, Ltd., received gold medals for Mrs. Archie Gray, lemon tinted H. T.; Countess Clanwilliam, cream H. T.; Gorgeous, pink, suffused orange. Alex. Dickson & Sons were awarded a gold medal for G. Amedee Hammond, of a pleasing golden hue. S. McGredy & Son also received a silver-gilt medal for Eileen Smiley, a H. T. of a striking shade of orange, with a deeper tinted base.

THE CATTLEYA FLY.

Editor HORTICULTURE

Would like to ask through your valuable paper how to get rid of Cattleya fly.

Yours truly,

P. E. H.

I find the best way to get rid of the Cattleya Fly is to isolate the affected plants from the others and fumigate two or three times a week with Nicoticide during the day, when the weather is cloudy. The fly usually is hidden at night and cannot be reached so effectively as in the daytime, when flying about. If you will keep it up for two or three months you will get rid of them entirely.

EUROPEAN RAMBLINGS.

Belgium—little Belgium, but, for its size, the densest populated country of Europe, with a glorious record for fine old history and a fine collection of old historical reminiscences and fine old art. Bruges, Ghent, Malines, Antwerp, Brussels, what a quantity of old treasures can be found there! And Ghent, the center of horticulture, is likewise the city where the treaty of peace was signed between "Auld England and Young America," after the war of 1812. Since then, peace forever between the two nations, the grandest powers of our own modern times. Landing at Antwerp, towards the end of May, of course my ramblings went soon towards Ghent, the center of Belgian horticulture, if not of the European countries. We do not count the horticultural establishments there, we merely see them in passing through the town in its various directions By the courtesy of Mr. Leon Kerkvoorde, who with his two brothers continues the paternal firm of C. Kerkvoorde—nurseryman and horticulturist—founded many years ago, I was taken quickly from the Hotel dela Poste through the Ledeberg district out to his extensize nursery plant, and was impressed by the vastness of this establishment. Rhododendrons, en masse, in the best hardy and forcing varieties; Azalea indicas for the florists' forcing, grown in the best of soil, no need of artificial manuring; Simon Mardners, V. der Cruysens, Mad. Petricks and the average run of best sorts were there, all in fine shape. The new French hydrangeas, lilacs, prunus, almonds, etc., etc., and last but not least the roses. Not much advanced by the end of May were these, but early in July, at a second call, a glorious sight. About 250,000 roses are grown on this place, mostly the better and newer kinds of hybrid perpetuals, hybrid teas and hybrid Pernettianas. Besides another 250,000 mostly of the old standard sorts of hybrid perpetuals are grown under contract for this firm. Tree roses in standard and half-standards; and an extra fine selection of tall weeping standards on 5 to 6 and 6 to 7 ft. stems in sorts like Crimson Rambler, Dorothy Perkins, Lady Gay, Tausendschoen, Alberic Barbier and so on, real treasures to look upon. Of the different newer kinds, not exactly the latest, I noticed as of apparent special merit: His Majesty, a bright crimson scarlet H. T. with strong wood; Jonkheer J. L. Mock, a close rival, of bright crimson pink; Marquise de Ganay, LaFrance color, fragrant, and, as it seemed, an improvement on the old LaFrance. Jenny Guillemot, a very promising H. T. of saffron yellow color. Other roses of merit were all well represented. In the nursery stocks the leading coniferous kinds were largely grown; also forest tree seedlings and larger trees. Quite a fine assortment of the fancy trained fruit trees is to be found here. The major part of a day was spent in inspecting this vast establishment. After a hospitable repast the return trip to old Ghent was made by auto, Mr. Leon Kerkvoorde acting as chauffeur, and arrived just in time to find shelter in the Cafe Gambrinus from a thunder storm with pelting rain. Good success to the live establishment of C. Kerkvoorde is the wish of Yours truly, W. R.

DURING RECESS

Florists' Club of Washington Entertained.

Members of the Florists' Club of Washington and the eleven "Minute Men" who are about to carry the American flag to the German maneouvre camps, acting as a guard of honor to the German veterans, were the guests of Edward S. Schmid at the crab feast which he annually tends to the local florists and friends.

The affair was held in the conservatory of the store of F. H. Kramer, following the regular business meeting of the club. William F. While abroad they will go into camp with the German troops near Leipzig and will later be received by the Lord Mayor of London and the Ancient and Honorable Artillery of London.

Oyster Bay Horticultural Society.

Anyone having an idea that all the word horticultural means is the raising of flowers and sich, should have attended the outing of the Oyster Bay Horticultural Society to be taught that they can raise the deuce as well. There were gardeners, horticulturists, wives, sweethearts and kidlets and all were there for the "fun of the thing" and they found it. Scotch (language) was largely predominant, and this was about all the Scotch there was in sight (on the field). The sports began early in the afternoon and if there was ever an enjoyable occasion this was it. The ladies entered into the spirit of the games with as much enthusiasm as the men, and they could go some at that. At six o'clock, after all the events had been pulled off, all proceeded to wash up and put themselves in proper form for appearing in the dining room, and here they sat down to one of Rothmann's famous dinners and every inch of dining room space was utilized, and judging from the rapidity with which the viands disappeared, Rothmann should see that there were no sports indulged in in the future, because exercise was a great appetizer. Following were the sports and the winners in each:

Girls' Race, under 8 years—Margaret Devers, 1st.

Girls' Race, under 15 and over 8 years—Margaret Robinson, 1st; Catherine Ryan, 2nd.

Buffalo Florists' Club.

One of the best attended meetings of the Buffalo Florists' Club took place at Bedell House, Grand Island, on Thursday last, and with beautiful weather, which made it a grand success. There was not a dull moment from beginning to end; something doing every minute. The ball game was the main feature of the sports and the growers vs. the storemen was on the program. This proved to be the best game that has ever taken place between these opponents and the growers won by the score of 8 to 7. The tug-of-war was exciting and the growers again won by a small margin. There were a number of other events, such as 100-yard dash, old men's race, ladies' and children's race, sack and three-legged race, etc., in which the afternoon was well taken up.

Dinner was had in the banquet hall, which was decorated in the club's colors. Bowling and dancing concluded the day's program, on which the committee is to be congratulated. We were pleased to have with us a number of out-of-town growers who never have attended these outings and who were willing to take in more of the good time.

A MASSACHUSETTS GLADIOLUS FARM

It will be a busy time for the gladiolus expert, from now on, sorting, grading and discarding. Discarding is the most important part of the work, for if the specialist wishes to keep up his standard, upon which rests his reputation, he must continually discard.

The writer was interested to see the number of people visiting the gladiolus trial grounds and farm of Chamberlain & Gage at South Natick, Mass. They frequent the farm generally on Sundays, and are sure to carry a bouquet home with them.

These men are growing about 40,000 seedlings, which are being tested and improved by cross-breeding. Their work is especially on the Lemoinei type, with the object of securing a large flower and eliminating the hooded type peculiar to gladiolus Lemoinei. Colors are coming freely in light and white shades. There are some brilliant reds and cream shades. Mr. Gage is working to get larger blues, with more intense blue color, eliminating as much as possible all purple tints, and developing at the same time a better formed flower with bold and distinct markings. The hardest color to obtain in a gladiolus is a dark golden shade. In this Mr. Gage is in a fair way to succeed. He has some distinctly beautiful seedlings of various shades of yellow,—from apricot to almost pure yellow, and, for this color, he has some remarkably well-formed flowers, and full spikes. There are several promising whites; at least three will be heard from in the near future.

In raising seedlings, Mr. Gage plants his seed in beds about the middle of May, when the ground is warm, and keeps them covered until the little plants begin to appear above ground. They need lots of air and sun after they are well started, and plenty of water, if the bed is liable to suffer from drought. Preference is given to sterile soil, because the weaker seeds will not survive long in a poor soil, and much of the struggle for existence—for the survival of the fittest—is ended in the seed bed. Those that do grow prove more vigorous and healthy. When the plants are up some good commercial fertilizer is added for a top dressing, and later hardwood ashes. Occasionally, the seedlings bloom the first year, but most of them the second, and all the rest bloom the third year. Then comes the task of selecting those that are worthy of propagating. It takes two or three years after that to determine their worth. Some will improve, others deteriorate. It is not safe to finally discard until the third year.

Mrs. Frank Pendleton, Jr., has proved one of the best varieties yet introduced. It was awarded a first class certificate of merit in 1909, by the Mass. Horticultural Society, and in Baltimore, it was honored by the American Gladiolus Society with a certificate. The coloring of the flower is exceptionally beautiful, a rich, soft pink, shading to darker tints in striking contrast with the brilliant carmine patch on the minor petals. Such coloring may not produce the delicate, subtle beauty that is the charm of America, nor the majestic beauty of Rajah, nor the poetic, winsome beauty of Spring Song and Myrtle, nor the quiet stateliness of Daisy Rand. But Pendleton has a beauty all its own; a brilliant, dashing, compelling beauty, that makes you stop and admire.

Mr. Chamberlain obtained a silver medal for Rajah, awarded by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in 1911. Rajah is a deep, rich red, suffused with a darker tint. In 1912, a silver medal was awarded by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for Myrtle, a tender and delicate rose pink.

Chamberlain & Gage have many novelties listed. The best of these are: Amaryllis, a blood red color; cherry King, deeply tinted; Daisy Rand, with an ivory white ground color; Lillian Morrissey, bright cherry; Mrs. L. Merton Gage, glistening white; Mrs. Malcolm Mackay, intense red, with a patch of white on the lower petals; Mrs. G. W. Moulten, the color of American Beauty rose; Myrtle, before described; Richmond, rosy crimson; Spring Song, primrose yellow suffused with soft pink; Clarice, rose pink, flaked with a deeper tint; Mary Bancroft, creamy white; Mary Fennell, deep lavender, shading to a paler tint.

A striking feature of the blooms is their very remarkable color, so rich, brilliant, and true to name. The flowers bloom profusely on strong spikes, some of the blooms measuring six inches in diameter. Grown on sandy soil, the bulbs may not have the size they would have on a richer, heavier soil, but they have substance and blooming qualities, which is far more important.

It is the practice of most growers to take varieties which are losing caste or rank, and throw them in with the "mixed." No one can complain if he gets what he asks for, for mixed seedlings are cheap enough. But any man with a care for his reputation will not throw in all the rubbish he has. If he wants to sell his "mixed" he must put something pretty good in with them, as well as weed out during the blooming season many poor ones—for even good varieties deteriorate, and one has to be constantly on the alert to keep up his standard as well as his reputation. Both go together, which is a very important consideration from a business point of view, when we remember that many of the great gladiolus raisers "started in" with a few mixed varieties.

GLADIOLUS SHOW AT BOSTON.

A superb display of gladioli, phloxes, lilies and herbaceous flowers in general, together with a remarkable array of fruit and vegetables attracted a large attendance of visitors at Horticultural Hall, Boston, last Saturday and Sunday. A beautiful display of gladioli was made by B. Hammond Tracy. His exhibit occupied a long table at one side of the hall and comprises 800 stalks arranged in a most artistic manner and comprising no less than eighty-five varieties, including two new ones—Barbara, orange salmon and Gold Thread, scarlet pencilled with bright yellow.

Chamberlain & Gage also made a fine showing of their specialty, many superb new varieties attracting the attention of the gladiolus fanciers.

In the centre of the hall R. & J. Farquhar & Co. duplicated the arrangement used for the sweet pea exhibition a month ago, with canopied entrances from four sides, and a fountain in the centre. The rare Lilium Henryi was the flower exclusively used and it scored an immediate success.

Mt. Desert Nurseries made an impressive exhibit of hardy herbaceous plants, in which were great masses of aconites, hybrid astilbes, campanulas, etc., also fine gladioli. Eastern Nurseries were also well represented. The following list of awards will give adequate idea of the other exhibitors and what they staged.

FLOWER AWARDS

SOME GLADIOLUS QUESTIONS.

The following letter is self-explanatory. We hope our readers will do what they can to help along this good work which Cornell University and the American Gladiolus Society are trying to do.

Editor, HORTICULTURE, Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir: In connection with the trial ground work of the American Gladiolus Society here at Ithaca, N. Y., we have recently sent out to all the commercial growers of gladioli, a number of questions. These questions we have thought would cover somewhat a census of gladiolus growing, and we would like to have them put into as many hands as possible. We are sending you the questions, and wonder if you could publish them in your paper, for your paper would reach a large number of growers of gladiolus not members of the American Gladiolus Society. It seems important to all growers of gladiolus that such questions as "What varieties do you consider synonyms?" and "What varieties are different under the same name?" and so forth, should be answered. Should you print them, we wonder if you could head the questions with an appeal for anyone who has any thoughts along this line to correspond with us and discuss those questions he feels able to answer. We hope that you can cooperate with us in making this information as complete as possible. Thanking you in advance for the great help you can give us in this matter, I remain

Yours very respectfully,

ALFRED C. HOTTES,

SEEN AT BAR HARBOR.

On Monday and Tuesday, August 4 and 5, the garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society with several other invited guests visited the Mount Desert Nurseries of George B. Dorr at Bar Harbor, Me. This establishment, started some eighteen years ago, has now grown into a business of considerable magnitude, and on account of its peculiar advantages of location and environment is likely to continue to develop on very substantial lines. Hardy perennials, shrubs and conifers are the leading specialties. Of these there are fifty or more acres under cultivation, and with the combination of cool mountain air and damp sea breezes the sturdiness of growth and brilliancy of coloring are simply wonderful. Even the lawns display that vividness of green which those who know assert cannot be found anywhere this side of England and Ireland.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society people had remarked with much interest the splendid eremuruses, astilbes and other garden specialties staged by Mr. Thatcher, the manager, at the Boston and other exhibitions, and were prepared for something out of the common, and were not disappointed. Perhaps the biggest surprise came in the sweet peas. The size and brilliancy of the flowers, the enormous growth and floriferousness of the plants place the Mt. Desert sweet peas in a class by themselves. Pentstemons, again, were of a size and lusciousness entirely out of reach in any ordinary climate. Here is probably the largest collection of aconites in any nursery in this country. When we state that the flower spikes stand from five to eight feet high on many of the plants, some idea of their growth is conveyed.

We will not go further into nursery details. We were particularly interested to see the Banksian pine growing wild here, Bar Harbor being the extreme southern limit of its home. Mr. Dorr is greatly interested in the preservation of the natural beauties of Mt. Desert. Through his initiative and persistent effort much has been accomplished to conserve the forest scenery and the picturesque mountains and crags have been set aside as public reservations for all time. Much damage has been done to the coniferous forests this year by the fir sawfly.

The visitors were lavishly entertained by their host, ably assisted by Manager Thatcher. Buckboard rides over the forest roads and visits to several of the finest private estates on this famous island were much enjoyed. The Kennedy estate, presided over by Mr. Burton, we have had occasion to mention heretofore. It is easily the finest estate on the Maine coast. The Italian garden is one of the few worthy of the name or of admiration. A Gloire de Dijon rose clambering over the enclosing wall was surveyed with incredulous wonder and the glory of the purple clematises was beyond description. In the greenhouses the grapes and melons, the gloxinias and begonias and gloriosas took all eyes.

At the Vanderbilt estate where Edward Kirk presides, the visitors were privileged to see where those wonderful flowers came from which almost completely swept the decks at the recent sweet pea show in Boston. Melon houses and tomato houses were in full bearing, Carter's Sunrise tomato making a most remarkable showing and being regarded by Mr. Kirk as the most prolific tomato in existence.

PUBLICATION RECEIVED.

The first number of The Florists' Trade Journal, (monthly) published in New York under the management of J. H. Pepper, has been received and is a very attractive magazine. The cover illustration is a fine colored plate of the rose Mrs. George Shawyer. We extend cordial good wishes to the newcomer.

NEWS NOTES.

M. J. Pope, at Naugatuck, Conn., has a very fine white sport from Dorothy Perkins rose.

An exceedingly pretty little hardy rose is the "Baby Tausendschoen," a very dwarf growing variety with flowers much like its large growing namesake and blooming continuously until November. We saw a fine lot of it in the Julius Roehrs Nurseries at Rutherford, N. J.

ERNEST OECHSLIN

this now very important branch of the trade was Frank Oechslin. Born in Schaffhausen, Switzerland, 45 years ago, and coming to this country when only 13, he seemed to have a natural aptitude for plant culture which was directed and developed by working with well-known eastern plantsmen. But Chicago called him with her greater opportunities and after being employed eight years by John F. Kidwell, he started in business by renting the greenhouses on Madison street known as the Garfield Park Greenhouses. Ten years ago he bought the first lots and built the first house of his present large plant, at 4911 Quincy street, which is now one of the show places of the city.

Ernest Oechslin, three years younger than his brother, has a very attractive range at 180 Madison street, River Forest. Here all the plants most favored for pot culture are grown. Cyclamen are much in evidence during their season and the best strains are grown. Poinsettias, azaleas, roses, rhododendrons and all other winter-blooming stock are grown as well as Boston and Whitmanii ferns. Mr. Oechslin is building three new houses this year. Visitors are always welcome at their place which is reached by surface cars, and is only nine miles from the center of the city.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. entered the field as plant growers only a year ago but now have nearly 100,000 sq. ft. of glass devoted to all kinds of blooms and decorative plants for the wholesale market. Poehlmann Bros. are well-known for their thoroughness, and their reputation for growing cut flowers of the highest quality will soon be equalled by that of their ability to produce the highest grade of pot plants. Poehlmann Bros. will have a large exhibit of plants at the convention and the manager of their plant department will be there to answer questions.

TWO RARE LIL

Hardy, Beautiful, Fragrant

LILIUM MYRIOPHYLLUM

LILIUM MYRIOPHYLLUM. Mr. E. H. Wilson, the famous plant collector, collected for us the bulbs now offered, in North-western China. He considers this the finest of all lilies. It is absolutely hardy, and is excellent for forcing. It has been predicted that this will become the Easter Lily of the future, and being so hardy, may be grown at home. The flowers are white, slightly suffused with pink and with a beautiful shade of canary yellow at the centre, and extending part way up the trumpet, It is delightfully perfumed, reminding one of the jasmine, and lacking the heavy oppressive odor of most lilies. Blooms out-of-doors early in July. Awarded the Gold Medal at the S. A. F. & O. H. International Flower Show, New York, 1913, as the Finest New Plant on exhibition; Gold Medal by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, and a first-class certificate by the Royal International Exhibition, London, 1912. Bulbs, ready in October, each, $1.50; dozen, $15.00.

LILIUM SARGENTIAE

LILIUM SARGENTIAE. This noble variety was also collected by Mr. Wilson. This is one of the strongest growing lilies—frequently attaining a height of six to eight feet. The flowers vary in number from five to ten on a stalk, and in size and shape resembling Lilium Harrisii, greenish white, shaded purple on the outside, and of the purest white within, with a tint of citron in the centre. The flowers have a pleasing fragrance. This lily will undoubtedly be largely used for outdoor planting as well as for forcing. Many consider it the finest of all tubular-flowered lilies. It flowers somewhat later than Lilium myriophyllum and being of larger growth, has a distinct place. Awarded a Silver Medal by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, 1912, and a Gold Medal August, 1913. Bulbs, ready in October; each $1.50; dozen, $15.00

NEW AND INTERESTING AT CRAIG'S.

"Meritorious new plants" has long been the slogan at this Philadelphia establishment, and those who know the keen judgment of Robert Craig and his two able sons, William and Robert, Jr., have come to depend more and more on their discernment of what is really meritorious in the plant world.

There is no such thing as standing still in their special line. What was good ten years or even five years ago may be superseded today by something better, and it is the ability to see the good points of a new thing first that spells success. Robert Craig has this faculty in an eminent degree and it is seldom that when he has backed a new thing with his judgment the floriculture world has been disappointed. So if there be anything new or interesting at Craig's the readers of HORTICULTURE are entitled to hear about it and your dollar-a-word correspondent dragged himself away from more lucrative pursuits and spent the day at Craig's—so that HORTICULTURE might make good to its dollar-a-year subscribers.

But we will not make a long story. We will boil it down to a few pointed paragraphs for the busy reader.

Néphrolepis robusta. A splendid new one. Remarkable for sturdy upright habit. The frond resembles the old Boston but is more wavy and much more elegant in every way. Stands up fine in the center and is equally good in either large or small sizes. Mr. Craig says this never reverts, and is a very rapid grower. It won the silver medal at the International Flower Show last April over all competitors.

Nephrolepis tuberosa plumosa. A plumed variety of the old Japanese tuberosa. Very dark green dwarf and compact in growth, beautifully waved on the outer edges of the fronds. A very distinct and charming fern.

Nephrolepis Smithii. Has all the good points of Amerpohlii with none of the bad ones of that lovely variety —which it is bound to supersede as it is a better grower and does not decay in the center. Very symmetrical and especially fine in medium-size ferns—say four or six-inch pots. But a gem all the way through.

Of course the other favorite forms of Nephrolepis such as todeaoides, Giatrasi, Schoelzeli, elegantissima, Harhisii, Scottii, etc., are much in evidence —many houses being devoted to their culture; but these have been so often commented on that everybody is familiar with their good points.

Adiantum hybridum. This is not a new one but the persistent Robert still claims after all these years and controversies that it still has points of merit over the Croweanum and backs this up by growing large quantities of it every year.

Adiantum Moordrecht. This is the new Farleyense—the one that can be reproduced from seed. HORTICULTURE devoted considerable space to a full description of it last year. Mr. Craig has tried it for a year, and thinks very well of it. They are growing a large stock, the bulk of which is at Norwood.

Ficus Craigi. An improvement on elastica, being shorter jointed and having a pronounced ivory white midrib. The advantage of the short joint comes in the greater number of tiers to a given height—therefore a more imposing and beautiful plant. Has the call over the old form whenever a buyer sees it. We think this is a winner, and while it may not prove a mortgage lifter like the pandurata which Craig introduced, it is a good thing just the same. Mr. Craig says pandurata is still selling well after all these years, and they are devoting many houses to it.

New French Hydrangeas. Added experience deepens the impression that we have in these hybrids of that French wonder-worker, Lemoine, a valuable addition to our list of February, March and Easter-flowering plants. Mme. Mouillere has proven especially valuable as an early-flowering variety and is classed now as the best white. Some of the varieties seen in the frames in five and six-inch pots showed as many as fifteen to eighteen heads. There are seven or eight other good sorts in pink, rose and white. The good old standby Otaksa is of course still grown here in large quantity.

Small Leaved English Ivy. Not a novelty but an item seldom seen and worthy of mention. Graceful and desirable for cemetery work and much preferred for baskets and window boxes.

New Crotons. Craig's is certainly the home of croton, in this country. Bewildering variety and perfect condition. All sizes from twenty-cent babies to twenty-dollar specimens. These are grown in the pure air of Norwood where they get color that is color. The Philadelphia end contents itself with a house of representative samples to sell from.

Chrysanthemums. Of course these are used here only as a catch crop but it is interesting to know the varieties which in the opinion of Mr. Craig are considered the most up-to-date and remunerative commercially. Among them we noted Ramapo, Wm. Turner, Mrs. Brock, December Gem, Thanksgiving Queen, Chas. Razer, etc. Among the Pompons, Anemones and Singles: Garza, Quinola and Mrs. Beu are prominent.

The cyclamen, palm, dracæna, poinsettia, genista—and all the other staples, it is unnecessary to mention here except to say that stocks are up to their usual standard. We may state in passing, however, that in dracænas, instead of the usual one or two sorts, the florist can here get his pick of a dozen.

AN UNIQUE EXHIBIT.

Look for this unique exhibit at the Minneapolis exhibition. It represents a mammoth reel wound with Revero Hose. It is made of quartered oak and in the hub is a miniature garden scene with gardener spraying a flower bed; real water coming out of the hose. There is also a garage, automobile, and trees and shrubbery, making a very unique and attractive exhibit. A glass front protects the garden scene. A representative of the Revere Rubber Company will be present to tell you the rest of the story.

Next Week

THOUSANDS of our readers will be interested to know what is going on in Minneapolis. The full story of the Convention Proceedings up to Thursday noon will appear in Horticulture. It will be read from cover to cover. If your advertisement is there it will get its share of attention. If you have not done so already send advertising copy by Tuesday 19th and it will be a winner.

BODDINGTON'S "QUALITY" CHRISTMAS-FLOWERING

SWEET PEAS

WE ARE SUPER-HEADQUARTERS

All true stocks of Winter-flowering Sweet Peas will be scarce this season. Some varieties are a total failure owing to the exceptional season in California this Spring. Our advice to intending planters is to order at once.

Mr. Wm. Sim, Cliftondale, Mass., the great Winter Sweet Pea Specialist, sows our seed almost exclusively.

Our stocks of Christmas-flowering Sweet Peas have stood the test for years, and we can refer you to the largest growers of this increasing popular flower, as to the trueness and quality of our seed, earliness of blooming period and strength and habit of plants.

The following varieties are the "best by test" including Zvolanek's and our own introductions, grown for seed, from selected stocks by the leading California grower and specialist in Sweet Peas.

Our output last year was nearly 3000 lbs. No kicks and plenty of testimonials as to quality, germination and trueness to type.

SEED TRADE

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

Officers—President, Chas. C. Massie, Minneapolis, Minn.; 1st vice-president, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, N. Y.; 2nd vice-president, W. F. Therkildson, Painesville, O.; secretary, C. E. Kendel; assistant secretary, S. F. Willard, Jr., both of Cleveland, O.

Dunkirk, N. Y.—The Dunkirk Seed Company are planning to build an addition 30 x 120 to their plant.

Syracuse, N. Y.—A new seed store has been opened at 304-306 West Water street by the L. L. Patterson Company.

Lem Bowen, of the D. M. Ferry Co., at Detroit, Mich., was a recent visitor to the "House of Daehnfeldt," at Odense, Denmark.

Springfield, Mo.—The Ozark Seed Company, organized three years ago, has been purchased by R. R. Ricketts, president of the Springfield Seed Company.

Paris, Ky.—E. F. Spears & Son, grass seed dealers, whose warehouse was burned down several months ago, announce that they will erect a fireproof building, to cost $50,000.

The trade inspection trip to Henry F. Michell Company's nursery at Andalusia, Pa., of which mention is made under the Philadelphia news column should interest every gardener and florist, for many up-to-date novelties will be seen here at their best, at this time. Particularly interesting will be the field of the new geranium "Helen Michell," which notwithstanding the trying weather conditions is now a glorious sight; a wonderful collection of new phloxes and other perennials, newer cannas and dahlias, in fact everything that can be had in bloom at this time. Free transportation to Andalusia and return from Philadelphia is provided for by the House of Michell.

INCORPORATED.

Wakefield, Mass.—Chas. C. Ball, florist, capital stock, $25,000. Incorporators, John R. Carey, Charles C. Ball and Carrie L. Ball.

H. Emunds of Belleville, Mo., says he will name his new yellow canna Queen Helen. It is a sport from King Humbert and has all of the King's habits.

NEW YORK STATE FAIR, SEPTEMBER 8TH TO 13TH, 1913.

C. H. Vick, of Rochester, N. Y., Superintendent of the Floral Department, is a very busy man these days, making preparations for the coming show which he intends shall eclipse all previous ones. Floral Hall will be made a veritable beauty spot as part of the building will be laid out as a flower garden with turfed lawns, flower beds, walks and trellises covered with vines, etc.

Lord & Burnham will erect a conservatory 40 x 60 feet complete with boiler and pipes and the benches will be filled with a splendid collection of plants. This of itself will prove a great drawing card and will doubtless be a splendid advertisement for the firm. A fine band will be in attendance each day, and it goes without saying that Floral Hall will be the Mecca for all visitors.

The premium list this year calls for nearly $3,000 for plants, designs and cut flowers, which should insure a large entry list. Those having specialities will find a splendid field for advertising them as last year there were over two hundred thousand paid admissions to the Fair. Mr. Vick's ability as an organizer is well and favorably known. This year he has chosen Henry Youell, Financial Secretary of the American Gladiolus Society, as his assistant. Exhibitors may feel assured that every facility and attention will be given them.

Premium lists may be had free by addressing A. E. Brown, Secretary of the New York State Fair, Syracuse, N. Y. Entries close August 30th.

As it is difficult to obtain accommodation at the hotels during Fair week, Mr. Youell will gladly recommend respectable and reasonable places to those who will write him at his address, No. 538 Cedar street, Syracuse, N. Y.

NEWS NOTES.

El Paso, Texas—The Texas Floral Company has removed from 103 Texas street to 617 East Rio Grande.

New York, N. Y.—The florists' greens supply concerns of N. Lecakes and George Cotsonas, are about to merge and incorporate.

Detroit, Mich.—Bad news reaches us from Owosso, Mich., where the Owosso Floral Co., lost all of its greenhouses during a heavy hailstorm on the evening of August 8. This section has been the sufferer of more damaging storms this season than for many years past and we trust and hope that no more of our fellow workers are visited by similar calamities.

St. Louis, Mo.—John Milhaupt, 70 years, old, a retired florist, of 3459 Washington avenue, was perhaps fatally injured and William C. Mackle, about the same age, a florist, of 4328 Arco avenue, seriously hurt on Tuesday evening, August 5, when a horse which they were driving attached to a light wagon took fright at an automobile and ran away on Manchester road near the Kirkwood-Ferguson car tracks, in Brentwood Milhaupt had a fractured left arm, dislocated right elbow and internal injuries. His advanced age retards his chances of recovery.

A YOUNG LADY'S SUMMER OUTING.

And the Part the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Played in This Outing.

A bevy of young society girls with their chaperon boarded the large freight steamer William E. Corey at a Lake Erie port bound through Lake Erie, Detroit River, Lake St. Clair, St. Clair River, Lake Huron, St. Mary's River, through the Locks at the Soo and Lake Superior to Duluth. The chaperon of the party gave strict orders that no young men be allowed to hang around the seamer with boxes of flowers or candy as signs of a farewell. One of these unfortunate young men happened to be a Detroiter and he came and told his troubles to a florist who for a while sympathized with him, then said, as a good doctor would tell his patient: "Well, my dear boy, we can help you because the Florists' Telegraph Delivery has made deliveries before which many thought impossible. Tonight or early in the morning when this steamer passes Detroit we will run out in the marine reporters' launch and deliver the flowers you wish for your young lady." We did, and the steamer never stopped.

Later it was told that the chaperon promised never to keep young men from buying flowers for their sweethearts as a token of farewell. So please remember, when in trouble, to use The Florists' Telegraph Delivery.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES.

W. Atlee Burpee arrived home from his European trip on the 11th inst.

Edward Reid has been laid up for a week with a severe attack of the grip.

A special train has been chartered by the H. F. Michell Co. for a day's outing at their nurseries and trial grounds at Andalusia on Wednesday, the 27th inst., leaving Broad street station, at 11 A. M. All readers of HORTICULTURE are cordially invited. Write for identification tag, which is all that is necessary in lieu of a ticket.

C. E. Meehan figures out that there are some twenty-five prominent Philadelphia florists at Ocean City, N. J., this summer—which speaks volumes for that popular summer resort, notwithstanding that there our old acquaintance, Mr. Pecksniff, objects to bathing on Sunday, and also to the abbreviated costume of Father Neptune—with his trident. Such is life!

The special meeting of the Florists' Club to hear the report of the committee on hall was held on the 11th inst. The committee thought Sangerfest Hall would do for the International Show. Alterations and rent, etc., $27,000 — they concluded would not scare the S. A. F. if they were bent on having the next big event in Philadelphia. So it is now up to the S. A. F. committee to make the next move.

W. E. McKissick has resigned his position as manager of the Washington store of the Pennock-Meehan Co., and has accepted a similar position with the Leo Niessen Co., who are to open a branch in Baltimore, Md. We understand that the Pennock-Meehan Company will make no new appointment for manager for the present, but will have a representative of the firm and the present help run things until the busy season sets in.

An esteemed subscriber to HORTICULTURE asks us to publicly acknowledge his heartfelt gratitude for the generous way in which the Philadelphia florists have responded to his modest request for a small contribution to the sufferers from the Balkan war. It gives us much pleasure to publish the list of contributors which is as follows:

Frank Polites, the subscriber in question, is a native of Greece and conducts two stores in this city, one at 13th and the other at 15th and Chestnut street. He is a highly esteemed citizen and a credit to his adopted country. His younger brother who conducted the store for him at the 13th street place, enlisted for the war and has gone through that harrowing experience with the breath still in his body and from his last letter to his brother, just received, we learn that he is truly thankful for that. We expect to see him back in our midst by Christmas.

In the severe storm which struck this vicinity Sunday we hear of no great greenhouse destruction, which is remarkable, considering there was a sixty-mile gale and many buildings unroofed or blown down. James Verner, Garrettford, had a stack blown down; George Burton, Chestnut Hill, stack struck by lightning—only one-third left; Geo. Campbell, Flourtown, a small dwelling damaged; Gus Doemling, Lansdowne, a dozen boxes of glass will repair the damage there.

The Leo Niessen Company confine their entire efforts to the wholesaling of cut flowers, and their annual volume of business is very large, if not the largest of any wholesale house in the East. The building they occupy was erected by themselves, and every provision was made to make it a most up-to-date establishment in every respect. The first floor, which is the salesroom, is well divided in various departments, there is no crowding, an abundance of daylight, in fact every advantage is found here to handle cut flowers to the greatest satisfaction for both the retailer and grower. The success of this firm is well known to all who are familiar with conditions in Philadelphia. It has been that conservative, steady advance, the result of careful judgment and business methods that command the respect and support of the trade.

Visitors: L. C. Bobbink, of Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J.; H. L. Holmes, Holmes Seed Co., Harrisburg, Pa.; Arthur Blome, of Paul Blome & Co., Chicago, Ill.; Mr. Ackerman, secretary of The Zeiger Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Ben Beu, Chicago, Ill.; Joseph Cannon, Scranton, Pa.

Calling at H. Bayersdorfer & Co.'s a few days ago we were impressed with the remarkable number of new and really beautiful flower baskets and vases there displayed. There are willow basket vases glass-lined which will prove very serviceable in floral decorative work. Some heavy garlands of preserved bay leaves flashing with bronze and golden poppy heads, humming birds and other accessories for showy decorations were very effective. All these and many other useful things will be shown at Minneapolis. Mr. Bayersdorfer says that all those who want French immortelles this year should buy early or they run the chance of getting left as the immortelles all rotted in the field and there is the shortest crop on record.

CHICAGO NOTES.

Asters and gladiolus are getting more plentiful and of better quality.

The Chicago Carnation Co. are enlarging and improving their office, also adding to their store facilities.

The recent rains will be a great help to the field-grown carnations that are still out, putting the soil in fine condition for transplanting.

The heavy dashing rains of Thursday night and Sunday damaged the outdoor flowers for the time being, but will be a great benefit in the long run.

E. Toepel, secretary of the Chicago Florists' Club and head bookkeeper for Poehlmann Bros. Co at Morton Grove, expects to go to Washington about September 1st to engage in farming. He will be missed by the club, but his many friends wish him success in his new enterprise.

The handsomest all-green window in the down-town district this summer is to be found in Geo. Perdikas' store on S. Wabash avenue. A mound of green occupies the center and large palms and ferns fill the corners in irregular arrangement. As a filler an arrangement of loose gray stones gives relief in color and a cool, out-of-door effect. The window attracted much attention and did not cost much either of time or money.

CINCINNATI PERSONALS.

J. T. Conger, the Hartwell florist, has returned from Wichita, Kan.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Fries of Ft. Thomas have returned from their trip through the west.

The only local florists who have signified their intention of attending the convention are C. E. Critchell and J. A. Peterson accompanied by their respective wives. Mr. Peterson will also have his daughter in the party. Chas. Baum, Knoxville, Tenn., will join the party in this city.

Visitors: Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; Sam Seligman, New York, and E. Hyatt of Stuart & Haugh, Anderson, Ind.

NEWS NOTES.

Yonkers, N. Y.—The palm house at "Greystone," the Untermyer estate, was unroofed in the severe storm last Sunday afternoon and about one hundred trees were uprooted.

Northampton, Mass.—Last Friday, Jonathan Edwards' grand old elm tumbled to the earth from which it sprang nearly 200 years ago; dead from old age. Planted in front of his home by the noted Presbyterian divine in about 1726—the exact date is in dispute—the giant landmark proudly withstood the blasts that swept down the Connecticut valley while generation after generation passed away, and when it finally dropped, there was scarcely a breath of air stirring. Nor was its going unostentatious, for it tore down trolley, telegraph and telephone wires and sounded the fire alarm. On the pavement the trunk was broken into bits of souvenir size.

Twelve years ago, when it was feared that the elm would fall, the larger branches were cut off, and the hollow of the tree was filled with 25 barrels of cement in order to preserve as long as possible one of the most historic trees in the State.

A cablegram received from W. A. Manda, dated at Ghent, Belgium, states that he has won over twenty prizes at the big exhibition there.

Small & Sons, New York, as flower buyer, ever since the establishment was opened years ago, has resigned on account of impaired health and will open a small flower store for himself in Stapleton, Staten Island. Messrs. Small part with him with reluctance and much regret is expressed in the wholesale marts where Mr. Trumpore has many friends and will be greatly missed.

Oliver Lines, orchid grower at Wyndhurst Gardens, Lenox, Mass., for the past five years has engaged with Mr. Arthur N. Cooley of Pittsfield, Mass., to take charge of the orchids at that place, where quite an extensive collection is being worked up.

Obituary

C. Leslie Reynolds.

While pursuing some boys who had been throwing stones at the hothouses in the National Botanical Gardens on Wednesday last, C. Leslie Reynolds, superintendent of the gardens, dropped dead from heart failure.

He was born in Montgomery County, Maryland, fifty-five years ago, but at an early age he went to Washington, later obtaining an appointment as page at the National Capitol. When fifteen years of age, he secured a transfer to the Botanical Gardens as a messenger boy. He soon became an apprentice and continued up the ladder until he became assistant superintendent and during the illness of the late William R. Smith he acted as superintendent, and upon the death of the latter he was the logical man for the position. On July 14, 1912, he was officially appointed superintendent of the gardens by the Library Committee of Congress, since which time he has done much to beautify the gardens and he has just gotten them back into shape following the ravages of the recent storm. During his forty years residence in the National Capital and service with the Government, Mr. Reynolds has made a host of friends and but two days before his death he was one of the guests of honor at the crab feast tendered by Edward S. Schmid to the Florists' Club of Washington.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON There is no business here this week. In town and out of town everybody is either away or wishing he were away and one might as well remain idle as to attempt either to drum up an order or a check. The quality of flowers seen in the market is very classy, but that does not suffice to sell it. The new crop of carnations have made their first appearance this week. Roses are still small, as a rule. Sweet peas have never been so handsome or so difficult to dispose of. There are plenty of lilies of fine quality. Gladioli have been accumulating, but they have almost no commercial value and the wholesalers only ask someone to make an offer. The same is largely true of asters, of which the main supply thus far consists of the unsalable runts. One wonders why anybody goes to the trouble to raise this class of asters as they have had no sale to speak of for several years back.

BUFFALO There have been some very quiet days during last week and there were also days when things were brisk. One day an over supply and the following a shortage. Business has been uneven, though we cannot complain as summer conditions still exist. There are but few good asters but some fine gladioli are had and amongst them Panama is introduced and has taken well. Some good Maryland roses are had also some White Killarney, which are taking the place of Kaiserine. Beauties have improved in quality and in sales, also lilies, both Japs and Giganteums. Lily of the valley has still been moving.

CHICAGO The market last week was exceedingly quiet. The dullness was more pronounced following as it did an unusually active demand during the month of July. There is an abundance of stock of such varieties as are seasonable in mid-summer. Gladioli are over-abundant and only a small proportion of the choicest stock finds a market. The same might be said of asters; of these but few of the larger and better sorts are in, the bulk consisting of the small, early variety which can be had at "almost any old price." Auratums are quite plentiful, but move fairly well. Longiflorum lilies of fair quality are about equal to demand. Beauties are increasing in supply and in spite of the very hot weather that has prevailed for an unusually long period, the quality is very good. In teas there is a fair supply of most of the leading sorts. Of the newer varieties we note some very fine Shawyer. This rose appears to be one that is going to make a hit. Stem, color and great keeping qualities are valuable points in its favor.

CINCINNATI Market affairs took a very decided turn for the worse during last week and the early part of this week. Hardly anything can realize its true value, and there is plenty of stock left over after the close of business each day. Asters are beginning to come in stronger. The early local cut was more or less of a failure owing to the hot, dry spell and stem-rot. Out-of-town shipments are, however, beginning to make up for this deficiency with considerable good stock. The gladiolus market is glutted. Even the best of them have failed to clean up completely. The rose market, too, has a very adequate supply and stock is coming in better.

DETROIT Mid - summer dullness last week affected every line of the business. The only redeeming feature is furnished by a look outdoors where the carnation plants stand or indoors where chrysanthemums are gaining daily in length and strength.

NEW YORK There is really nothing to write about in this market. It is unquestionably the dullest summer season ever experienced by the florists of this section. As things have been going of late there seems very little reason for opening the shop doors at all. The stock of flowers sent in by the few growers who think it worth while to send to the wholesale marts, is not large and consists mainly of asters and gladioli. Lilies are also quite abundant. The asters are principally of the small flowered sort as yet, only a few of the large variety being in evidence. These latter bring a price but the others "go for a song." Roses are not good and carnations are practically useless. A good many dahlias are seen but nobody wants them.

PHILADELPHIA Last week as a whole was a fairly good summer week. The bulk of the stock coming is under grade. This is particularly true of asters, notwithstanding that we have had considerable rainfall. The large-flowering varieties are not yet in and the mid-season sorts are not so choice as they might be. The gladiolus crop is now pretty well cut out and supplies of these are considerably smaller. Roses are a little bit on the increase as to quantity. A large percentage are under size, although fair as to stem and foliage. Carnations continue very scarce. Orchids also are quite scarce. Hydrangea heads are now a feature and selling fairly well. Plenty of lily of the valley and lilies and of very good quality. These go steadily at normal prices. Delphinium belladonna, lavender, is a satisfactory item and fills many a difficulty admirably. There is also some blue cornflower. Lilium speciosum, both the rubrum and album, are in season and are cleaning up nicely. The demand for nymphea and nelumbium is fairly good, as is usual for this time of year.

ST. LOUIS There is nothing new to report in St. Louis. Prices continue the same. Retail business is very dull. Flowers coming in are more or less of very poor quality and the demand has been especially light in colored stock. The flowers that can be depended upon daily are asters, roses, lilies, carnations, gladioli and tuberose stalks. Greens of all kinds have a large demand, owing to the scarcity of smilax.

Providence, R. I.—An exceptional lull in the trade is reported by practically all of the dealers during the past week. Although this is the time when the growers and retailers look for a quiet period, the market is the slowest in years.

Providence, R. I.—Edgar J. Lowenstein has purchased "Dunmere," the handsome estate of the late R. G. Dun, located in the exclusive residential section of Narragansett Pier, one of the most advantageously situated estates there, and its new owner will occupy it as a summer home. Adjoining the well cultivated lawns and rose gardens, is a gardener's cottage and a range of greenhouses, of iron frame construction, comprising a grape house 60 feet, fern house 30 feet, plant house 70 feet, and palm house, 30x40.

Mastica is elastic and tenacious, admits of expansion and contraction. Putty becomes hard and brittle. Broken glass more easily removed without breaking of other glass as occurs with hard putty. Lasts longer than putty. Easy to apply.

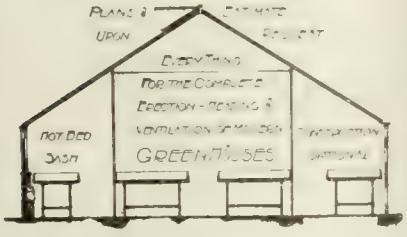
KROESCHELL BETTER THAN CAST IRON



Your No. 7 Kroeschell Boiler, rated at 15,000 sq. ft. of glass, is carrying my entire range of 17,000 sq. ft. of glass. It might heat more. We maintain a temperature of 50° and have no trouble to keep the proper temperature in the coldest weather. During the cold snap of 1912 we fired every three hours during the night. I find it a saving in fuel to fire often. I have the Kroeschell Boiler six years and the only expense is one set of grates. No other but a plate boiler for me.

"You Can't Drive a Nail With a Sponge No Matter How Hard You Soak It"

A SPONGE was not made for that purpose. No more can you get economical results from any cast iron boiler for greenhouse heating, if the boiler was not designed and made for the purpose of greenhouse heating.

It was over 40 years ago when we first started thinking about making a greenhouse boiler.

For years we thought and worked over it before even a casting was made.

Three different boilers were made by us in the years that followed.

Each in turn was discarded for one that better met the continually increasing demands for greenhouse economy.

This last boiler has its two side and one big center flue-way, gets heat quicker, burns the coal down to a free-er ash and pushes the water through the coils with greater force than any previous one.

It's by far the most economical of them all.

When you buy a boiler—buy a greenhouse boiler and not a residence boiler, struggling and straining to economically do greenhouse work.

You can't expect a sponge to do a hammer's work.

FROM CHINA

Hardy, Beautiful, Fragrant
The Finest Novelties Extant

LILIUM MYRIOPHYLLUM

Mr. E. H. Wilson, the famous plant collector, collected for us the bulbs now offered, in Northwestern China. He considers this the finest of all lilies. It is absolutely hardy, and is excellent for forcing. It has been predicted that this will become the Easter Lily of the future, and being so hardy, may be grown at home. The flowers are white, slightly suffused with pink and with a beautiful shade of canary yellow at the centre, and extending part way up the trumpet. It is delightfully perfumed, reminding one of the jasmine, and lacking the heavy oppressive odor of most lilies. Blooms out-of-doors early in July. Awarded the Gold Medal at the S. A. F. & O. H. International Flower Show, New York, 1913, as the Finest New Plant on exhibition; Gold Medal by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, and a first-class certificate by the Royal International Exhibition, London, 1912. Bulbs, ready in October, each, $1.50; dozen, $15.00.

LILIUM SARGENTIAE

This noble variety was also collected by Mr. Wilson. This is one of the strongest growing lilies —frequently attaining a height of six to eight feet. The flowers vary in number from five to ten on a stalk, and in size and shape resembling Lilium Harrisii, greenish white, shaded purple on the outside, and of the purest white within, with a tint of citron in the centre. The flowers have a pleasing fragrance. This lily will undoubtedly be largely used for outdoor planting as well as for forcing. Many consider it the finest of all tubular-flowered lilies. It flowers somewhat later than Lilium myriophyllum and being of larger growth, has a distinct place. Awarded a Silver Medal by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, 1912, and a Gold Medal August, 1913. Bulbs, ready in October, each $1.50; dozen, $15.00.

WHAT TO BUY

Sometimes a florist does not know just what would be most appropriate for him to buy in lily bulbs. So if you ever feel that way, let us know it. Say when you want flowers and what temperature you can maintain and we can advise you what and when to plant. Giganteum and Formosum are the safest of all lilies—other varieties are a gamble: but whatever variety you decide to plant it is best to get Horseshoe Brand bulbs because they are positively the best produced in the respected varieties.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Adiantums

Bench-grown adiantum that has been denuded by continual cutting should have a good cleaning up and a period of rest. To bring this about let up on water supply to their roots. This should be done gradually and at no time should water be entirely withheld. Keep the atmosphere in a dryer state, bringing the atmospheric moisture down to the minimum point. When they show signs of renewed activities they should have a rich mulch of equal parts of well-rotted cow manure and new soil spread on the surface about half an inch deep. When new fronds are showing well all over the beds give them plenty of moisture both at the roots and in the atmosphere. Give only enough of shade to keep them from burning or losing their deep green color. When they have made three or four inches of growth give regular liquid manure feeding.

Care of Chrysanthemums, Etc.

The plants by this time have taken a good hold of the soil in the benches, and should now begin to make rapid growth. Proper attention to watering and sprinkling, to weeding and working among the plants, to ventilation and purity of air, and to the maintenance of neatness and cleanliness, will now take up most of the grower's time. The market value of cut flowers nowadays is largely gauged by the length, strength and straightness of their stems. Supports of some kind are needed in the raising of most plants to sustain the dense leafage, to give firmness to stem and branches and to guide the flowering shoots in their upward growth. Steel rods, wooden stakes and devices of various designing in wire, string, or both, are called into service for the purpose. Too tight a fastening of the plants, as they push upward, is not advisable. There should be room enough between stake and living wood to allow of expansion in growth and free sway of foliage. Always leave the uppermost undeveloped growth entirely unhampered by any string.

Cyclamen for 1914

To have plants of good size for the winter of 1914 seed should be sown now without delay as it takes from fourteen to fifteen months to bring them into flower. Be sure to procure fresh seed of the very best strain from a reliable seedsman. The seed of cyclamen is always very irregular in starting so give them sweet and rather sandy mixture to germinate in. A good compost is a mixture of fibrous loam, leaf mold and peat in equal parts with a little sand. Give the pans or flats plenty of drainage in order to keep the soil from becoming sour. I find it a better plan to sow the seed so that they stand about half an inch apart each way and quarter of an inch deep. When sown this way you can keep the surface of the compost sweet by a little cultivating off and on. Keep them shaded and moist and you will soon see them beginning to come through the soil.

Show Pelargoniums

Pelargoniums that have been resting should by this time have their wood well ripened. To propagate well the wood should have undergone a rest of three or four weeks. Make cuttings from the tops, leaving a couple of joints to each cutting; place in a cutting bench and with shade and a moderate amount of moisture they will soon root. They can be potted up into 2½ or 3-inch pots. For a compost use three parts of fibrous loam to one of well-decayed cow manure and enough sand to lighten it up. Keep shaded for a short time and then give them a bench where they will have plenty of light. When all the cuttings have been taken, these old plants can be pruned back moderately hard which will compel them to break into a sturdy growth. These can be repotted into a new compost like the one mentioned above and grown on. Be careful not to overwater them until they have started new root action and top-growth.

Sowing Pansies

From now up to the first week in September is the best time to plant pansy seed. Procure the best strains in mixed or separate colors. Pansies at all stages of growth like good soil so take a little trouble with the seed bed. If only a few thousand plants are wanted it is better to sow the seed in a cold-frame if plenty of leaf-mold is at command. Mix a good quantity of it through the soil with some well-rotted cow manure. Sow the seed broadcast or in shallow drills and keep the soil in moist state. Whenever the seedlings are large enough to handle they should be transplanted so that each shall have abundant room. Keep the plants well watered and the surface of the soil stirred frequently.

Seed Sowing

In order to have plenty of nice flowering plants of daisies and myosotis no time should be lost in making a planting of these very important plants. Do not sow too thickly as one is liable to do it nine times out of ten. Sow outdoors in a cold frame and let them have the same treatment as for pansies. When pricking them out select a frame where you can easily protect them with covering during the winter.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Bouvardias; Care of Carnations; Housing Tender Plants; Odontoglossums; Propagating Geraniums; Stevias.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

George H. Penson

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Penson. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

King George Melon

King George Melon is one of the newest introductions and with such a title great things are expected of it. Novelties are continually being sent out on all things claiming prestige over existing varieties—some justly so, but alas! others do not always justify all that is said of them. This is not so with King George Melon for after three trials with us here it proves itself one of the best and all the claims made for it are justified. Having an attractive appearance—oval in shape, dark green skin netted deeply, the flesh is scarlet in color and cuts very deep, while the flavor is surpassed by none. It sets its fruit very freely which attain quite an average size.

After all these good qualities one little fault must be recorded—how easy to find them even in the best. It requires special care at the roots, anything touching on slackness in the way of watering is at once resented. It resembles Sutton's Perfection somewhat in this way.

Late Muscat Grapes

Muscat grapes that are hanging through the hot weather ought to be given treatment that will help the vines in addition to keeping the grapes. In the winter time little moisture is needed but with the recent hot weather moisture must be around to help the foliage and also to help keep red spider down. The roots, too, must not be allowed to want for water—call it "a betwixt and between treatment." Early in the morning with a heavy dew or during a stormy day no moisture will be needed. Look over the bunches periodically to remove any decayed berries. A berry removed in time saves nine.

Winter Tomatoes

Make a sowing of tomatoes for the winter crop at once. Use well drained pans, or flats if large quantites are required, fill them up with porous soil that has passed through a half-inch seive making it just firm enough so that when it is watered it will not settle down any. Some prefer to water the soil before the seeds are sown, others will sow the seed, cover them over with a little soil and then water. They will germinate and the seedlings will grow either way if the amount of soil covering the seeds is no thicker than a seed itself. Many small seeds are ruined by sowing them too deep. It is better to water the soil before real small seeds are sown as there is a chance of washing them out. Pans are best plunged which does away with watering until the seeds come up. Cover them over with a piece of glass to hold the moisture until they show through. Pot up into 2¼s as soon as they are large enough to handle using the same soil as they are sown in. Keep the seedlings in a well ventilated house near a side ventilator if possible, as soon as they have taken hold of the soil.

Bush Beans

When making a final sowing of bush beans in the garden try to grow them so that they will be handy to receive temporary protection from early frosts or sow three single drills (two double ones) so that a temporary frame consisting of a stake drove in the ground with a 1 inch by 2 inch nailed on to it can be made for them. Shutters used for winter covering can be placed over the frame and so prolong the season considerably. A sowing made now in 10-inch pans or azalea pots will often come in useful and will be through before the last bench is wanted in the vegetable house. Fill the pots only half full at the time of sowing, leaving the remaining room for top dressing.

Turnips for Forcing

Where it is intended to force turnips for the tender tops during the winter months an additional quantity should be sown for the purpose. In many places these should be in already, others will soon have to get them in. Any one who has not tried this method of forcing turnips for the green tops during the winter months is recommended to try it. It is generally liked, makes a nice change, and is easy to grow.

Soil for Winter

Most vegetables will be found to grow best in a soil that is half decayed, in this stage the food substances are more soluble than when using new or green sod. Have a little pile got together expressly for the vegetables mixing in a little manure if the sod is any way poor. Sod that has been taken from a good pasture will not need any, but a little soot will improve it. This of course applies only where growing in benches is practiced. Houses erected for growing vegetables commercially will be large enough to have a team go in and plough the whole thing up after manuring in the usual way.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Shipping the Cut Blooms

This may seem an unnecessary subject to bring up, yet a good many hard earned dollars are lost almost daily, by the careless handling of cut roses, before and during transit. Many also go out unprepared to stand the rough handling which they are subject to on their way to the commission houses or the retail customer. Remember that all roses cut should remain in the icebox for at least two hours before they are packed for shipment. This is very important, for if the cut roses are not properly hardened they will not last as long or keep so well.

Keep the stems of all the cut blooms immersed in clean fresh water—water that you would not hesitate to drink. This is another important thing. Stagnant water is injurious to the quality of the flowers, and if they are immersed in it for any length of time, all the foliage coming into contact with such water will perish and turn brown. This hardly adds beauty to the cut blooms, neither does it help to sell them.

Remember that the flowers will be handled at least three times before they finally find themselves in someone's home, and if they are in a poor condition when they leave the grower, how can they ever give satisfaction to the customer buying from the retail florist? That is a question that ought to be kept in mind when cutting, storing, packing, in fact even growing roses and other cut flowers, for either commercial or private use.

Getting a Name

During "gluts" in markets, when even the very best of stock sells for a low price, you will notice that growers with a reputation always receive much better prices for their stock than growers who just ship in a helter skelter way, paying little or no attention to the way or condition in which their product arrives in the market. Even when the market is good, stock known to be select always brings more.

It will take at least three years to establish a name, so do not be discouraged if you do not notice any difference in the price the very first time you send your boxes down to market, filled with well graded and perfect roses.

Wax and Tissue Papers

Do not be too economical in using wax and tissue papers, as they are very essential to proper packing of roses. Ordinary tissue papers are all right in their place, but as soon as the least water touches them they are done for, and this fact should be borne in mind when lining boxes. A good way is to use a little wax paper in connection with the other papers, even though you use only enough to go around the wet stems of the cut roses. This will protect the other papers a little from wet, and will also keep the cut roses from sliding around in the box, as they would should the wax paper be used alone.

Tying the Roses in Boxes

Where long stemmed roses are packed in paper boxes, whether they are Beauties or others, it is well to run a piece of heavy string around the bottom of the box, and have it enter into the box two or three inches from the bottom, and then tying the two ends inside of the box, thus holding the roses firmly, yet gently in place, preventing them from being broken when the box is roughly handled during transit. Needless to say the rope should not be tied anywhere near the buds, for the foliage near the bud is as valuable as the bud itself. Many long stemmed Beauties are sold cheap because their foliage is almost ruined by careless handling.

Have the rope or string come about a foot away from the ends of the stems, where bruised foliage will not count so much, for this much of the stem is usually put into vases when the flowers are put up at the house.

The string which is used for this purpose should not be too thin, as it would then cut through the box, should this happen to be a paper one, as is the case on most of the places shipping anything to the market.

Among the Young Plants

Beauties that have been benched for some time will now call for the wires for the second tier, and some for the third and last. Keep them well strung, for if there is anything that looks unsightly, it is poorly stretched wires, which make the plants look so strange. In tying be very careful not to bunch the shoots too much, for this would look very bad and would not be of any benefit to the plants themselves. A good grower will have the growth of the plants well distributed over all the wires so that there is not a place where they will be crowded. Another thing worth while paying attention to is the cutting of the string after tying a knot. How often do we see a lot of long strings sticking out into the walk and how bad it does look! How different to see a bench of Beauties tied so that you cannot see the strings at all. Do your work neatly, it does not cost any more, and the difference is well worth it.

Doing our best

It is a far haul from Minneapolis to Boston and we hope our readers will keep this fact in mind as they peruse our story of the proceedings of the big national society still in session as we go to press, and pardon any seeming errors or omissions which they may detect. Such news as we are enabled to present in this issue is transmitted entirely by telegraph, with many possibilities of mistakes in one or the other respect. Should any incongruities appear we crave the kind indulgence of our readers and next week we shall be able to do better, undoubtedly.

Theodore Wirth

Theodore Wirth, selected by the Society of American Florists as its standard bearer for the year 1914, comes to this high honor and large responsibility one of the best equipped men ever selected for the presidency of the national Society. His splendid work in the development of the Minneapolis park system and his previous achievements in a similar capacity at Hartford, Conn., are well-known and fresh in the minds of our readers. As to his earlier career, we might state briefly that Mr. Wirth was born at Winterthur, Switzerland, in 1863. His first employment after graduating from school was with a leading florist and nursery establishment in Switzerland. From that time until 1888 he filled responsible positions in Zurich, London, St. Albans and Paris, and then came to this country, serving successively as a private gardener at Morristown, N. J., rose grower at So. Orange, and in the park department of New York City under Samuel Parsons, after which he devoted himself to landscape work until in 1896 he was appointed superintendent of the parks of Hartford, then in the process of construction. In 1906 he took charge of the Minneapolis park system. Theodore Wirth is the embodiment of zeal and energy, tireless and determined in whatever he undertakes and knowing no such word as fail. As an executive officer he has the qualities that command respect and make for success. Personally he is a courteous gentleman, sympathetic in temperament and generous by nature. Boston is to be congratulated on having Theodore Wirth at the head of affairs for her convention year.

The S. A. F.

The introductory word when the Society of American Florists was formed was an affirmation of the need for an effective coalition between the various closely related floricultural interests of the country for the common good and a statement of the advantages that would follow such a course. True to first principles, this society has faithfully lived up to its pledge voluntarily made to lift up and carry forward all movements tending to promote the welfare of the craft, and the altruistic spirit of its initial policies has been plainly dominant all through its career. Based on the broad principle of elevating the profession and advancing the standard of American horticulture, distinctly philanthropic in its aims and purposes and democratic in its activities, this organization, although never accepted at its proper value by the great mass of the people whom it sought to benefit, has succeeded with able leadership and the loyalty of a goodly proportion of the more advanced and enterprising men of the craft in making an enviable record of useful accomplishment from the first up to the present time. The bettered social and commercial conditions of the art and the craft to whose interests it stands pledged, as compared with those prevailing at the time the society was launched, are generally recognized, we think, as due in a great measure to its good work and influence, supplemented by the zeal and energy of the local and special organizations which have come into being all over the country as a direct result of its encouragement and example and there can be no question that the mighty progress of horticulture on this continent during the last twenty-five years owes much of its stimulation to the good seed so industriously sown by the S. A. F. and the numerous offspring who have drawn their vitality and inspiration from the parent body. To the S. A. F. the florist already owes much; to the S. A. F. he must still look for support and defence when adverse legislation or other oppression menaces his prosperity. This he should as an individual, take seriously to heart now, and if he has not already done so, see that his name is added to the membership roll of an association whose business it is to befriend him in time of trouble,—a safeguard which is practically indispensable under twentieth century business conditions.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS AND ORNAMENTAL HORTICULTURISTS

A Well Attended Convention and the Exhibition a Splendid Success

Boston, Mass., Next Meeting Place

Officers Elected

PRESIDENT—THEODORE WIRTH, Minneapolis, Minn.
VICE-PRESIDENT—PATRICK WELCH, Boston, Mass.
SECRETARY—JOHN YOUNG, New York, N. Y.
TREASURER—WILLIAM F. KASTING, Buffalo, N. Y.

OPENING SESSION.

Two P. M., Tuesday.

President Desmond of the Minneapolis Florist Club called the convention to order and introduced Vice-President Theodore Wirth, whose words of welcome were roundly applauded and who was followed by Mayor Wallace G. Nye. The Mayor eloquently voiced the greeting of the city and awakened much enthusiasm. William F. Gude responded in an equally appropriate vein on behalf of the society.

President Farquhar then read his address, as follows:

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

Ladies and Gentlemen, Members of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists:

Never has it fallen to the lot of a president to make his convention address under such favorable conditions as exist in our Society at this our 29th annual meeting.

Since we last met, we have progressed and increased our influence to such a degree, that a review of the year's proceedings might well be devoted to laudation rather than to suggestion or criticism.

We did well in deliberately deciding upon beautiful Minneapolis for our meeting this year. The wisdom of the selection is already manifest; nor did we choose Minneapolis alone—but the Twin Cities, which are one in horticultural spirit, one in effort for a successful convention, and one in welcoming us to their midst. Yonder river does not divide the twins; they are linked beyond its waters.

A Busy Year.

Since our Chicago Convention, the Society has been unusually active. The great success of the New York Flower Show was accomplished only by the untiring work of your officers in co-operation with those of the New York Florists Club and other local organizations. Especially must I commend the zeal and work of Mr. Charles H. Totty.

Meanwhile, our Vice-President, Mr. Theodore Wirth, has been busy with his out-door garden exhibit in connection with this Convention, a feature but once before attempted and then on a comparatively small scale.

Mr. W. F. Gude, our Washington representative, as chairman of the Committee on Tariff and Legislation, has done much to secure satisfactory action on the classification of horticultural imports in the new tariff.

Officers.

Our by-laws wisely provide that several of our committees shall change gradually, as in the case of Executive and National Flower Show Committees. I am opposed to spasmodic changes, and I believe that our State Vice-Presidents, where they have been active in promoting the interests of the Society, might well be re-appointed by incoming presidents, as has been done not infrequently.

PATRICK WELCH
Vice-President-Elect Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists.

State Vice-Presidents.

A former state vice-president recently asked me, "What besides making a report of trade conditions in his state is there for a state vice-president to do?" I replied that at present the Society did not seem to be making all the use it could make of its state vice-presidents. I think that the annual report, the submission of which is in some instances neglected, is but a small part of the work that officer might do.

I am convinced that great good would result if the vice-president of each state would consider the S. A. F. & O. H. members therein as constituting a society of themselves under his (or her) charge; and if he or she would call these members together once or twice each year, matters affecting their interests could be discussed and acted upon. Then through the Secretary and Executive Committee the full support of the Society could be accorded to the members of any state, when in need of its helpful influence.

Such state meetings might be held in connection with any important flower show or other horticultural meeting in a leading town, under the direction of our state vice-president.

Headquarters in Washington.

Frequently, attention has been called to our obligation, under our charter, to establish a permanent domicile in Washington.

In a few years it will be necessary for us to petition Congress for permission to hold property beyond the present limit of our charter, which is fifty thousand ($50,000.) dollars. We should at once begin to make good our delinquency in having failed up to the present time to establish our office in Washington, and, having done so, we will be in better standing when we ask Congress to permit us to hold property up to ten or twenty times our present limit—a round million would be none too much.

Parcel Post.

The recent raising of the parcels post limit to twenty pounds weight by the Postmaster General, is a step in the right direction. It is to be hoped that soon the horticultural interests will be able to obtain a better rate than the present one of eight cents per pound for their products.

The Executive Board.

The work of the executive board is much more arduous than many members of the Society realize. They have intimate knowledge and insight of the affairs of our organization not possessed by the majority of our members. At times the recommendations of this board which actually controls our doings for fifty-one weeks of the year have not seemed to receive the responsive approbation and support of the Society which their importance would have appeared to justify. I feel that the suggestions of this board should receive more thoughtful consideration.

Congratulation.

In conclusion fellow-members, let me say that notwithstanding the few suggestions I have made, the burden of my message to you this morning is congratulation.

Our Society has grown — grown numerically — grown in financial strength — grown in influence and power as an organization helpful to its members in trade. It has grown as a factor in promoting horticulture and the love of flowers among all classes of our people.

Your officers, your vice-president, your secretary, your treasurer, your executive committee, your National Flower Show committee and your other officers and committees have done their work faithfully and well and for the remarkable physical and material growth of our Society, which their various reports will disclose, there is but one comment—congratulation. And for your wisdom in choosing them, as well as for having so wisely selected this city for our present convention, you, fellow-members, have my heartiest congratulation.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

Secretary Young then presented his annual report and secretary's financial reports, as follows:

The secretary's financial report will show the affairs of the Society to be in a very healthy condition. Undoubtedly the vote of the Chicago convention to meet in Minneapolis was a very wise one. The florists' interests are increasing rapidly in the West and Northwest, and the meeting in this city will give those interested in the florists' trade an opportunity of becoming members, visiting the Convention, and to see and learn what the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists is doing for them. The number of new members taken in at this time is very gratifying. While it is to be regretted that the receipts from the trade exhibition are not as large as they were at the last convention—the receipts this year are a little less than $4,000—still, the exhibition is very comprehensive. There are over sixty firms represented and as the expenses have been kept down wherever possible there will be a substantial balance to turn into the treasury. The outdoor planting exhibition, which was under the able supervision of Vice-President Theo. Wirth, speaks for itself. It is many years since anything of the kind has been attempted by our Society and the results obtained are very satisfactory and have been the cause of much favorable comment. While this outdoor planting exhibition did not receive the support it deserved, still there are thirty-two leading firms represented. It is understood that these outdoor planting exhibitions will be continued in the cities where future Conventions are held, and should be the source of some revenue to the Society in addition to their educational features.

Membership.

From January 1, 1913, to August 9, 1913, there has been added to the membership list the names of 125 annual members and 25 life members. On August 9, 1913, the list of those in good standing was as follows:

Pioneer members		28
Life members		352
Annual members		923
Total		1303
In addition to this there is due from those owing the
1911 assessment	66
1911-12 assessment	129
1913 assessment	311
		506
Making a total membership of		1810

27 of the above are active lady members.

So it can be seen that the membership of the Society is gradually increasing. Many of those owing back dues have paid up since this report was made up, and several will pay during the Convention week. Many new names have been added and I have every confidence that at the end of the year 1913 this Society will have a list of 2,000 members in good standing. The trade at large, through the wide publicity given the Society by the trade press, and through other channels, are awakening and see the benefits of joining the Society, and it should be only a short time before this Society should have a list of members such as the organizers had hoped and looked forward to.

The following have sent me in one or more names for membership since the last Convention:

Florists Telegraph Delivery 26, P. Welch 2, S. S. Pennock 1, Chas. U. Fohn 2, W. F. Kasting 3, David Rust 1, C. F. Rice 4, J. K. M. L. Farquhar 1, H. J. Fletcher 1, Theo. Wirth 3, C. N. Ruedlinger 5, H. E. Philpott 5, E. C. Newberry 1, A. T. De La Mare 1, M. Barker 1, E. P. Holm 7, J. I. Wilson 1.

OUTDOOR PLANT EXHIBIT AT MINNEAPOLIS.

The accompanying illustration gives an excellent idea of the appearance of the grounds where the outdoor exhibits are placed at Minneapolis. The terrace directly in front of the Armory bears the inscription, "Welcome Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists," and flanking this are many groups that do not appear in the picture. Local firms have prominent beds in which their name appears in bright foliage. The lily pond seen in the centre of the picture contains the Dreer aquatic exhibit and is a beautiful feature. There are many groups of cannas, among them many new and improved varieties. Holm & Olson have taken up the entire length along the boulevard for a display of ornamental shrubbery. Geraniums from R. Vincent, Jr. & Co. make a brilliant show and there is no end of gladioli, petunias and other bright denizens of the summer garden. A more complete description of this novel exhibition feature will be forthcoming next week. The names of the various exhibitors we have already published.

Trade Exhibition Awards.

In the Trade Section of the National Flower Show, New York, April 5-12, 1913, a Certificate of Merit was awarded to Henry F. Michell Co., for Geranium "Helen Michell," Honorable Mention to the same firm for New Hybrid Freesias. Honorable Mention to Joseph G. W. F. Gude next read reports as Washington representative, on W. R. Smith memorial, on Hartford rose garden and as chairman on tariff committee.

Report of Washington Representative S. A. F. and O. H.

The past year has been a busy one for your representative in the National Capital, particularly as to tariff matters affecting the members of our organization. I have tried to keep constantly in touch with what was going on in that line, and a full report of what has been accomplished will be made by our tariff committee at this session. By this time, I had hoped we would be able to report a successful experimental rose garden in Washington under the direction of the United States Department of Agriculture. However, the official legal machinery necessary to put this project in motion has been working slowly, but we indulge the hope that the papers will receive the signature of the Secretary of Agriculture in a very short time and the garden will be a properly established factor.

Sentiment is being aroused towards securing from Congress suitable legislation in reference to the Wm. R. Smith Memorial, and we hope in the near future to secure the assistance needed towards its erection.

It is a pleasure to report that the year has been a prolific and prosperous one in and about the capital in our calling. Crops and business have been good, and the florists generally have had a prosperous twelve-month.

Report of the Committee on Smith Memorial.

Your committee, appointed at the Convention held August, 1912, in Chicago, has been at work on the preliminary arrangements, but did not feel at liberty to proceed until after interviews had been arranged with the Government officials, Mr. Andrew Carnegie, and the trustees of the library left by Mr. Smith.

Consideration of what type of memorial would be best suited to commemorate our late friend for all time to come has not been taken up as yet. In an interview this spring between your chairman and Mr. Carnegie, the latter expressed himself as very much interested in the project. He did not wish to take the initiative, however, and asked your chairman to see first what the florists of the United States would do. These being heard from he desired to know the result, as he did not want the memorial erected without having the privilege of contributing towards the expense of its construction.

In the late spring of 1913, your committee sent a letter to all secretaries of our kindred organizations (some 60 in number of record) in the United States. A number of replies received stated that the matter would be taken up individually or collectively by members from many cities. Encouraging reports have come from other sources, and while no money has been asked for as yet, $145 have been received and deposited in bank with the Munsey Trust Company of Washington, D. C.; four per cent. interest is being paid on this deposit.

The Committee proposes to start an active campaign in the early fall for funds, giving all persons interested in the memorial an opportunity to subscribe.

Report of Committee on Experimental Rose Gardens.

The committee appointed in March 1912, to secure permission from the United States Department of Agriculture to establish an experimental rose garden on the Arlington Farms, under the direction of horticultural experts of the United States Government, has been actively at work. Official application, as per following letter, has been filed by the committees of the Rose Society and the S. A. F. and O. H. In addition, the committee has had a number of interviews with the Department officials. It had been hoped that before this report was submitted the garden would have been established, but owing to the change of administration some delay has been experienced. The committee feels, however, that ere we meet in convention again we will have a good report from a rose garden actually established and in operation at Arlington Farms, Va., where roses from all sections may be tested officially.

May 29, 1913.

Hon. David F. Houston, Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: The rose growers of America, as represented by their respective societies, feel the desirability of having at some accessible point as large a collection of rose species and varieties as will thrive at any one place. The advantages of such a collection would be the opportunity for study and comparison by those most interested, including growers and hybridizers, and the educational value to the general public.

Feeling that the value of such a collection is not confined to commercial rose growers: that such a collection could be well fostered and maintained under the present organization and equipment of your department, and that the climate of Washington is favorable to the growth of a large number of varieties, we respectfully ask that a rose garden be established on the Arlington Farm under the care and supervision of the government

In order to cooperate as far as possible in establishing and maintaining such a garden, these societies will supply free of cost to the government, stock true to name, and provide funds for the labelling of the collection, the government to supply the necessary land and labor for the cultivation and care of the collection

Very respectfully,

WM. F. GUDE.

Washington Representative S. A. F. and O. H. and Chairman Special Committee.

Report of Tariff and Legislation Committee.

As Chairman of the Tariff Committee, it gives me much pleasure to report to this body what has been accomplished by our committee.

The tariff is always such a debatable question that no two florists, no two Representatives, and no two Senators, ever agree as to what the duty on a certain item should be. So when we tried first to feel the pulse of the trade, we soon found that it would be inadvisable to work toward making duty changes, but as the former tariff acts have contained so many absurdities and incorrect classifications we decided to concentrate our energies toward having the rates clearly defined so that one florist would not be required to pay twenty-five per cent. duty while another florist in a different state got the same stock at fifteen per cent. or free of duty. While it is necessary that the import duties upon florist and nursery stock be large enough to furnish the proper amount of protection to American growers, it is of still greater importance that the rate of duty be clearly defined—and the same at all ports of entry.

Early in April, the Committee sent out the following letter, which was published in all the trade papers. Strange to say, there was hardly anyone heard from throughout the length and breadth of the United States, which led your committee to believe that—on the whole—the florists must be fairly well satisfied with conditions as they were.

April 18, 1913.

To all florists and horticulturists who have any suggestions to make as to what legislation if any they would like in the present tariff bill, now before Congress. They should send in suggestions at once if they have not already done so, to the Chairman of the Tariff Committee of the S. A. F. and O. H. Mr. Wm. F. Gude, 1214 F St., Washington, D. C., who is anxious and willing to do what he can to further the interests of the florists and horticulturists and members of the hundred organizations, but the committee are at a loss what action to take until they can hear from the parties who would like the tariff raised or lowered on certain goods, as the case may be.

The tariff bill as reported out of the Ways and Means Committee was full of absurdities, ambiguities and incorrect classifications; had it become a law as it then read, it would have involved the same amount of fraud, vexatious uncertainty, and legal expense as in former tariffs. The same stock was dutiable at 25 per cent. and 15 per cent.; other stock was dutiable at $1 per thousand, also free. Hyacinth bulbs were rated as "clumps." Greenhouse stock was dutiable at 25 per cent. in Section 215, and at 15 per cent. in Section 216, while evergreen seedlings were rated free of duty, but no definition was made as to what evergreen seedlings really were.

To correct these absurdities and errors, we introduced in Congress eight amendments to the tariff bill, and while our friends were telling us we could not get them through, we had them passed by the Congressional Committee in charge of Schedule G. When the corrected bill was printed, we found that four of our amendments had been mutilated in Congress, but we later had those four amendments corrected in the Senate Committee, and the bill, containing our eight amendments, is likely to become a law in the very near future.

The various amendments were here read. They have already been published in full in HORTICULTURE.

These amendments correct and simplify the tariff immensely as applied to horticultural imports. It will make it much easier for the Customs officials to detect and correct fraudulent entries; it should avoid expense to honest importers now that the rates of duty are clearly defined, and it will prevent largely the confusion and abuses which have arisen under former tariffs, owing to incorrect and varying Treasury decisions handed down at different ports of entry on one item. These amendments do not change the rates of duty on proposed tariffs in any way. To have recommended them would have meant the defeat of our important demands—namely, a tariff free from errors and ambiguities. The benefits of these changes are obvious to every florist, nurseryman and seedsman in the United States who either directly or indirectly handles imported stock.

Now I am going to make one recommendation, but before I do so let me explain that the tariff is made up by our legislators to comply with what they consider the country needs. The first report of changes comes from the Ways and Means Committee, so that unless corrections are made in that committee they must be in the form of amendments, and to be effective must be carried by a majority in the House and Senate. Our legislators consider that plants, nursery stock, bulbs and seeds are in the same general class. They are mixed together in the same schedules so that any recommendations of changes or corrections must be presented or endorsed jointly by florists, nurserymen and seedsmen. Owing to the lack of cooperation between the three organizations, I feel sure that had it not been for the active support we got from New York importers and Custom House officials, we never would have gotten one amendment through the House or Senate.

I, therefore, recommend that, as far as practicable, your Tariff Committee includes one man in the import business, one man resident in Washington, and that all members be in active working touch with nurserymen, seedsmen and others interested, so that only men will be in this committee that can intelligently work and publicly speak on the entire schedule—which includes all horticultural imports.

Thanks are due James McHutchison of New York City, a member of this committee, and without whose material assistance little, if anything, could have been done. Representative Taylor, and Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, B. T. Galloway, are entitled to our thanks also.

Boston the Next Meeting Place.

President Farquhar then presented a letter from Governor Foss of Massachusetts promising a hearty welcome and special entertainment if the society would come to Boston in 1914. J. B. Shea followed with a similarly cordial letter from Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston adding his own endorsement of the invitation. Letters were also presented from the Boston Chamber of Commerce and further invitations were voiced by Secretary Rich in behalf of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Eber Holmes for the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, P. Welch and others, after which Boston was unanimously selected as the place for the next convention.

THE PRESIDENT'S RECEPTION.

The president's reception on Tuesday was a delightfully pleasant affair, with music and dancing and social companionship. Never has the society enjoyed a more pleasurable event. East and West, North and South, were brought together in happy fraternal fellowship, and business and politics were all forgotten in the inspiration of a most happy reunion.

WEDNESDAY FORENOON SESSION.

Wednesday forenoon session started off with commendable promptness. Secretary Young read the report of the committee on the relief of flood sufferers, expressing grateful acknowledgment of generous response.

A telegram was received from the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, renewing their former invitation to meet at San Francisco two years hence.

Nomination of Officers.

Nomination of officers resulted in the unanimous naming of Theodore Wirth for president; Patrick Welch, vice-president; John Young, secretary; W. F. Kasting, treasurer, amid much enthusiasm and there being no contest over any office unanimous election on Thursday was assured.

The report of the publicity committee was then presented by Wallace R. Pierson.

Irwin Berterman asked on behalf of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association some special recognition by the S. A. F., stating that it had this year brought some forty new members into the national society. The request was favorably received.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON SESSION.

Wednesday afternoon session was devoted largely to National Flower Show discussion.

International Flower Show.

Charles H. Totty, who made a full report on the show at New York last spring, was given a most eulogistic introduction by President Farquhar and frequent demonstrations of approval and enthusiasm were made by the members.

THE TRIP FROM BOSTON.

The party starting from Boston for Minneapolis, on Friday night, was not large, but a very classy one, comprising, as it did, the president of the S. A. F., the secretary of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, the president of the American Association of Park Superintendents and deputy park commissioner of Boston, and several other dignitaries of past or present note, and a number of ladies. There were just enough to comfortably fill one Pullman car and the passenger agent of the Grand Trunk R. R. accompanied them as far as London. On going to his office Friday night before starting for the R. R. station, President Farquhar was greeted by a young sparrow on his doorstep. The fledgling was at once adopted as a mascot and taken along on the train as far as Nashua, where it was liberated to make its home among the romantic wilds of New Hampshire. A number of wistful friends came to the station to see the party off and the start was made under very auspicious conditions. Arriving at Montreal, Saturday morning, they were met by a delegation of the Montreal florists and the party was augmented by several additions. After breakfast at the Windsor Hotel, given by the Horticultural Club of Boston, the visitors became the guests of the Montreal Florists' Club. A flower bedecked trolley car was in commission for the whole day and all sections of the city were visited, including a trip to the top of Mt. Royal where luncheon was served and where the wonderful display of bedding plants by Park Ranger John Henderson was greatly enjoyed, and brief congratulatory speeches were made by President Farquhar, P. Welch, Secretary Rich of the Mass. Horticultural Society, and James McKenna of Montreal. Cote de Neiges and Lachine were visited in the afternoon and at the latter place the party boarded the big steamer for the world renowned trip through the Lachine Rapids. Niagara Falls were reached Sunday noon, where a four-hours' stay was had, and on Monday morning Chicago hove in sight.

Monday was spent in visiting parks and other places of interest in Chicago.

Special train made up of sleepers from Boston, New York and Chicago completed the trip comfortably without one untoward incident.

This is by far the best pink variety for early forcing that we have yet tried. Trusses of immense size, color a most pleasing shade of pink which does not fade, growth vigorous, foliage of a pea green color, large and attractive. It is one of the easiest to force, coming into flower as early as Mme. Emile Moulliere. 2¼ inch pots, $2.50 per doz.; $20.00 per 100.

LADIES' SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

The Ladies' S. A. F. held their annual meeting on Wednesday. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. C. E. Critchell, Cincinnati; first vice-president, Mrs. M. A. Patten; second vice-president, Mrs. W. F. Gude; secretary, Mrs. C. H. Maynard; treasurer, Mrs. A. M. Herr. Secretary's report showed an addition of thirty-seven new members, making a total of two hundred and seventy-three. On Thursday evening the members made an elegant present to Mrs. Traendly.

FLORISTS' TELEGRAPH DELIVERY ASSOCIATION.

The Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association also held their meeting Wednesday afternoon. The usual addresses and reports were made by President Bertermann, Secretary Pochelon and Treasurer Rock. Addresses on the work of the association were made by Phil Breitmeyer and George Asmus. Thirty-five retailers were present.

FLORISTS' HAIL ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA.

The report of Secretary John G. Esler showed the following facts:

Insurance carried upon 38,500,538 square feet of glass.

The total receipts for the year ending August 1, 1913, and including last year's balance, as per treasurer's report have been $58,255.33.

The total expenditures, as per treasurer's report have been $39,353.34.

The cash balance on hand is $18,901.99, of which $483.03 belongs to the Reserve Fund.

The Reserve Fund now amounts to $30,483.03, of which $30,000 is invested in high grade securities, and $483.03 cash in hands of the treasurer.

The amount of interest collected on bank deposits for the year is $243.40.

The amount of interest collected on Reserve Fund investments for the year is $1,275.00.

Interest refunded on bond purchase is $6.11.

Losses representing a breakage of 118,745 square feet of single thick glass and 85,136 square feet of double thick glass have been paid during the past year.

Nineteen hundred and sixty losses have been adjusted since the organization of the F. H. A., involving a total expenditure of more than $278,000.

All indebtedness of the F. H. A. has been paid, and the Reserve Fund is now intact; with a handsome balance in the treasury. A careful consideration of the treasurer's report is solicited.

The amendments to Sections 1 and 7, of Article 5, of the By-Laws, have been overwhelmingly approved by a membership referendum and their practical working will undoubtedly be, to equalize the amount to be paid by unequal risks; and also to define and fix an automatic charge upon hazardous risks.

Following is a summary of the report of Joseph Heacock, treasurer:

Dr.

To balance on hand Aug. 1, 1912	$4,577.81
To total receipts for year ending Aug. 1, 1913	53,677.52

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

American Rose Society met Wednesday morning. President Pierson made a felicitous address and Secretary Hammond made report. Many items of routine nature were disposed of. A committee with power to act was appointed in the matter of a test garden consisting of Alex. Cumming, Jr., Theodore Wirth, W. F. Gude and Prof. Beal.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

The American Carnation Society held an Executive Committee meeting on Thursday morning with a good number of the members also present. The questions of the next meeting place and of participation in the New York Flower Show were discussed at great length.

AMERICAN GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

The American Gladiolus Society met on Thursday forenoon. President Hendrickson's address was a very practical paper. He advocated affiliation with the Society of American Florists. Secretary Gage read records and financial reports showing good condition. Treasurer Crawford's report indicated balance in the bank of over $500. The judges reported on the very comprehensive display of gladioli and the high standard of quality and variety in the amateur department of the exhibition. The list of awards as read will be published next week. Officers were nominated but the election was deferred until a later session. Discussion of the renaming of old varieties developed vigorous condemnation of this mischievous practice.

Secretary's Report.

There is almost always a critical period in every society's life that affects its future existence. I will not say that we have arrived at that period, but the germ is working, so we must be alert to destroy it before it gets established beyond control. The first indication of this germ's presence is the waning interest of the majority of our members in contributing material for our bulletin. If we do not get this material our bulletin will not continue to be a factor in holding our membership, especially our amateur members. I want to say this much—that the amateurs must do their share in keeping up the interest and standard of the bulletin by contributing to its pages.

It is about time that something more than mere pen slinging was done concerning the renaming of varieties and the naming of other growers' seedlings without consent of the originator. At a recent exhibition of gladioli in Boston, I had the displeasure of seeing two of Groff's varieties exhibited as seedlings and one of these has already been named by Mr. Groff. If this sort of piracy is allowed to continue, what protection can the American Gladiolus Society hold out to the honest producer of new varieties?

Concerning the matter of newspaper publicity, I wish to especially commend the articles published through the courtesy of Messrs. F. S. Morton of the Portland Evening Express and J. M. Adams of the Hartford Times.

Our membership has increased to the number of 23, but it could easily have been raised to double that number with very little effort on the part of our members.

At the International Flower Show in New York last spring, our society offered a very attractive prize schedule, but it seems that the time is not yet ripe to bring out a good exhibition of forced gladioli, for the only exhibitors at New York were John Lewis Childs and Chamberlain & Gage.

At the meeting of the society which was held in New York it was voted to adopt the "Repertoire des Couleurs," published by the French Chrysanthemum Society, upon the recommendation of the Color Chart Committee.

By direction of the Executive Committee the society medals were sent to the Central New York Horticultural Society and the El Paso County Horticultural Society, Colorado Springs, Colo.

It is my sad duty to have to report the deaths of two of our members who have passed away since our last meeting—Mrs. Montague Chamberlain, who died in Boston, Tuesday evening, January 7th, and Frank Banning, whose death occurred at his home in Kinsman, Ohio, March 17th.

Respectfully submitted:

L. Merton Gage, Secretary.

A PEACH!

We had the pleasure, this week, of sampling for the first time some fruit of the Ray peach, grown by J. G. Harrison & Sons of Berlin, Md. In size, color, flavor and keeping qualities it certainly bears out Mr. Harrison's description as a fruit. He states that in point of vigor and bearing this peach is in a class by itself over a very large range of territory and conditions. In point of sales of young trees it already stands next to Elberta.

SEED TRADE

Officers—President, Chas. C. Massie, Minneapolis, Minn.; 1st vice-president, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, N. Y.; 2nd vice-president, W. F. Therkildson, Painesville, O.; secretary, C. E. Kendel; assistant secretary, S. F. Willard, Jr., both of Cleveland, O.

For the past few weeks we have not furnished any seed notes of particular interest, for the reason that crop news is about all that appeals to the trade at this time of year, and most of the "news" of this character from week to week is little else than a repetition of the previous week's budget. Now, however, matters have progressed to a point where some idea of probable results is possible, yet we feel constrained to warn readers against accepting possible results as accomplished facts, as much damage may overtake all crops before they are safely in store.

Cabbage and Turnip Crop.

Cabbage and turnip seed, are mainly harvested, and with varying yields, though the net result seems to indicate some shortage on the acreage put out, but as there was a considerable increase in acreage, the total crop will no doubt be larger than a year ago. The Long Island cabbage seed crop has been fully up to average though it is claimed that the output was smaller. We haven't anything authentic from Puget Sound, but on such information as we have we believe the crop is considerably below early estimates.

Pea Situation.

In the matter of peas, the situation is not quite clear, but beyond question there will be no bumper crop. There may be some surplus of late varieties, particularly of the telephone or large podded type, but of the earlies, especially the "canners" sorts, there will be no more than required, of good pedigree stock. That there will be the usual offerings of more or less degenerate seed is certain and that there will be the usual buyers who never see any point but the price, is just as certain. But little seed was raised by the canners of New York State, but as usual, Wisconsin has produced a considerable quantity of Alaska seed of more or less doubtful quality, most of it totally unfit for canning purposes, and should only be used as field peas. Yet even this junk certain canners will buy and plant it too, if the price is sufficiently low. Of course they pack only junk, and get the price of junk. They have no pride of reputation and are positive barnacles on the canning industry. However, this is straying from our subject, and, with apologies, we will return.

Beans.

Beans are at a stage where they are as liable to go one way as another, but present condition is not satisfactory. Unless there is a marked improvement the yield is liable to be below average. And by the way there was a far smaller carry over than seemed probable even so late as April last. Whether the truck farmers will raise any considerable quantity is a problem for the future.

Corn.

This is surely a problem, that is, as to the extent of the harm the crop has suffered. If the action of the Chicago Board of Trade is a true index of conditions, the damage is more serious than authorities are willing to concede, while admitting that it will shorten the crop by hundreds of millions of bushels.

This refers to the great corn producing states in particular, but excepting possibly Michigan, Minnesota, Northern Ohio and Northern Indiana, the corn crop of the entire country is affected to a greater or less extent. The states in which sweet corn is grown for seeds or from which the bulk of the seed comes, are, Nebraska, Ohio, Michigan, New York and Connecticut, and the first named is by far the worst sufferer. Most of the sweet corn grown for seed in Ohio, is produced in the northern part of the state, thus at this writing it looks as though it had suffered less than field, or yellow corn. Iowa seems to have been the hardest hit of any of the great corn states, the shrinkage in yield being estimated at 50 per cent.*

Tomatoes.

While tomatoes are not so important an item on the seedsmen's list as the other things mentioned, it may be well to note a general shortage, excepting in Michigan, where the crop is said to show promise of an average yield.

Peas.

The total pea pack of the country, now about completed, shows some increase over last year. The addition to last year's acreage is variously estimated at from 10 to 20 per cent. No figures showing the total number of cases have been published. Maryland and Delaware produced about 30 per cent. of an average, Indiana and Ohio 60 per cent., Michigan 70 per cent., New York full average, and Wisconsin 80 per cent., though the latter fell off 40 per cent. from last year. It must be remembered, however, that last year's crop in Wisconsin was phenomenal, varying from 125 to upwards of 200 cases to the acre, against a five-year average of 80 to 120.

California Seed Crop.

So far as California seed crops are concerned, we have no reason to materially change our estimates from those we last gave, but we shall soon be in position to give more detailed information, and we may say same of the European situation.

Notes.

There is little activity in the trade just now. Vacations and stock taking are the chief business. The summer will soon be past, the harvest ended, but what of the rest?

*Cucumbers, squashes and melons in Nebraska and Oklahoma are suffering severely, and it looks like a hardening of prices on nearly all varieties of vine seeds. In Michigan cucumbers are promising fair yields, but there will be a considerable shortage in New York and a much reduced acreage.

Ypsilanti, Mich.

The Michigan Central Railroad still follow an excellent idea, adopted several years ago, of distributing small bouquets of flowers to its patrons while the train is at the station. On this occasion asters were the favors, large baskets being emptied in quick order to appreciative recipients who usually preserve the card attached as a souvenir.

S. S. Skidelsky was expected to drop off en route to Minneapolis to see Philadelphia, which is giving a good account of itself as a summer carnation. Advance sales are reported heavy.

Lohrmann Seed Co. have passed through a banner season and regret a shortage on several popular lines for next season's trade.

Buffalo, N. Y.

H. Keitsch & Son Co. are rebuilding but expect ere long, owing to the advance in real estate values to join the majority in locating farther from the centre of the city.

W. F. Kasting was giving the last word ere leaving for Minneapolis, where he will hold up the reputation of the Bison City as a flower centre.

Annual Outing of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society.

The third annual outing and games of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society was held at Rye Beach, Rye, N. J., on August 12th. The games which started at 10 A. M., provided excellent sport and enjoyment. At 2 P. M., a halt was called to repair to the beach hotel where T. Edwards had provided an excellent shore dinner. About 135 sat down to dinner and after doing justice to the good things provided, President Robert Williamson spoke of the pleasures he derived of presiding over such a notable gathering, the excellent work being done and also the honor accorded the society by the presence of so many representatives of the trade. Short speeches were also made by J. Maud, Wm. McTaggart, S. Burnett, F. E. Conine and others.

Continuing with the games keen rivalry existed between the two counties in the baseball and football matches, Westchester being the winners in each event. The distribution of prizes put the closure on what was pronounced by all to be the best outing ever held by the society. Appended is the list of prize winners:

Assistant Secretary.

CHICAGO NOTES.

Miss Parker of the Chicago Carnation Co., and Miss O. A. Tonner have returned from a very pleasant trip of two weeks to Mackinaw Island and vicinity.

Word from Chas. W. McKellar and party, motoring to the convention, states that they are having a fine trip. They expected to reach Minneapolis Monday.

A. Miller and G. M. Reburn will represent A. Henderson & Co. at the convention. They will have a display of bulbs and other seasonable stock and will be glad to meet old friends or make new ones.

The local and visiting florists on their way to Minneapolis to the S. A. F. & O. H. Convention required about twenty cars, ten cars going over the Great Western, seven cars as a special train of the Pioneer Limited of the C. M. & St. Paul, and the balance going over the Chicago & Northwestern.

There were several hundred florists in Chicago on Monday on their way to Minneapolis. Many of them had a few hours in the city waiting for their trains to go out in the evening, and spent the time pleasantly in renewing old acquaintances or in visiting the nearby greenhouses, but most of them did not get away from the down town district.

Visitors; are too numerous to mention by name and we do not wish to slight any of them. But they are always welcome and the latch string is always out and the glad hand ready.

Paul Kase.

Paul Kase, 38 years old, president of the firm of Wm. Hagemann & Co., New York, bulb importers, committed suicide on board the steamship Massachusetts, Monday evening, August 18. He had boarded the vessel at Boston and his body was found in his stateroom two hours after the vessel had docked in New York. Business troubles are believed to have caused his death. Mr. Kase made his home in Bloomfield, N. J.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES.

Charles Sim writing from Aberdeen, Scotland August 10th, reports "all well and having a good time."

We understand from Mr. J. G. Schattmaier that he has severed his connection with Mr. Blackistone and has a new move under consideration which will be announced in due course.

Visitors: Otto Heinecken, New York City; Mr. Schattmaier of Blackistone's, Washington, D. C.; Sidney Hoffman, Boston, Mass.; H. L. Holmes, Harrisburg, Pa.; Mr. Holz, Queen City Floral Co., Seattle, Washington.

John Clark has been appointed acting superintendent of the National Botanical Gardens, Washington, D. C., and it is believed he will be named as successor to the late C. Leslie Reynolds. Mr. Clark was born in Scotland eighty-two years ago. In 1854 the late William R. Smith deavored to have him cross the oce to become his assistant at the Ga dens. At that time he refused and i was not until nearly forty-five years later that he emigrated to this country and accepted a position as propagator. Upon the death of Mr. Smith and the promotion of Mr. Reynolds to the superintendency, he was made assistant superintendent, the position he had refused fifty-nine years before.

PM QUALITY

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Market conditions might be worse, steamer sailings this week having boomed the market considerably and they are fast becoming an item of considerable importance to the trade in this city. Asters are not as plentiful, the quality is poor, but gladioli are abundant and fine with but little demand. Roses are soft and small, numerous and cheap, while white roses are scarce but much in demand. Carnations have good flowers but short stems and lily of the valley is plentiful.

BUFFALO Trade continued good considering the severe hot weather. Roses are much affected, though Maryland and Double White Killarney come in good and with a slight flurry of weddings, they have cleaned up well.

Branching asters are coming on though not near enough to supply the demand. Gladioli were over plentiful and the colored varieties were not taken well. America and May are best sellers. Lilies are still over plentiful and have only normal demand.

CHICAGO The wholesale trade in Chicago is very quiet just now, as is always the case during Convention week. There is a heavy supply of gladiolus, asters and other outdoor flowers and the carnations and roses from early inside plantings are coming in increased quantity and improved quality, though prices remain about the same.

CINCINNATI Business, this week if anything, was worse than last. The buyers were not at all active in securing stock on their daily visit to the wholesale houses. This fact coupled with an increasing supply tended to make matters worse. The continued strong call for stock from out of town was the only bright feature. The rose cut shows a superabundance of short stock. That does not sell any too well. Longer stock enjoys some call but not enough to clean up. Besides, the usual line of summer roses. The receipts of Killarney are very fine. Gladioli are still in a large supply and of the better grade of stock. Asters are larger both in respect to the size of the shipment and the flower. The first of the large, late asters are beginning to arrive in quantity. Lilies are more plentiful but the call for them is not large enough to take them all up daily. Hardy Hydrangeas meet with a fair request. Pond lilies find a fair market.

PHILADELPHIA Lots and lots of poor asters and only the good ones are selling. Some extra fine greenhouse grown are coming in. The gladioli crop is slackening. Beauties are selling better than a week ago. The quality is improving also. Some very nice new crop stock from local growers; lily of the valley one of the briskest items. Easter lilies are plentiful and go only moderately well. Cattleyas still very scarce and high in price. Carnations—some new crop arriving, very nice; not long stemmed as yet. Roses are not so plentiful. Some very good Sunburst, the most popular in its color at present. A few Dendrobium Formosum—a limited amount of gardenias with small demand. Tuberoses and hydrangea heads are in good supply. A little early cosmos arriving.

ST. LOUIS The wholesale market is in a sad condition. There is plenty of stock in almost every thing that is needed, but the demand is so poor that a great deal is being dumped. The glut is on roses, gladiolus and tuberose stalks. Prices are even lower than the week previous and they were low enough.

Carnation are scarce, asters are coming in in plenty and some fairly good flowers are now to be had.

The Boston Co-operative Flower Market will hold its tenth annual sale of stalls on Saturday, August 30, at 2 Park street, Boston, at 9.30 A. M. W. W. Tailby will again hold forth as auctioneer. The rent of stalls has been reduced to $20.00.

SOUTHAMPTON HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At the last regular session of this society there was principally routine business and some discussion over the exhibition just passed.

At the exhibition there was a fine display of large palms from the greenhouse of Mr. William Manice; also several collections of handsome gloxinias and tuberous begonias. Mrs. R. M. Thompson exhibited several plants of Buddleya variabilis, for which she received the Michell prize of $10.00.

At the close of the exhibition, Mr. Patrick A. Valentine, a wealthy summer resident here from Chicago, purchased the vegetables and donated them to the Fresh Air Home and Southampton Hospital.

COOK COUNTY FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

The Cook County Florists' Association held their regular meeting at the Tavern, Thursday evening, August 14th. In the absence of President Kohlbrandt, vice-president Allie Zech presided. Two new members were elected, W. S. McGee and Florian D. Wallace. Picnic committee reported preparations for the picnic, Sept. 7th, were being completed and a good time is promised. The new Cook County buttons were distributed. A large number of members expect to go to the convention.

"Large Range of Glass Now Being Erected at Marion, Mass."

LUTTON GREENHOUSES have an established reputation and WHY NOT? THIS CONSTRUCTION has revolutionized greenhouse architecture; my competitors will convince you of this when they reluctantly submit you CURVED EAVE propositions; they know our method is patented, but recent events have proven that Trusts and Illegal combinations cannot always disregard our laws, might have something to do with the argument placed before you, "That the old method of straight eaves is just as good," and that there is always trouble with the curved glass, etc., etc. Of course there is a great deal of annoyance with SOME CURVED EAVE HOUSES but NOT with LUTTON'S, and WHY? Simply because we are not experimenting at your expense. Every Gardener should be familiar with these facts, you owe it to yourself as well as to your employer.

We are just completing the largest modern range of Glass in the State of MASSACHUSETTS; it will pay you to visit MARION, MASS., and convince yourself that LUTTON methods are original and worthy of your consideration.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.

True of U-BAR Greenhouses Only

IN rummaging around in Grandmother's garret did you ever come across an old, old umbrella having heavy reed bows—or frame, instead of the light steel ones now used?

That reed-framed umbrella might well be taken as a comparison for greenhouses built in the usual way. The light, strong, all-steel framed umbrella corresponds to the U-Bar construction with its entire frame-work of galvanized steel U-Bars.

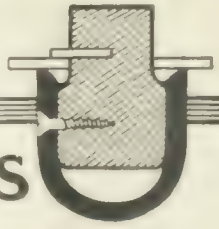
No other greenhouse is so constructed. A frame of steel roof-bars is true only of the U-Bar construction.

This frame gives the advantages of:—

Greater lightness—which means better plants easier grown. More blooms. Repairs, practically nil.

Greenhouses so constructed have a graceful, clean-cut beauty of line unattainable with other constructions.

U-Bar houses have curved eaves. But don't think that every curved eave house is a U-Bar house. It may look like the U-Bar curved eave, but that's the only way it is like it. The only U-Bar greenhouse builder is the Pierson U-Bar Company.



One owner in his enthusiasm, called his U-Bar house "A bubble of glass"—another "the house with the cob-webby frame."

Naturally U-Bar greenhouses cost a bit more than others, and are worth more.

Investigate. Send for catalog. Or send for us. Or both.

BODDINGTON'S "QUALITY" CHRISTMAS-FLOWERING

SWEET PEAS

WE ARE SUPER-HEADQUARTERS

All true stocks of Winter-flowering Sweet Peas will be scarce this season. Some varieties are a total failure owing to the exceptional season in California this Spring. Our advice to intending planters is to order at once.

Mr. Wm. Sim, Cliftondale, Mass., the great Winter Sweet Pea Specialist, sows our seed almost exclusively.

Our stocks of Christmas-flowering Sweet Peas have stood the test for years, and we can refer you to the largest growers of this increasing popular flower, as to the trueness and quality of our seed, earliness of blooming period and strength and habit of plants.

The following varieties are the "best by test" including Zvolanek's and our own introductions, grown for seed, from selected stocks by the leading California grower and specialist in Sweet Peas.

Our output last year was nearly 3000 lbs. No kicks and plenty of testimonials as to quality, germination and trueness to type.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Bouvardias

All bouvardias should be lifted before the nights become too cold. These plants do well in five inches of soil. A good compost is three parts fibrous loam to one part of well decayed cow manure. Lift the plants with good balls of soil and carefully transplant to a sunny bench. If this work is attended to properly the plants will show no bad effects. A foot apart is little enough for any of them. It is easy with almost any temperature to get the first crop of bouvardias, but not so easy to get them to make a growth and a profitable crop of flowers. Unless they are kept in a night temperature of at least 60 degrees and syringed daily they will just stand still after their first crop is over. As soon as they are planted give thorough watering, followed on sunny days by light spraying, until the plants have taken hold in the new soil. Don't overlook the staking. If they have made any growth at all outdoors they need support of some kind, whether by stakes or wires across the benches.

Care of Carnations

Recently planted carnations will now need the closest attention. As the plants gain in size and vigor of growth, so also must the allowance of moisture about their roots be increased. Describe a wide circle from day to day until, before long, all the soil may receive water in equal and regular quantities. Arrange to have at least two good weedings and cleanings of the soil. Some soils become baked and crusted over much more quickly than others and need more cultivation. The adjustment of supports for those farthest advanced is now in order. Any one of the numerous devices will serve the purpose. Supports that leave unrestricted room for the natural spread and upright growth of every individual plant, within the confines of a stout wire circle, are to be preferred to anything holding the shoots in position by direct and usually too firm fastening, or those requiring frequent readjustment.

Housing Tender Plants

While it may be some time yet before we have any frost it never pays to keep tender plants outside after the first week in September, for their growth and well-doing is hampered by the cold nights which we are bound to have at this time. All plants such as palms, ferns, etc., should be housed early in September, as when exposed to the chilly air of our cool nights they soon become inactive at the roots and their foliage lose its dark green color. All stock planted out in the field or border such as abutilons, acalyphas, crotons, dracaenas, ficus and many other foliage plants, should be lifted and potted. Give them a rather close and warm house and keep shaded for about a week when they will have become well established and can then be given full sun. Keep the air and plants moist by frequent syringings during the day.

Odontoglossums

Odontoglossums that have been grown in a north house and kept as cool as possible should now be showing up well. To handle these orchids is no easy task at this season of the year as they require continued watchfulness in ventilation, watering and cleanliness. We are now at a season when they will stand any amount of ventilation during the day and also as much at night as will be safe to leave on. If they are not given plenty of ventilation now they will suffer severely. Watering is a point in their culture which requires very careful attention. Care should also be taken never to let the compost remain dry for any length of time, yet on the other hand they should never be kept in a soaked condition. Either extreme will destroy all hopes of pulling these orchids through the fall in good shape. To keep them absolutely clear of scale it will be necessary to sponge them with a nicotine solution, aphine or fir tree oil about every two weeks.

Propagating Geraniums

It is well to start in a little early with propagating geraniums so that another good crop of cuttings may be had before frost puts a stop to outdoor growth. One of the advantages in using the propagating bench is that the cuttings will take up less room, the accommodation being usually required at a time of the year when most of us are short of room. Another way to root cuttings is to use flats, either filled with sand or a mixture of loam and sand. The flats can either be placed on benches or shelves or in frames out of doors. Sturdy, short-jointed top cuttings from three to four inches in length make without question the best stock for next spring's marketing. It matters little which way they are struck, now or a month later, they will be good geraniums if potted, repotted and stopped in time and given room, light and air in a house averaging 55 degrees of heat. After the first watering, which ought to be a good one, keep the sand on the dry side. The only shading required might be when the weather is extremely hot. During the first week the cuttings are in the sand, they should only be given shade during the noon hours, but after the first week no shade is required; in fact they are better off without it.

Stevias

Do not leave your stevias too long before you lift them as they are very easily injured by even a slight frost. Pot them into good soil and place them where they have some shade for a few days when they will stand full sun. You can keep them outside for some time yet as they cannot tolerate anything like a warm greenhouse. When brought in under glass they should be kept just as cool as possible. These are very indispensable plants so see that they have good care.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Amaryllis for Christmas, [illegible] Lilies, [illegible] Chrysanthemums; Rambler Roses; Potting Evergreens.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

George H. Penson

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Penson. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Summer Pruning Peach Trees

Those houses that have had the crop cleared for several weeks and have been left to themselves doubtless will have made some top growth. Any trees that have not made growth must have been cropped very heavy or else the roots are very stagnant. Similar to vines, it does them good to grow for a while but the time is ripe to think of the buds for next year. Not only the superfluous growth can be removed but the whole tree gone over and all old worn-out or overcrowded wood removed. This has got to be done anyhow when the winter pruning comes on and by doing it now the wood remaining has the benefit of more air and sun to ripen it up. Another advantage to the pruner is that he can see what the tree looks like with its foliage, which, if all the pruning is left until winter, he can only surmise. Where it is necessary to remove a piece of wood large enough to make a noticeable hole, loosen one or two of those above and draw them down to fill the gap. It is not intended that this pruning should do away with the winter pruning, it is only to remove worthless wood hampering the development of next year's crop.

Prepare to Pot-up Trees

The time is not far distant when all the trees growing in pots must receive their annual overhauling. This is quite a job where any quantity are grown and needs preparation, to save unnecessary delay after once commencing. A supply of pots is needed—enough of all requisite sizes to allow so many to be in the hands of the washer and taking time to dry. Look over the stock on hand and if deficient order at once as it may take a little time to get them through. It is also better to use pots that have stood out in the weather for a while rather than new ones direct from the factory for, even if sprayed over a time or two before using, they will still absorb a lot of moisture. Always figure on giving the trees the smallest shift possible; nothing is gained by pushing them on into large pots or tubs. After several years' forcing it may be advisable to use small tubs. Look these trees up and order the tubs in suitable sizes at once. Take special care of all broken pots found around. These will be in big demand, nothing making such satisfactory drainage for this work as crocks.

Feeding Strawberries

When the strawberry plants have filled out the pots with roots commence to feed them as they have a lot to do in a short time. It can be given them in either liquid form or sprinkled on the surface and pricked in. Start them off with some weak soot water; this can be followed up with weak cow manure water, gradually working it up stronger. The same applies to dry manures. Take care to keep this latter off the foliage. Never apply manure when the plants are dry and remember clear water should be given the plants an equal number of times as the manure water.

Making up Mushroom Beds

Immediately the manure is ready, have the beds made up. Any delay means a loss to the manure. The same morning that it is purposed to make up the beds mix in a little virgin loam which has passed through a ¾-inch seive, say about one part of soil to every six of manure. This will help to steady the heat and make it more lasting. Ram the manure as firm as possible into the benches, building it up in tiers six inches in thickness. It cannot be made too hard so pound it down with brick or rammer. When finished the beds should be from 15 to 18 inches thick. Even it off nicely, leaving it about three inches below the proper height so that the casing of soil can go on after spawning. Place a thermometer in the bed, as it will commence to heat up at once. Notice this at least twice daily. It will continue to rise for about ten days, probably registering 100 to 110 degrees before any recession takes place. Wait until it recedes to 85 degrees to 80 degrees before spawning.

Melons for Christmas

To have ripe melons for Christmas a sowing should be made September 1st. With good melon-growing weather (plenty of sunshine) through the fall this will have them ripe a week or ten days previous to Christmas Day but should it be any way averse they will make it all right. At this time of year it is a very easy matter to hold them up for a week or more just as they are turning, so be on the safe side. Through the summer months the varieties need not be studied to any great degree for if a melon is to grow at all it surely must do so through the good summer weather. Not so with the sowings from now on. Many little troubles can be averted if the right ones are put in now. That old and tried friend, Hero of Lockinge, has not got an equal in the field for winter work. Others there are that are good but if only a few are to be grown bank on "Hero." It grows well through any dull weather and sets its fruit well (two should be the limit on these). The flavor, too, is good for winter fruit. Another one we always include is His Eminence, a white flesh of good habit which comes in several days after Hero. Superlative can also be included; it makes one of the best table fruits.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Side Ventilators in September

With the air full of cold draughts, it is well to keep the side ventilators closed from now on, unless of course they are in the hands of the expert who knows how to handle them. These cases are very rare, however, and we find it best to keep the ventilators closed and run no chances. Doors that had been left open during the hot summer months will now be safer if kept closed. Many will say that this is all "bosh" but experience has taught us that we may escape harm the nine times, and then get it good and proper the tenth time. A drop of prevention is better than a whole gallon of cure.

Syringing

With the coming of the fall season, all syringing should be done during the morning hours of the day, if at all possible. Should it be necessary to syringe in the afternoon, take great care to shake the plants well to have the plants well dried off by night. Lime should never remain unapplied after either syringing or watering, as this is essential in helping to maintain a pure dry atmosphere around the bottom of the plants where spot has a habit of establishing itself and gaining a good foothold before it is finally discovered.

Mulching

Mulching or top dressing will now be in order and, as the whole season's success depends partly on the way this is done, it pays to be extremely careful to have this done properly. A light dressing of bone meal may be applied to the benches before any of the manure is applied. This should be rubbed into the soil very lightly, so as not to disturb the roots in the very least, for while the plants are making roots the plant itself is not growing. Therefore when you tear up the roots with deep scratching, the plants receive a bad check, from which it will take some time to recover. This may not be observed by every one, yet it is the truth. Do not apply too much bonemeal, or too much manure. Better apply a little at a time, and oftener. We find it best to apply just enough to cover the benches very nicely, and then give more as soon as the plants consume the largest part of it, as they soon will if they receive proper treatment and are kept growing all the time.

Lime

Never apply any lime to newly mulched benches. The lime thus applied would free a large amount of the ammonia contained in the manure, and would no doubt prove harmful to the plants. To say the least it would not be of any benefit, and as good cow manure is rather expensive, it is not to the good of the grower to waste much of it. Most growers will shrink from buying a new piece of hose that is really needed and would prove a good investment, but will think nothing of a heap of manure exposed to the weather and slowly going to waste. It is surprising how much will go to waste, too, slowly and unnoticed in most cases.

Using Cracked Ice

With the more valuable grades of roses and other cut flowers it will be a very good investment to use a little cracked ice in the shipping boxes, being very careful of course to see that no ice comes in contact with the flowers themselves. Apply the ice to the stems of the cut blooms, if you use it.

Burning of the Foliage After Mulching

This is chiefly due to the fact that the manure apply is either too hot or too green. As often as we advocate using manure a year old, or at least old enough to become well decomposed, we find much manure applied right out of the stable. This of course has to be handled just so, or serious harm may result. To be on the safe side it is well to air the houses quite freely right after the mulch is applied. Sometimes the plants are real dry, which is often responsible for the burning of the foliage. We like to have them on the dry side when we mulch, so we can water thoroughly directly afterwards. We generally scrub the houses at the time, this making the air much more damp and helping to keep the fumes of the manure from injuring the foliage.

LANCASTER COUNTY FLORISTS' CLUB.

Asters, the subject of the last meeting, seems to have been a good leadstone as almost four-fifths of the members turned out and quite a nice display was made of cut blooms. W. K. Denlinger, of Vintage, Pa., had perhaps the best finished flowers, three varieties of Vick's Royal purple and white and pink Early Branching. John R. Shriner of Greenland had an extra fine vase of the Crego type. B. F. Barr exhibited Vick's Violet King and Imperial Giant Purity, also Hohenzollern rose pink.

In the discussion which followed, a liquid solution of paris green was recommended as having been successfully used for the elimination of the black beetle; the use of an infusion made from quassa chips was also recommended.

The bug that stings the plant and ruins it by stunting seems to be almost beyond control, some varieties being more susceptible than others. One grower advocated the planting of a row of the variety "Semple" every sixth or eighth row as they seemed especially fond of this variety and would not disturb the others so much if they had these to work on. Another grower advocated growing them under muslin or canvas the same as some growers use for tobacco. This method had been tried on a small scale and not only were the bugs kept out, but the quality of the asters was much improved.

The matter of yellows has given considerable trouble in this section and no known remedy has yet been found for this, but the use of low ground is to be avoided and planting continuously on the same ground should not be followed.

Getting seed true to name is another problem. One grower said that he bought seed supposed to be Vick's Early Branching and planted about 50,000 of them and they were absolutely worthless and a total loss, being no more Early Branching than he was a millionaire from money made out of the florists' business.

The meeting then adjourned to meet September 18th, when carnations and chrysanthemums will be the subject for exhibition and discussion.

Exactness in the prize schedule

The controversy over the intrinsic value of a cup donated for award at a recent exhibition is only one of several incidents which emphasize the need of extreme care in the wording of a prize schedule, as to what is offered, what it is offered for and what the conditions are. We recall a case where a prize was offered for hyacinths in "pans" and much hard feeling was engendered when the judges disqualified a leading entry because azalea or "half pots" were used. Very often the admission or exclusion of certain foliage or flowers as accessories to a display of cut blooms leads to endless argument and dissatisfaction because of divergent interpretations of the schedule terms. These incidents, with their often unpleasant outcome admonish us that we cannot be too explicit in the wording of a prize schedule, every provision of which should be stated in terms that admit of but one construction by exhibitors, judges and all others concerned.

A turn in the tide

The appeal of the retail florist trade, as represented by the Telegraph Delivery Association, for some special recognition in the councils of the S. A. F., discloses a somewhat significant turn in the tide of sentiment towards the national society. The lack of interest and widespread indifference regarding the national organization on the part of the retail element has for many years been a subject of wondering comment and a certain amount of rather severe criticism. Now they "clamor at the gates," supporting their overture with a very practical and persuasive argument, viz., that their organization is the only one in existence which makes membership in the S. A. F. a pre-requisite to admission and that to this fact is due the addition of some forty new members to the national society during the past year! Their argument is certainly the real thing—"all wool and a yard wide." In principle it is substantial proof of the soundness of the conviction, which we have always held and often reaffirmed, that the kindred societies, instead of being a disintegrating menace to the S. A. F., should be regarded as useful adjuncts and feeders for the great central body, crystalizing forces which, rightly directed, would bring to the S. A. F. an accession of strength and influence otherwise impossible of realization. We hope the Executive Board will give most careful study to this subject not only in its bearing upon the immediate proposition but in its broader effect upon the future relationship between the S. A. F. and the many other bodies organized for work on special lines.

At the parting of the ways

The executive committee of the American Carnation Society found itself with a rather difficult problem on its hands. At the session in Minneapolis, in which quite a number of the members of the Society participated, it was shown that since the society abandoned its independent midwinter meeting and exhibition and merged its activities with the other special societies at the National Flower Show in Boston, its membership and interest had noticeably fallen off and the conclusion was forced upon the society that it must get back to its former custom in order to restore its prestige. Then developed a diversity of views as to how this could best be accomplished—whether by accepting the invitation to convene at the Illinois State College where they were offered many unique privileges for scientific and practical experiment and comparison, or by meeting in some city such as Cleveland where accessions to the membership might be gained from the commercial carnation growers. The latter course was finally chosen but it is by no means certain that the society would have been any better off today had it adhered to its former custom and stood aloof from the National Flower Shows. No argument is needed to convince far-sighted observers that the establishment of the National Flower Show and the entry of the Experiment Stations and State Colleges into the domain of floriculture, not to mention the tremendous educational influence of the trade papers, have a direct bearing upon the relationship of all the Societies to the trade and to each other, and must henceforth be taken into account when seeking fields for useful society activity.

GROWING FIGS AT EXPRESS RATE

These fig trees here illustrated chosen at random from a batch of fifty plants in ten-inch pots, represent what is possible in the line of rapid development from the cutting to the mature fruiting plant.

Photograph A is a plant of Negro Largo (this variety while not such a rampant grower as some of the other kinds is perhaps the most satisfactory of all for pot culture and of the finest flavor). In photograph B the center plant is the variety Brown Turkey, while the two outside ones are Negro Largo. The Brown Turkey plant is four feet and six inches high (pot included) and has been twice pinched, while plant A is three feet six inches high and carries some two dozen fruits in various stages of development. This batch of fifty plants have been grown in a little under eight months (December to July) from cuttings of ripened wood from four to six inches long, rooted in sand with a bottom heat of about 80 degrees and top heat of about 60 degrees. In three to four weeks roots one to two inches long had developed and they were potted into 3-inch pots and plunged in the same sand and with the same bottom heat as had been used for rooting. From January to April the plants were forced along by keeping hot bed sash over them on the greenhouse bench and by maintaining the bottom-heat at from 75 to 80 degrees. By May 1st they were in six-inch pots and from that date on have been fed a varied diet of chemicals and organic manure. Phosphate of potash, one ounce dissolved in a gallon of water was administered for a period of three to four weeks to promote fruitfulness while nitrate of soda and weak doses of liquid cow manure were used to promote growth. Icthemic guano was another portion of their diet. Constant and careful feeding coupled with a steady temperature of about seventy degrees at night and all the air possible in the day without lowering the temperature sums up all the points of growing good sized fruiting figs in eight months from cuttings.

THE MINNEAPOLIS CONVENTION

Concluding Reports

Our convention report, published last week, carried the story of the proceedings up to the close of the session of Thursday morning. Thursday afternoon was devoted to the bowling contests and Thursday evening to the ladies' reception and dancing at the Hotel Radisson, both of which affairs were eminently successful in every respect. On Thursday afternoon the present and past officials of the S. A. F. and the Ladies' S. A. F. enjoyed a most delightful sail on Lake Minnetonka to the beautiful villa and grounds of Mr. C. G. Goodrich, who, assisted by Mrs. Goodrich and A. Weber, the superintendent of the grounds, extended a most cordial and hospitable welcome. The result of the bowling contests will be found in another column.

On Friday morning the Florists' Hail Association held its annual meeting. At 11 A. M., the S. A. F. convened in regular session, the principal topic for consideration being the Executive Board's report recommending that exhibits of artificial flowers be excluded from the trade exhibitions and flower shows. The debate was pointed and strenuous while it lasted, which was not long, for it was cut short by a very decisive vote to lay the matter on the table and thus a score or more of trenchant speeches that had been in the incubator for weeks met a prenatal death.

Leonard Barron's lecture on Friday afternoon with stereopticon illustrations giving "Glimpses of American Gardens" was interesting and instructive. Mr. Barron is a good talker and held his audience closely throughout. Following him, Col. D. O. Lively gave a graphic account of the preparations for a huge horticultural department at the Panama-Pacific Exposition which, however, was listened to by a disappointingly meagre audience.

Friday evening's concert at the Lake Harriett roof garden by the Minneapolis Park Orchestral Band, complimentary by the Board of Park Commissioners, was one of the happiest occasions in the history of S. A. F. conventions. The evening was glorious and the entire scene, the pavilion with its festoons of electric lights, the mid-summer night sky overhead, the music and the merry throngs, was one never to be forgotten. A valse reveric, "In a Rose Garden," had been specially written and dedicated to the S. A. F. by the conductor, Wm. Warvelle Nelson, and the 11 numbers on the program were listed in a humorous way as the productions of eleven of the active spirits in the Society's work, namely: "The Land of the Mountain and the Flood," Farquhar; "La Boheme," Young; "In a Rose Garden," Totty; "In a Clock Store," Peirce; "Scenes from Switzerland," Wirth; "Southern Airs," Vincent; "Du Lieber Augustin," Poehlmann; "Put Me Off at Buffalo," Kasting; "Rhyfelgyrch Gwyr Harlech," Evans; "Carrillon," Roland; "Albion," Bunyard. The "Clock Store" was an irrisistibly funny thing with its clocks ticking, striking and cuckooing in the most realistic manner. At the middle of the performance, President Farquhar ascended the band stand and in a very felicitous speech presented Conductor Nelson with a gold-headed ebony cane, the gift of the officers and directors of the S. A. F. Turning to descend after having performed this pleasant duty, President Farquhar found the way blocked by W. F. Gude, who proceeded to tell him how much the Society thought of him and in token of the esteem of his fellow members placed before him a chest of silver table-ware. The response of the surprised recipient was heartfelt and deeply appreciative. Everybody cheered and cheered and it was altogether a most inspiring occasion, including Harry Bunyard's inimitable impersonation as leader of the band in the final selection.

Saturday was the Minneapolis and St. Paul Florists' Day. The visitors were their guests at Tonka Bay for the entire day. It was a well-planned and well-carried out picnic, with music and games and refreshments without limit. Like everything else connected with this memorable convention, it passed off without a hitch and with only one adverse incident, which, happily, had no serious result. During the tub races an overcrowded boat landing gave way, precipitating a number of spectators into the water, including August Poehlmann, who was completely soused and had to don a Minneapolis Club baseball uniform while his clothing was being dried. The tug-of-war between East and West was the culminating excitement and the West was victorious.

Report of Committee on Final Resolutions.

To the S. A. F. and O. H. in convention assembled at Minneapolis, Minn.

Your Committee on Final Resolutions beg to submit the following resolutions and move their adoption, namely:

Whereas, The participants in the Twenty-ninth Annual Meeting and Exhibition of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, members, their ladies, and guests, feeling that they have enjoyed a most pleasureable week in Minneapolis, and have been surrounded by all that would make their stay enjoyable and tend to make their deliberations most productive of good, desire to give some fitting expression to their gratitude for the courtesies and attentions shown them; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists tender by rising and unanimous vote their thanks and appreciation to the S. A. F. and O. H. Convention Committee of Minneapolis and St. Paul, composed of the members of the Minneapolis and St. Paul Florists' Clubs, through its chairman, Theodore Wirth, and the various committees all of whom have performed their labor of love most enthusiastically and successfully and to our entire satisfaction; also to the Minnesota State Florists' Association and the Minneapolis Florists' Club who have as organizations co-operated with the General Convention Committee; further

Resolved, That we tender a rising vote of thanks and appreciation to the Hon. Wallace G. Nye, who so cordially welcomed us to the city of Minneapolis; to the Ladies' Reception Committee; to the Honorable Board of Park Commissioners, through whose valuable assistance the labor of the Superindendent of Parks was rendered so effective in the excellent out-door exhibit which was so pronounced and appreciated a feature of this convention; also to the daily press of the city for their intelligent reports of our proceedings.

Respectfully submitted,
WM. J. STEWART,
MICHAEL BARKER,
A. T. DELAMARE,
Committee.

HERE AND THERE.

A lovely plant was Craig's specimen of the new Nephrolepis Smithi.

The Rice Co. exhibit was amplified and illumined by Robert Shoch's perennial smile.

On Friday the ladies enjoyed an auto ride to St. Paul on invitation of the St. Paul florists.

Among the handsomest plants in the exhibition were a pair of 7 ft. specimens of Dracæna Victoria shown by J. A. Peterson.

The row of gentlemen occupying seats on the platform at the opening exercises of the convention included ten ex-presidents.

On Tuesday, the opening day of the convention, Mrs. August Poehlmann fell while alighting from a street car and sprained her ankle.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co.'s huge display of florists' goods was in charge of S. H. Bayersdorfer, I. M. Bayersdorfer, Martin Reukauf and Sidney Green.

Telegrams were sent by President Farquhar to John Wescott, Robert Craig, J. C. Vaughan and Adam Graham expressing regret at their absence.

Much favorable comment was made on the labels used in the out-door gardens. They were painted grass green and lettered in white and although everything was fully named the labels were not obtrusive in the least.

The Armory with its several spacious and elegantly furnished committee rooms answered most excellently the purposes of an S. A. F. exhibition hall. The view from the gallery above was very brilliant and impressive.

Boston's extreme preparedness to capture the next convention from any and all who might presume to make a rival claim furnished the incentive for many jokes on Boston. It certainly was an invincible outfit if any contest had developed.

The receipt of a special delivery letter from Washington, through W. F. Gude, on Friday, stating that the Department of Agriculture had officially accepted to undertake the rose test garden on behalf of the S. A. F. was received with joyous acclaim.

Henry Emunds, of West End Floral Park, Belleville, Ill., showed an interesting sport from King Humbert canna, having green leaves and yellow flowers with red dots. Mr. Edmunds says that it is a stronger grower and throws up twice as many shoots as King Humbert, the trusses being also much larger. He proposes to name it Queen Helen.

At the Ladies' S. A. F. meeting a national bowling club was organized with Miss Matilda Meinhardt as captain; Mrs. Traendly, secretary; Mrs. Asmus, treasurer. Dues, $1.00. Committee appointed to use all money collected every year to buy prizes. It was also voted that the Ladies' S. A. F. life memberships would be $10.00. Lady joining must be a member of the Society one year. Fund to be kept separate and invested.

The Ladies' S. A. F. held their annual meeting in committee room D of the Armory, Wednesday, at 10 A. M., Mrs. Frank H. Traendly in the chair. The usual order of business was followed. The secretary reported 273 members, with 26 added at this convention, making a total of 299. The treasurer reported receipts of $667.01; expenditures, $457.68; balance on hand, $209.33. At the reception on Thursday evening, Mrs. Maynard in behalf of the L. S. A. F., presented the president, Mrs. Traendly, with a watch bracelet, locket attached. The ladies were entertained to an automobile ride and luncheon at Minikahda Club on Wednesday afternoon, and on Friday the St. Paul ladies entertained all with a ride down the river, serving a delicious lunch.

Among the most effective bedding plants noted by the Boston delegation on their visit to the public gardens at the summit of Mt. Royal, Montreal, was the zonal geranium Heinrich. So brilliant are the flowers of this variety that Alphonse Ricard looks dull alongside. We were informed that it was raised by George Trussell of Montreal. The flowers are semi-double and carried on tall stems above the foliage and in greatest profusion. Champion is another good one, but bearing single flowers. A heliotrope, very low growing and having enormous flat trusses of bloom came in for unqualified admiration. It is known here as "Montreal bedder," but is probably one of the European introductions of recent years. The season in this section of Canada has been very hot and dry and fields and gardens show its effects very plainly.

THE OUT-DOOR EXHIBITS.

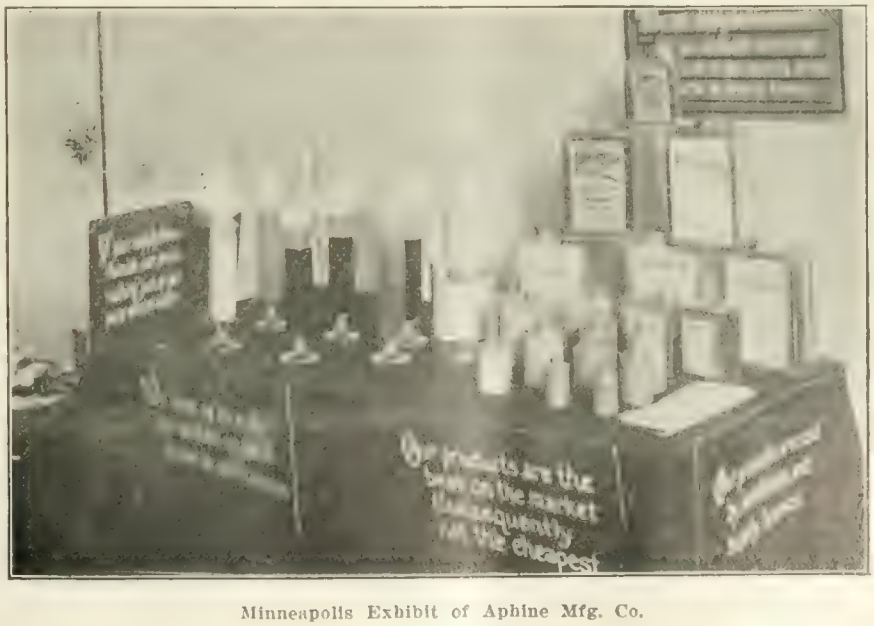
This unique feature of the Minneapolis convention we illustrated and commented on in a general way in our issue of last week. The following details are mainly taken from the reports of the judges in this department, J. R. Fotheringham, E. B. George and Walter Mott, with a few notes personally taken. The canna and gladiolus beds were especially resplendent in effect, four of the latter being over 200 feet long and 8 feet wide each.

C. N. Ruedlinger, Minneapolis, Minn.—A varied collection of hybrid perpetual, hybrid tea roses, etc.; also a good assortment of hardy shrubs and herbaceous plants.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co., Boston, Mass.—Very large display of gladioli, cannas, dahlias, Chrysanthemum Seven Oaks and Viola cornuta atrosonguinea. Lilium myriophyllum in this exhibit had passed out of flower. Gladiolus Comte de Sachs was particularly effective.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa.—A most comprehensive collection of herbaceous plants; an excellent collection of aquatics; a brilliant display of the Cardinal Climber, a fine variety of Ipomea quamoclit; beds of cannas, especially one of the new pink Hungaria; and Pennisetum macrophyllum atrosanguineum.

W. A. Manda, Inc., South Orange, N. J.—An interesting planting, including evergreen shrubs, conifers, golden privet and Japanese maples.



Holm & Olson, St. Paul, Minn.—An extensive collection of conifers, flowering shrubs, and artistically filled vases of foliage plants.

John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, L. I.—A collection of his well-known gladioli, including Aline, Burnham, Dawn, Ray, Scribe, etc.

A. T. Boddington, New York.—Splendid beds of gladiolus America and canna King Humbert.

Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y.—An exceptionally fine display of gladiolus Peace.

Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, Ill.—An

Thos. Meehan & Sons, Dresha, Pa.—Collection of conifers.

Lakewood Cemetery Greenhouse, Minneapolis, Minn.—Four standard vases, well filled.

Minneapolis Floral Co., Minneapolis, Minn.—Pair of standard vases, well filled.

La Crosse Floral Co., La Crosse, Wis.—Fine beds of zonal geraniums and King Humbert cannas.

The judges in their report gave great credit to Theodore Wirth, Supt. of Parks, Minneapolis, for the arduous task of getting the exhibits together, arranging same so artistically and effectively, and for the excellent care shown in the condition of all exhibits. This plan of out-door exhibits so satisfactorily carried out should, in the opinion of the judges, be made an annual feature of the conventions.

AMERICAN GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

President Hendrickson's Address at Minneapolis.

Another year has again demonstrated the usefulness and increasing popularity of the Gladiolus, and also a need for a society such as ours, but as we look over the past year we do not feel satisfied with the work accomplished. While one of the main objects of the society is to create a demand and love for the gladiolus it has always seemed to me that another important work is the testing and proving out of the different varieties that are put on the market, but we feel that very little real good has been done along these lines, largely owing to the unwillingness of many growers to submit their supposedly new and valuable seedlings to the trial grounds before putting them on the market, and I am convinced more and more that something definite ought to be done along these lines, if our society is going to accomplish anything at all. It has been my privilege this year to observe many varieties in the trial grounds and the trials show that there is great anxiety on the part of many growers to put many varieties on the market regardless as to whether they contain merit or not, or whether better ones have been discarded years ago. I believe if we could induce every grower to register and submit for trial every new variety before putting it on the market, and get the opinion from the committee on nomenclature it would save a great deal of wasted time. It seems to me it is to our own interest to be careful along these lines as nothing hurts business as much as disappointment, and we cannot afford to disappoint a buyer especially if he is a florist who is depending upon an income from his crop, and each year is proving to the general florist that he must include gladioli if he would be up-to-date, and he is beginning to find out that they are a good income producer.

As far as I can ascertain the past year has been a good one for most American growers, but a new factor has arisen in the way of almost unfair competition with imported stock. I believe that we all agree that healthy competition is good for business, but it is needless for me to point out that it is impossible for the American grower to compete with labor conditions in other countries, and while I would not want to go on record as doing anything to restrict trade, I do think we would be justified in having a committee appointed to work for an increase of duty to protect our own interests.

Regarding the future of the society, we are having the same experience that all other similar societies have had, and that is, it is hard work to keep up membership. It is always easy to get members fast for a new society, but in two or three years it gets harder and harder, and I am of the opinion that the sooner some plan for affiliation with the S. A. F. can be worked out the better it will be for all concerned.

In closing I wish to thank my associates for the co-operation and response that they have always given me during my term of office.

Nomenclature Committee's Report.

Prof. Beal recommended that names presented for new varieties should be filed for further investigation before being registered. Prof. Beal said that it was impossible to determine the facts concerning many varieties under dispute because of the failure of certain growers to comply with the request of the committee to furnish bulbs for trial. It was voted that the society purchase such varieties, for the purpose of comparison and identification in the trial grounds at Ithaca.

Officers Elected.

President, Montague Chamberlain, Boston, Mass.; vice-president, Geo. Woodruff, Independence, Iowa; treasurer, Carl Cropp, Chicago, Ill.; secretary, L. Merton Gage, So. Natick, Mass.

Executive Committee: I. S. Hendrickson, Floral Park, N. Y.; Mrs. A. H. Austin, Wayland, Ohio; Alex. Henderson, Chicago.

Obituary

Charles M. Hooker.

Charles M. Hooker, a well-known horticulturist of Rochester, N. Y., died August 18, aged 80 years. He leaves three sons and three daughters.

Charles Krombach.

Charles Krombach, for 30 years a florist at 25th street and 4th avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., died at his home, August 18, aged 56 years. His wife, two daughters and one son survive him.

Charles Crawford.

Charles Crawford, a retail florist of Philadelphia, well-known to a former generation of the trade, died on the 24th inst., aged 70, at the home of a friend, Mr. McReynolds, on North Tenth street, and was buried at Mt. Moriah on the 27th. Mr. Crawford was not a member of the Florists' Club and was therefore known only to a few of the present day florists. He is said to have been instrumental in introducing the late W. K. Harris to the Harrisi lily, but so many conflicting stories have been told of that interesting event that there may not be much to this one.

STARTING VEGETABLES IN COLD FRAMES.

Horticulture Publishing Co.

One of your readers desires to know if their is much benefit to be derived from starting cucumbers, melons, beets and similar vegetables in cold frames under cloth, with a view of gaining six to eight weeks, as compared with planting seed out of doors.

It would be our opinion that the seeds of cucumbers, melons and such vegetables would make a gain by being sown under cloth in cold frames, but there would not be a gain of from six to eight weeks. The gain would not be over two. The method of growing cucumbers and melons especially in cold frames, and never taking the glass off, but raising the frames permanently after the weather begins to get very warm, has been practiced here.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

At the mid-summer meeting of the American Carnation Society at Minneapolis, on August 21st, Cleveland, Ohio, was selected as the next meeting place, the convention to be held January 28-29, 1914. Adam Graham was selected as chairman of the committee on local arrangements, with power to add members.

An invitation from the New York Flower Show committee to participate in the spring show, to be held March 21-28, 1914, was accepted on condition that all classes, except those set aside for private gardeners, shall be open to the members of the American Carnation Society only.

Secretary Baur was selected to represent the A. C. S. on the advisory committee of the Department of Horticulture of the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Secretary Baur also submitted a draft of a premium list for the exhibition in January. After striking out the class covering the "mottled or overlaid" varieties, the list was approved. The Medal of Merit was awarded to Peter Fisher for originating the variety "Beacon."

A. F. J. Baur, Secretary.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF PARK SUPERINTENDENTS.

The American Association of Park Superintendents opened their annual convention at Denver, Colo., on Monday, August 25. President James B. Shea, deputy commissioner of Boston Park Department, responded eloquently to the cordial address of welcome by Mayor Perkins. Papers were read by Edward DeGroot, general secretary of the Playground Association of Chicago, on "Playground and Recreation Facilities and Their Management"; by Herman W. Merkel on the "New York Idea of a Zoological Park," and by J. J. Levison on the "Care and Planting of Ornamental Shade Trees.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected, as follows: President, Harry S. Richards, Chicago; vice-presidents, G. W. Burke, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Frank Brubeck, Terre Haute, Ind.; F. C. Green, Providence, R. I.; W. S. Manning, Baltimore, Md.; G. Hennenkoffer, Pueblo, Colo.; G. Champion, Winnipeg, Can.; secretary and treasurer, J. J. Levison, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Newburgh, N. Y., was selected as the meeting place for next year.

MASSACHUSETTS AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

As yet no permanent arrangements have been made for Prof. White's successor, but E. J. Canning, who has been curator of the Botanic Gardens at Smith College for many years, will probably assume the instructional work in the fall or until a new man is appointed. Clark L. Thayer, a graduate of M. A. C. in 1913, will assist in the work of the department.

NORTH SHORE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The annual summer show of the above society was held on the grounds of the R. C. Winthrop estate at West Manchester, Mass., August 20 and 21. While the show as a whole was not quite as large as previous years, the quality was up to the usual high standard. Groups of foliage and flowering plants were shown by Mrs. Lester Leland, gard. E. H. Wetterlow, and Mrs. E. S. Grew, gard. A. E. Parsons. Large collections of vegetables were displayed by A. W. Preston of Swampscott, gard. J. C. Smith, Mrs. Geo. Wigglesworth, gard. W. Craig, and Mrs. Lester Leland. The various classes were pretty well filled. James McGregor, Dublin, N. H., Geo. Stewart, Medford, Mass., and Wm. Swan, No. Easton, Mass., officiated as judges, and their awards gave general satisfaction.

James Salter, Sec'y.

The above advt. is one of a series of paid advts. that Penn the Florist, of Boston, is publishing weekly, (for nearly a year) in the local florists' papers, to become better acquainted with the florists of the country. These advts. have been published daily in the different Boston papers. Any florist desiring to use same in his home town, may do so without further consent. These advts. have been the means of establishing our present great volume of business.

BOSTON

Business is abnormally quiet for August in Boston. It has been so all summer and has at no period had the ring to it that it had last summer. The flower-buying people are either away or are otherwise occupied. The suburban as well as the city trade are at a standstill and sales are made to them by the wholesale dealers under extreme suasion or at unmentionable prices. Gladioli as coming in now are the finest ever seen here, but, somehow, values have been hammered down, a condition to which large bulb growers have contributed by marketing their flowers as a bi-product. Lily of the valley, which had been running shy on quantity and quality is now back to normal status. Roses are plentiful and of varying quality. The new Montgomery rose, Hadley, a beautiful crimson, is in the limelight now and is bound to attract attention wherever seen. Asters are not so overplentiful; quality good, but the recent heavy rains have battered and spattered them and they show the wear and tear for the time being.

BUFFALO

Very little change is apparent in the flower market. The receipts of gladioli continue heavy and some exceptional fine varieties are seen. America, Panama and Augusta are taking well, and there are some fine Canary and Mrs. King. Some indoor asters are had, also only a few outdoor branching, though with very short stems. A heavy supply of Beauties are in and the demand has been fairly good. There have been too many lilies and at this time the supply has shortened up. Roses continue in fair supply, though at times White Killarney and Kaiserin are on the short side.

CHICAGO

There are welcome indications that fall, with its usual business awakening is at hand. In fact, the entire summer showed less of the total depression of business than in former years, and something else than the quality of stock must be the cause, for the early summer heat injured both the roses and carnations. In regular stock, Beauties lead in quality and there are plenty of them without being an overstock. Young stock is now coming in regularly and the quality is constantly improving. In novelties, Milady and Sunburst are the summer leaders and some extra fancy stock brings as high as 15c. Asters have passed from the early to the late varieties and on the sales of this flower reports vary. Gladioli are not selling well and outside of the three leaders, America, Mrs. King and Augusta, and Peace, sales are small. A few Golden Glow chrysanthemums are in, but do not meet much demand. A few carnations from young plants are being cut and some are of very fair size for August.

CINCINNATI

Last week, the demand was very indifferent. The wholesalers' effort to move the large supply was, naturally, very futile. The call from out-of-town is relatively better than the local demand. Roses are very plentiful. Asters are shipped into the market in larger quantities than before. Choice blooms have been moving readily, while the poorer ones find a very slow market. Gladioli are following closely the same form in the market that the asters show. Only the best sell well and yield a fair return. Lilies are in a fair supply and sell up fairly well. Hardy hydrangea, pond lilies and lily of the valley are among the offerings.

NEW YORK

Very little is being done yet in the wholesale markets, where the aspect has not materially changed for weeks, and there are no signs to indicate any immediate activity. In the retail stores a little bustle is noticed, however, and this is a hopeful indication. Quality has improved on some of the standard things, such as asters and roses and there is no fault to find with the lilies, lily of the valley and other staples coming in. All that is lacking is the demand, and weather conditions will have much to do with this for some time to come.

Flower Market Reports

Convention week usually marks low water in the cut flower year. From that on the tide begins to turn. If you ask a wholesaler he will tell you that last week was fair considering the season, and that about sums up the situation. The cool nights of late have improved the roses and there is now some very creditable stock arriving. The improvement is especially noticeable in local Beauties, of which we are now getting the first cuts of the new crop. The dahlia season has opened, and good flowers of the early varieties are a feature of the market. The gladiolus situation is about the same as last reported, only more so. Some good stock is to be had, but the volume is getting gradually smaller. Asters are very fine and moving nicely. Of course, there is some poor stock around, but such might as well stay at home and save freight. The tritoma begins to loom up, but we can hardly expect much sale for such subjects so early. New crop green leucothoe has arrived and this elegant decorative material adds a welcome item to the list of foliage greens.

ST. LOUIS

The market was at a low ebb last week. While there was plenty of stock the great bulk of it was of poor quality and prices were in keeping. Roses and carnations are very short stemmed, but with good flowers. Gladioli and tuberoses are so abundant that the market has been glutted all week. Lilies sell well at all times, also lily of the valley.

THE VISIT TO MICHELL'S.

When Harry Michell invited a few of his friends up to his trial grounds and gardens at Andalusia he did not realize how popular he was. Instead of the 200 he figured on, it turned out a case of 820! So there had to be some hustling at the last minute. But Harry has some good lieutenants and another special train and things were forthcoming. Paul Richter and the rest of them could not be balked by a little thing like a special train or two. Lunch was served on the lawn, after which the inspection of the grounds took place. There was something on every hand to interest the visitors; blazes of color in scarlet sage and cannas and phlox. The gardeners had their note books out. Splendid education for many of them. Paul Huebner said the three most remarkable things were Canna Pink Beauty of Hungaria, Artemesia lactiflora and Buddleia variabilis magnifica. The new geranium Helen Michell came in for a large share of praise. Maurice Fuld took good care of the reporters (excepting the writer, who didn't count). Philip Freud was everywhere with cigars and congeniality. Altogether, it was one grand picnic for the 820 and reflects great credit on Harry Michell, who was there in person and greeted everybody with the perfection of good humor and geniality. We wish him well and congratulate him on the big success of his first inspection tour. Burpee and Dreer will have to look to their laurels. Both would be the first to acknowledge that, and it is a pleasant thought to be able to record that rival houses in the same field as Michell were well represented. Even the seed trade of Baltimore was represented. Mr. Hisser, of Meyer-Hisser & Co., was on hand with some of his friends.

The St. Louis County Florists' Club will hold its regular monthly meeting on Wednesday, September 3.

Cast Iron Cannot be Compared With Kroeschell

We bought a No. 2 Boiler in 1904. It takes care of 5000 sq. ft. of glass, and we could add 2000 more. We are very well satisfied. We used a cast iron boiler before we had yours. It cannot be compared with the Kroeschell Boiler. Your boiler has certainly a great capacity for heating water.

ADJOINING HOUSE AND GREENHOUSE

IT'S an "Old Country" idea fast gaining favor on this side.

If it is permissible over there, it's doubly so here, because of the superiority of our construction and its attractive architectural lines with no sacrifice to growing requirements.

That it is highly practical to combine the practical and the architectural, this illustration is conclusive evidence.

It is a simple graceful design that links up most effectively to the residence.

Glad to send you photos of other subjects treated in this way. You may get an idea from them that will just meet your wants

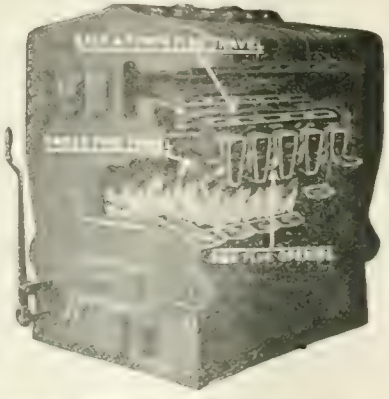
ERECTED FOR THE CITY OF WILKESBARRE, PA.

The Park Board of Wilkesbarre, Pa., comprise eight of the most prominent business men; naturally they are proud of their City; when they decided to build greenhouses, a site was selected close to the splendid COURT HOUSE which looms up in the rear; they instructed their City Engineers to investigate the various types of Greenhouses; the fact that the LUTTON construction was adopted speaks well for the adaptability of LUTTON houses for PUBLIC PARKS AND PRIVATE ESTATES.

ERECTED AT IRVINGTON-ON-HUDSON, N. Y.



This practical grouping of the Greenhouses forms one of the most interesting features on this beautiful HUDSON RIVER estate. The LUTTON CONSTRUCTION has found favor with people who insist on having the best.

Up Chimney Or Into Your Coils: That's The Question

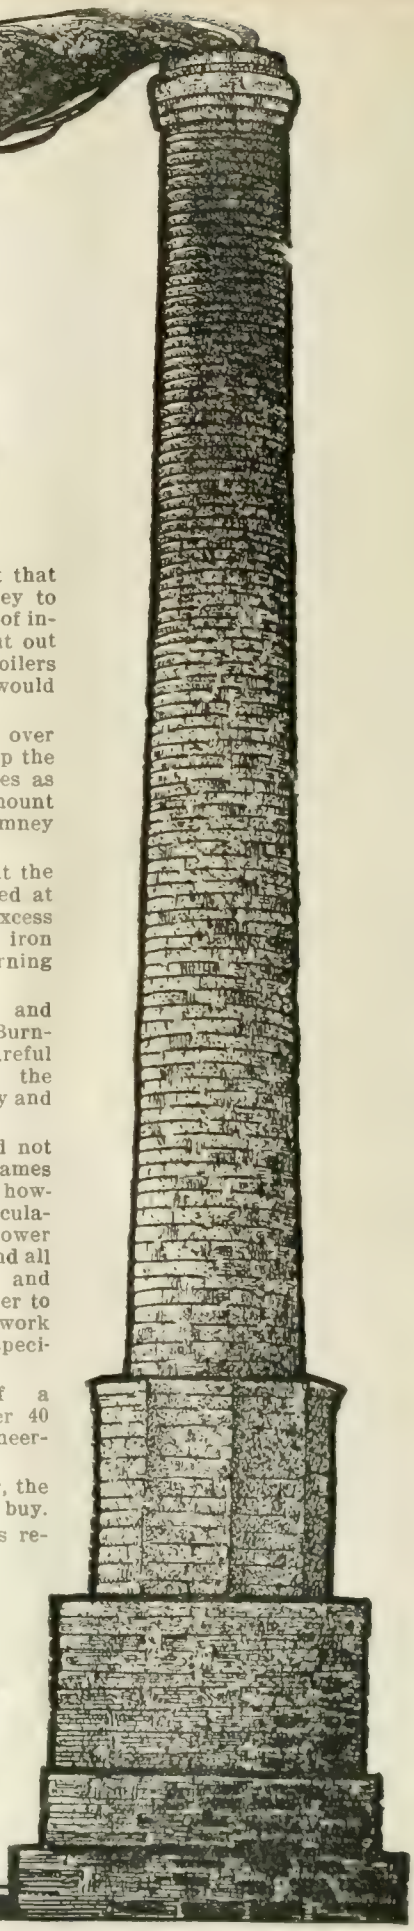
To still better show you exactly how the fire comes up the side flue openings and then commences its back and forth fire travel, we cut the top off this fashion. It is peculiar looking, but it certainly does show things.

Interior view of a No. 30 Burnham Sectional Water Boiler.

IF it were possible for the heat that goes up and out of your chimney to show in visible dollars instead of invisible heat we would at once cut out our advertising, and Burnham Boilers would sell themselves. Seeing would then be believing.

By actual Burnham tests made over and over again, the gases going up the chimney have recorded themselves as containing only the necessary amount of heat to create the required chimney draft.

The same tests have shown that the water in the coils was recirculated at a velocity and temperature in excess of results produced by other cast iron vertical boilers of same size burning an equal amount of coal.



We have bought other boilers and put them side by side with the Burnham, and given each a most careful comparative test under exactly the same condition and same quantity and quality of fuel.

Of course business ethics would not permit our mentioning here the names of the boilers so tested. The fact, however, that in every test their circulation was slower and the water a lower average temperature, proved beyond all doubt what we have stated over and over again, that a greenhouse boiler to be economical for greenhouse work must be designed and made especially for such work.

The Burnham is that kind of a boiler. It is the result of over 40 years of greenhouse heating engineering thought and development.

If you want a greenhouse boiler, the Burnham's the logical boiler to buy.

We can ship same day order is received.

BODDINGTON'S "QUALITY" CHRISTMAS-FLOWERING

SWEET PEAS

WE ARE SUPER-HEADQUARTERS

All true stocks of Winter-flowering Sweet Peas will be scarce this season. Some varieties are a total failure owing to the exceptional season in California this Spring. Our advice to intending planters is to order at once.

Mr. Wm. Sim, Cliftondale, Mass., the great Winter Sweet Pea Specialist, sows our seed almost exclusively.

Our stocks of Christmas-flowering Sweet Peas have stood the test for years, and we can refer you to the largest growers of this increasing popular flower, as to the trueness and quality of our seed, earliness of blooming period and strength and habit of plants.

The following varieties are the "best by test" including Zvolanek's and our own introductions, grown for seed, from selected stocks by the leading California grower and specialist in Sweet Peas.

Our output last year was nearly 3000 lbs. No kicks and plenty of testimonials as to quality, germination and trueness to type.

ECONOMY OF TIME

People are coming to realize more and more that economy of time is one of the chief factors in economy of cost. And nowhere is it more self-evident than in the production of Easter Lilies. Especially in Cold Storage bulbs and Formosum. Space under glass is valuable and it does make a difference whether lilies are on the bench ten weeks or sixteen weeks before they bloom. No one knows this more then the grower who plants them in the benches—he knows the difference in real cost between the bulbs that flower evenly and those that cannot be depended upon at any certain time. Horseshoe Brand Giganteum will flower more evenly and regular then any brand known—have you ever considered this phase of the lily growing business? Prices very reasonable—upon application.

LIBRARY NEW YORK BOTANICAL GARDEN

Amaryllis for Christmas

To flower by Christmas, amaryllis should be given a rest now. Nearly all the newer forms and numerous hybrids of Hippeastrum vittatum, more so than the original type, have by this time completed the season's growth, and should be rested, regular watering being discontinued for a period of from four to six weeks, not leaving them so dry, however, as to cause a shriveling of the roots. Now, if this rest is brought about in September, and ending somewhere in the middle of October, the rhizomes will have attained the desired degree of ripeness and a good stand of fine flowers for Christmas is assured. The appearance of the new growth, the flower buds first, marks the end of the season of rest, and is the grower's cue for setting the plants to work. He first repots the plants into new earth, should they need repotting (an operation not needed every year), places them on a warm, sunny bench, and resumes regular watering and sprinkling. Any fairly rich, sandy soil suits them. No great effort is required to have them at their best any time right after Christmas, or all through the dead of winter. The temperature should be as far as possible, a steady heat; should neither fall below 60 nor rise above 70 degrees. In a house of 65 degrees it takes eight weeks from the time the new growth begins to push forth until the flowers are at their finest.

Dracaena indivisa

Dracæna indivisa planted out in the spring should now be lifted from the field. Do not use too large pots; 4 or 5-inch pots will do. Give a rich compost, say to three parts of fibrous loam, one of well decayed cow manure, and plenty of drainage. Place them where they can have plenty of air and after about ten days they will stand full sunshine. They like to be kept in a nice, moist state at the roots, but not to such an extent as to cause any sourness. Keep the atmosphere moist by damping down two or three times a day. Give syringing during good weather and keep a night temperature of from 55 to 60 degrees.

Lilium candidum

When getting these bulbs always insist on the best type as there are two distinct forms on the market. As soon as they arrive see that they are unpacked and potted up at once. They give better results when three bulbs are grown in an 8-inch or five in a 10-inch pot. For a compost use fibrous loam three parts, well decayed cow manure one part and enough of sand to make it quite sandy. Use plenty of clean crocks to insure perfect drainage, which is absolutely necessary. If the compost is moist they will not need any water at once. They can be placed in some frame where they are exposed to full sun. During heavy rain place some sashes over them so the soil will not become sodden. They can be kept out in a frame until January; just plunge the pots and allow them to freeze as they force much better for it.

Planting Antirrhinums

One of the best paying crops to succeed the early chrysanthemums is a house of the winter-flowering varieties of snapdragons. Although many of our best florists have now gone extensively into this culture it will be some time before it will be overdone. As in all other branches of the cut flower industry, the high-grade product will always meet with a remunerative demand. They can be planted about a foot apart each way. Be always very particular when watering antirrhinums. It is better to look over the benches before you begin and locate the dry and wet spots which will enable you to keep the bench at an even moisture and thus ensure a more even growth through the beds. When well established they will stand good steady heat 55 to 60 degrees at night together with plenty of water, air and light. Keep them nicely disbudded as this will throw the strength into the flower or spikes. When the benches become filled with roots give some liquid feeding.

Rambler Roses

Stock intended for next spring sales will need attention so as to have the wood in fine shape. Where grown in pots all summer, which is without doubt the best way, place all such stock outside where they can have the benefit of the cool nights. To ripen them up they should not get much water at the roots, withholding a little each week for the next three or four weeks. After that they can be placed on their sides to avoid the fall rains and can stay outside until real cold weather sets in, when they can be placed in a frame, covered with some hay or straw and protected with sashes. Field-grown stock can be lifted any time after September 20. When lifting preserve all the roots possible and pot in any good rich mixture and also keep outside.

Potting Evergreens

Now is the best time for those having a demand for small evergreens during the holiday trade to procure and pot them up. Get nice well-balanced trees from any nursery advertising in HORTICULTURE and give them as small pots as will hold the roots. By potting these evergreens up in advance they make new roots and become at home before the cold weather sets in. Give them a rather shady place for about ten days and after that they will stand full sun.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Compost Supply; Lifting Shrubs for Forcing; Making Outside Lily Beds; Nephrolepis, Transplanting Large Palms; Starting Fires.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

George H. Penson

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Penson. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

The Fig House

Fig trees will now be nearing the resting period after producing three good crops. Even though there may be a few fruits that are not quite ripe gradually work them up to having full air night and day. If this is done gradually these late fruits will finish all right. Keep the trees well syringed and do not let the roots want for water.

Melons Cracking

It sometimes happens that just about the time a melon should finish it cracks open—a most disappointing catastrophe, as it frequently happens that the crack is right through the flesh and there is no chance to save it and even were this possible it would be useless for the table. If the crack is noticed the same day as it commences to open, under suitable treatment it may be stopped before it reaches the seed cavity, in which case it will finish up and be edible but not presentable on the breakfast table. This cracking is generally attributed to an excess of sap and energy at a time when nothing above normal is required. It must be remembered this happens just prior to the fruit's "turning" (i. e., the first stage of ripening). Now, to boost a quantity of quick-acting feed into them at this stage is seeking trouble, not only from cracking, for it will affect the flavor. Instead of slightly diminishing the water at the roots, increasing the same at this stage may have the same effect. To keep a house closer than usual in a morning, causing an excess in temperature of fifteen or twenty degrees when a slightly lower than normal would be more congenial, may also cause some of the fruits to crack. If detected in time to save the fruit make a slight cut in the lateral carrying it to check the flow of sap. It will be found a distinct advantage to cut out a small portion of the stem V-shaped. By just making an insertion of the knife some sap at times will pass through and the cut heal up. Keep the house a trifle cooler, omitting shutting up close in the afternoon and evening, also keep the roots a trifle dryer but not dried out. This treatment will have the desired effect.

Winter Cucumbers

Make a sowing of cucumbers to furnish the winter crops during this month. These plants can be raised all the year round the same as melons but it pays to have them growing well before the short days come on. They have an advantage over melons as they crop continually until worn out, whereas their sister of the same order has to set a crop when it shows and be through with it. It is not necessary to plant up a whole house as is the case with melons. A young growing plant will take the same care, temperature, and atmosphere as a plant that is cutting fruit. Where a continuous supply is required for home consumption divide the house or houses to be given up to them into five parts, planting one-fifth of the space every ten days. If this is started the first of September it will mean the last sowing will be made on the 20th of October which is plenty late enough to get any kind of growth on them before Christmas. These will carry on fruiting until the plants sown the first of the year come in. Sow the seeds singly in three-inch pots in light soil, giving them a night temperature of 70 degrees, which must not be reduced at any time if the best results are to be obtained. It is a strange coincidence that one of the older varieties of cucumbers is still to the front the same as Hero of Lockinge melon that was referred to last week. This is Telegraph cucumber. True it has been improved and is known as Improved Telegraph but it still carries the same qualities. For an all-round variety this will be found equal to any. There are some of the newer ones which excel it in some respects; take Matchless for instance, which will often beat it in size but not in the quantity produced. Every Day again will produce more fruits but they are smaller.

Spawning Mushroom Beds

When the temperature of newly-made mushroom beds has receded to about 85 degrees insert the spawn. Take care that the thermometer has been registering from the same depth as the spawn will be placed at and also be sure the bed is receding in temperature; should it be standing at 85 wait until it shows a downward tendency, as this is the limit in heat. Some growers will spawn at a lower temperature and while the crops may be good they will take longer to come. Break the bricks of spawn up into pieces about the size of a hen's egg and insert them nine or ten inches apart and six inches deep. Do not cover the bed right away when spawning at this high temperature, but leave it about five days when it will have gone down several degrees and then case it over with virgin loam about an inch-and-a-half thick. Mushrooms will be ready to pick in six weeks under favorable conditions. It will be advisable to damp the surface of the beds over together with the walls, etc., once or twice a day if the cellar is not naturally damp. Keep the temperature from 50 to 55 degrees at all times. Continue to make up new beds for successive crops.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Růžička

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Cutting Roses

As soon as the cooler weather starts in, the buds which heretofore had been cut quite tight, can be allowed to become much larger, as the danger of their opening out too much is greatly reduced, and the larger buds are much more attractive, and will therefore find a better sale. The market does not want any flowers that are too far open, and great care should be used to have them cut as nearly alike as possible, i. e., to have the buds about the same size, and same stage of development. Put all the blooms into water at the earliest possible moment after cutting. Where a large number are cut, have them graded as soon as possible, and get the stuff into water at once.

Ice

Just because the weather is a little cooler is no reason why the ice box should be allowed to become empty, even for a while. Keep it cold, as an ice box should be. Where ice is made right on the place it is a very simple matter to run the machine once or twice a day, as conditions may call for. From our experience it is the most profitable way to have ice-making machinery right there to fill the ice box at any time on short notice.

The Supply of Bone Meal

Did you ever wish to top-dress some of the benches and then discover that the supply of bonemeal was exhausted? This happens many times and on many places. It is not only annoying, but often we lose quite a little growth, because the bone cannot be applied at the proper time. Places vary in glass area and the growers ought to know how much bone is necessary for the season, ordering it all at once, early, so as to be sure that it is on hand when it is wanted. It may seem a large sum to lay out at the one time, but when you figure up the total you pay by buying a bag at a time, you will no doubt find that the money will be well invested.

Tobacco Stems

These with us are a little out of place, when we consider that there are so many good materials in the market that can be used much easier and with greater safety. Often we have to smile at the old tobacco pot standing in the shed, and then think of the simpler ways of today. The best places will not have a single fly around their plants. All the vitality the plants possess should go into the production of flowers, and not to feed hundreds of parasites. Where tobacco stems are still to be used it is well to give careful attention in preparing them for the smoke pot. The drier they are used the more effective will the smoke be, and the more dangerous to the plants. Be very careful not to allow the stems to burn with a flame, as that makes very hot smoke, which burns the foliage. The stems should only be allowed to smoulder and smoke. When the stems are sprinkled to be too wet, the smoke will become about half steam, and lose its killing power. Never light a pot and then leave it to its own fate. Better pull it up and then down the houses, filling the houses full on the last trip. This is not very pleasant work, to say the least, but it can hardly be done any other way and be done right.

Sod for Next Season's Potted Plants

If you have no sod remaining after filling the houses, start at once to make your heap of soil that is to be used for potting the young plants next winter. If this is allowed to go by, and no soil is on hand when potting is to be done, you know what that will mean, with the ground frozen. The best soil we like to use is left-over sod. This is stored under cover, and then it can be used at any time during the winter months.

Winter Flowering Snapdragons

For a number of years H. Huebner of Groton, Mass., has been studying and working to do for the antirrhinum what Zvolanek has done for the sweet pea by evolving a reliable winter-flowering strain. How well he has succeeded is indicated in the illustration shown on the cover page of this paper, which is from a photograph made in middle of January last. After years of crossing and recrossing Mr. Huebner has finally fixed the strain in the three popular colors, yellow, pink and white. As no snapdragon can be depended on to come true from seed, propagation is effected by cuttings from selected plants only. Cuttings are usually taken in October. We understand the stock is to be placed on the market during the coming season.

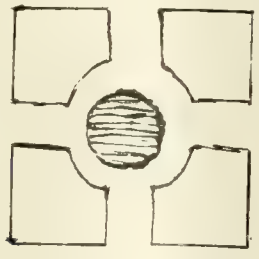
The artist gardener

The contribution by Mr. Bleicken in this issue on color and form harmony in herbaceous planting brings to the front a timely topic in a somewhat original vein. Anyone who has taken particular notice of the herbaceous beds so prevalent in present day gardening, especially where anything like formal arrangement of beds, borders and walks has been undertaken, must acknowledge that in very many instances Mr. Bleicken's implied criticism is well-founded. One does not have to look very far to find some awful conglomerations of incongruous form and clashing color—very often composed of splendid material in itself but violating in its arrangement the principles of artistic taste and good judgment. Here is presented a boundless field for study and experiment and no young gardener who masters the art and puts it into practice need worry about his future. The subject is one well worthy of thoughtful discussion and our columns are open to any of our readers who may wish to follow Mr. Bleicken either in support or dissent.

Real expansion

Should the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists adopt some plan whereby local clubs and societies may be merged into direct membership, as now seems quite probable, it will have taken one of the most radical and far-reaching steps in its history. To put the proposition in practical working shape will require careful study from several standpoints for there are some hard nuts to be cracked, but the scheme as so earnestly advocated by its sponsors is not an impossible one and the most hopeful augury for its success is the generally favorable attitude of the S. A. F. members, most of whom are also on the roll of one or more florists' clubs or local horticultural societies. So we look to see whatever stumbling-blocks there may appear, easily removed, for "where there's a will there's a way." Closer affiliation between the S. A. F. and the various national organizations devoted to special flowers or plants is a different proposition, requiring different treatment but we hazard the prediction that this, too, will before long become an accomplished fact.

A promising vista



Visitors to the Minneapolis convention will all agree that the one most distinguishing and impressive feature there was the superb display of outside planting. We can well remember when the desirability of such an annex to the annual convention was broached a good many years ago by W. A. Manda. The first attempt at its realization was at Dayton, O., where a modest beginning was made possible by the location of the convention hall in the fair grounds and the co-operation and assistance of the National Cash Register people through the gardener in charge of the planting about their buildings. Seeing how valuable a feature this can be made it is unfortunate that facilities such as were enjoyed at Minneapolis or even at Dayton must be very rare in the history of conventions. It is particularly gratifying, therefore, to learn that the prospects are excellent for the installment at Boston next year of an outdoor display on an extensive scale and, no doubt, the Minneapolis success will lead many nurserymen and plantsmen who did not exhibit there to see its trade value and to put in an appearance at Boston. We would not be surprised if this department should attain astonishing proportions on this particular occasion.

ABOUT THE HARDY FLOWER GARDEN

This is about the time when planning is in order for replanting or new planting of herbaceous beds and borders. My experience and observations in this work may be of some interest to other gardeners at this time. For eight years I have been trying to solve the problem of color and form in herbaceous plantings. Feeling and believing almost from the first, that the promiscuous mixing of hardy herbaceous plants violates principles of harmony and balance, I have tried to analyze the principles of art in carpet bedding and to apply the same in herbaceous plantations, as far as possible. Whatever objection one may have to carpet bedding, especially in unsuited locations on the lawns and in park secenecy, one cannot deny that good principles of form and color selection were successfully practiced by most gardeners twenty-five and thirty years ago in the carpet bedding of that time.

I find, that the charm of restfulness and calmness in form and gayety in color was due mostly to simplicity of arrangement—certain repetitions of lines—and a restraint in choice of material. Too much variety in plant species and too many varieties in colors within the species are to blame, when we have only good looking groups or beds of plants for our labor, but not a "garden." And when we have not a whole garden with a real garden spirit in it, the artistic excellence in details is of no lasting merit. It would be positively ruinous to the artistic value of a garden 60 by 100 feet to grow in it most of the catalogued species of herbaceous plants. Besides, the practical work of taking care of such a garden would far exceed the results obtained.

The beds described below furnish, I believe, a good example of linear forms in leaves and growth, with yellows and blues and their secondaries for colors. The four beds are about 16 by 16 feet each and grouped, as shown in the diagram, around a smaller circular bed of tritomas or yuccas with yellow daffodils for spring bloom.

The list of plants in these four beds is as follows: Fritillarias and snowdrops alternating with some very low herbaceous plant of yellow or blue color or between pansies for a border to join the beds to the grass walks around them. These joining borders should vary in width from one to two or three feet, those making irregular outlines against the bed itself, but a straight line against the walks. A few clumps of early tulips, yellow or brownish in color, followed by larger clumps of Darwin tulips of similar colors; then early German iris, hemerocallis, Spanish iris, Japanese iris, Hyacinthus, candicans and funkias, all in groups and clumps, yet so distributed as to give bloom of each species and variety over the beds. The distributing must always be left to the individual taste and feeling of the gardener. Leaves and colors vary of course in these beds, but not enough to disturb the sensation of a distinct "motiv" in the picture, carried out through the whole season. The "motiv" for these beds is taken from scenery in low moist grass lands, in the vicinity of a pond or river.

[I borrow the word "motiv" from C. Schneider's (Germany) book on Landscape Gardening and use it in the same sense as it is used in this book.]

Here is another combination, which I believe does not mix form and colors inharmoniously. English daisies for border, then sweet williams in reds, crimson, white, scarlet and pink. Scarlet and red phloxes divided by Achillea The Pearl, and a few white asters for later autumn. Colors would vary from white and pink to red, scarlet and crimson, excluding all yellows, blues, purples, etc.

There are many other good combinations as monardas and gaillardias with helianthus, coreopsis and other compositae; perhaps blue asters in late fall, or hibiscus with hollyhocks and foxgloves with other large-leaved plants of colors mauve pink and red. Or thalictrums with aquilegias, delphiniums, spireas, etc.

These and many more can be used without giving one the impression of cramming a lot of uncongenial plants into one particular place for the sole purpose of having something in full flower all the time. These groupings are not to be understood as essential but are suggested only to illustrate what I maintained in the beginning in regard to greater harmony and simplicity of both form and color in our use of herbaceous plants. If such beds are not always in full flower I think it is also interesting and pleasing to see a bed of plants just budding and to watch the unfolding of a garden picture from day to day.

I take it for granted that all gardeners know and practice to make all herbaceous beds very fertile with a soil depth of at least 1½ feet. The close growing together of so many plants in one bed makes a deep rich soil an absolute necessity to thrifty growth.

IMPORTATIONS OF TREES AND TREE SEEDS.

Figures gathered by the federal quarantine board of the Department of Agriculture show that during the past fiscal year 3,779,041 growing trees and 15,040 pounds of tree seeds were imported into the United States. The trees include, say the members of the board, valuable species that do not grow in the United States and stock which can at present be bought more cheaply abroad. The tree seeds imported are largely for the purpose of reforesting land, though in a number of cases they are used in ornamental planting on individual estates.

France leads in the number of growing trees sent here, with a total of 1,782,255. Germany is second with 849,245, and Holland third with 690,632. Imports are made from thirteen other countries, including India, Japan and Australia. The trees and shrubs imported are chiefly evergreens, such as pines, spruces, and firs, and broadleaf plants—oaks, maples, etc. The majority is stock of foreign origin, though many in a few cases cultivators abroad through a special selection of attractive forms of our native trees have developed them to such an extent as to make them desirable to purchasers here.

Besides more than seven tons of tree seeds, many thousands of pounds of seed of perennial and annual plants, bulbs, and fruit stock, as well as ornamental shrubs, are imported. The greater part of the tree seeds, or more than 7000 pounds, come from Ger-

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

In accordance with the invitation extended by the Horticultural Society of Chicago and the Chicago Florists' Club the Chrysanthemum Society of America will hold its next meeting and exhibition at Chicago, November, 1913. They have arranged for the exhibition to be held at the Art Institute, Chicago, Ill., November 5th, 6th and 7th, 1913. The preliminary prize list has been mailed with the Chrysanthemum Society's annual report to all members. Extra copies of the premium list can be obtained by applying to Mr. R. J. Haight, secretary of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, 536-538 South Clark street, Chicago, Ill., to whom all entries for the show are to be made.

Reply postal cards concerning the compromise scale as suggested by ex-Pres. Elmer D. Smith have been mailed to all members of the society for their vote on the question. The response has not been as large as it ought to have been. According to the answers received the majority of the members are in favor of more points for color than as suggested by Mr. Smith and I conclude the scale that could be arrived at from the views expressed would be as follows:

Color 25.—Form and fullness, 20; size, 30; stem and foliage, 25.—Total, 100. CHAS. W. JOHNSON, Secretary.

CARE OF LILY OF THE VALLEY.

The following rules in reference to the care of lily of the valley pips and their cultural requirements have been published in poster form by the German Society of Lily of the Valley Growers:

1. Never let my pips be uncovered or exposed to sunshine and wind.
2. Cover me with earth or other shading materials, and let me have always the necessary moisture.
3. Cover me in winter time with short manure.
4. Do not hurt me, when separating my principal roots or in sorting, and you must never break off my flank pips but cut them.
5. Let me never be suffocated among weeds when growing; I want light and sunshine.
6. Protect me against frost during transport.
7. Let me have sufficient moisture when you preserve me in cold storage boxes or barrels.
8. Always use fresh moss for packing, and spread coarse sand between my roots.
9. Always use boxes instead of baskets for packing, and take care that my flank pips are not pressed against the sides.
10. Never call me first quality when I am only second or third; when I am an early-flowering I do not belong to the first quality.
11. Inform every buyer whether I am an early or late flowering variety, and if I am grown on humus, sand or clay soil.
12. Do not sell me too cheap, or else it will not pay you to grow me.

Estimates.

How rapidly has the summer flown, and soon we shall say, "The summer is past, the harvest is ended," and we can ask, "what has the harvest been?" Shortly we shall be able to answer this question, but just now estimates are the nearest we can get to it, and these only general in the main. Few crops have been harvested and growers are reluctant to put their estimates into figures. Since our last crop notes, no changes of importance have occurred. We can add but little to what we said about peas. Conditions are apparently favorable, but until threshing has become general, thus revealing the actual yields, all estimates are really guesses.

It may be well to call attention to what may prove to have been an important factor affecting the crop. Our readers will, no doubt, recall our reporting a severe frost late in July over a considerable part of Montana and Idaho, and which undoubtedly caused more or less damage, but whether more, or less, remains to be shown. It is a curious fact that the pods of peas which have been frozen often continue to grow, sometimes attaining unusual size, but without a single well-developed pea, while young peas partly grown have to be discarded because of their vitality being destroyed. Under such circumstances unless estimates are made only after very painstaking investigation, they are liable to be very misleading, and wide of the facts. It may be recalled that some estimates last year were very inaccurate, due mainly to the cause above mentioned.

Beans, Corn and Cabbage.

Ill news comes to us about beans. The long period of drought, combined with the intense heat prevailing much of the time has caused severe damage to the crop in Michigan and New York State. The character of the soil chosen as a rule for beans, is a sandy or gravelly loam, and therefore not well adapted to resisting drought. It seems to be generally agreed that we are in for a short crop of beans, though the extent of the shortage no man knows.

It is much the same with corn, both sweet and field varieties. Some very good judges estimate the shortage from 25 to 50 per cent. of an average yield. Undoubtedly, corn all over the country has been pretty hard hit, and choice seed is likely to reach a higher level of prices than for several years past. It is reported that canned corn has advanced 20 per cent. in the past two months despite the heavy carry over, much the largest in the history of the canning industry.

More definite information about the cabbage seed crop of Long Island shows that it was not over 50 per cent. of an average. We have received no figures from Puget Sound—simply that the crop was short.

European Root Crops.

The European shortage in biennials, particularly roots, will, with the possible exception of turnips, be fully evened up by the large carry over, and the stocks grown in this country. While there will doubtless be a firmer market on turnips, and possibly a noticeable advance on three or four varieties, there will be no justification for famine prices, and such prices are quite improbable.

In the West.

We are unable to chronicle any material changes in the crop situation of California, but the seed growers would like to be shown some way to successfully cope with the pea aphis or pea louse, which for two years past has been such a factor in destroying the sweet pea crop. Come forward, ye inventive geniuses, and fill a long felt want.

We have had one or two letters from a well known expert who has recently returned from an extended visit to the pea growing districts of Montana and Idaho. He says conditions generally are favorable as to appearances, but calls attention to the freeze of July last which he believes to have been very disastrous, especially in sections. He discourses on the purity of the seed stock, evidently having devoted considerable attention to this feature, and he warmly commends those of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., while he praises the types of several other growers but omits to mention any names. The recent rains have been of incalculable benefit to all crops excepting those practically matured and has not damaged them.

St. Louis, Mo.—The St. Louis Seed Company will move to larger quarters at 415 Washington avenue, November 1st.

FLORISTS' CLUB OF PHILADELPHIA.

The regular monthly meeting of the Club was held on the 2nd inst. Adolph Farenwald was the essayist, his subject being the recent S. A. F. convention at Minneapolis. Nomination for officers to be balloted for at the October meeting were in order. J. Otto Thilow, who has held the office of president for two terms, was nominated for a third. Adolph Farenwald was also nominated for this office, the only one for which there is rivalry. George Burton was nominated for vice-president. The present incumbents of the treasurer and secretary chairs—George Craig and David Rust—were renominated without opposition.

NEW YORK STATE FEDERATION OF FLORAL CLUBS.

The members of the State Federation of Floral Clubs are urgently requested to attend the annual meeting at Syracuse, at 2 P. M., Tuesday, September 9th, which is during the week of the State Fair. All florists are urged to be present. Important business will come before this meeting which will be of great interest to all florists in the state. The election of officers for the ensuing year, will also take place. There is to be an extensive exhibition of plants and flowers in Horticultural Hall, under the able supervision of Charles H. Vick, of Rochester. All exhibits which are sent to Mr. Vick, express charges prepaid, will be properly staged. Florists of the State, in addition to having a very pleasant day or two at the State Fair, will assist very much by their presence at the meeting of the State Federation.

JOHN YOUNG, Secretary.

NEW LONDON HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The above society held its Summer or Aster Show, on the 28th inst. at the house of the Pequot Independent Hose Company. The show far surpassed all past exhibitions, both in point of excellence and the number of exhibits. The private estates from the Pequot section made a large display of plants, fruit and flowers. The judges were Ernest Robinson of the Plant estate, Eastern Point; M. H. Shea of the Osgood estate, Norwich, and S. A. Gilbert of Norwich.

H. LICKMAN.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The fall exhibition of the Newport Horticultural Society will be held at the Town Beach on September 16, 17, 18. Schedules for the same and any further information can be had by applying to the secretary, William Gray, Bellevue avenue, Newport, R. I.

The St. Louis Florist Club meets on Thursday, September 11th. This will be installation meeting and a valuable paper is promised by Adolph Jaenicke on "Gassing Against White Fly." Members who were at the S. A. F. convention will also tell us all about it.

The first meeting of the Horticultural Club of Boston for the season of 1913-14 was held at the Parker House, on Wednesday evening September 3. Secretary John Young of the S. A. F. was the guest of the evening. All the officers were re-elected for the coming year.

The Boston Co-operative Flower Market held their tenth annual sale of choice of stalls last Saturday, W. W. Tailby officiating as auctioneer. The institution is evidently prosperous for several more stalls were sold than last year and the premiums paid were nearly $800 in excess of last year's amount. The stall-holders say they are well satisfied with the Park street location.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF CHICAGO EXHIBITION.

The Summer Flower Exhibition of this society was held in the Art Institute, Aug 14 and 15.

It far surpassed previous efforts, though it is to be regretted that the private gardeners and amateurs did not make a better showing.

The W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, had some magnificent vases of gladiolus America, also a fine collection of other stock notably some of the newer varieties of cannas.

Bidwell & Fobes, Kinsman, Ohio, had a fine collection of gladioli, notable among them being some extra fine Mrs. Francis King and Princeps.

A. E. Kunderd, Goshen, Ind., had a large collection showing many seedlings in the new ruffled gladiolus, his display occupying two long tables.

Vaughan's Seed Store had a large display of gladiolus, phlox and other perennials. G. Swansen, Elmhurst, had a fine collection of asters.

N. W. Harris, gard. Joseph Kruppa, had by far the best collection of perennials, annuals, etc., in the show.

C. O. Youngstrand, Golf, Ill., had a large exhibit of phlox, delphinium and other perennials.

Paul Dieball, Hubbard Woods, Ill., had quite a collection consisting of dahlias, asters, auratum lilies, gladiolus and perennials.

Winterson's Seed Store, Chicago, had a collection of hibiscus, which were a feature.

THE FLORISTS' SUPPLY HOUSE OF AMERICA

WALTER MOTT'S NOTES BY THE WAY.

St. Joseph, Mo.

W. C. Kennedy reports a good seed season, but with the terrible drought prevailing through the Missouri valley local crops are burnt up; even corn can hardly be utilized as ensilage.

Stuppy Floral Co. find their two ranges of glass cannot supply the increasing business and are looking for expansion. Frank Stuppy returned from the convention full of new ideas, although they are not so far behind, at that.

Kansas City, Mo.

There was a disappointed quartette here during convention week. They were Robert S. Brown, a pioneer in the business, one who changes not during the revolving course of nature, but who had a close call recently, and rejoiced the hearts of his confreres by complete recovery. He was too busy—a habit formed years ago and unchangeable. A. F. Barbe is building a handsome office and show house and was afraid the work would suffer by his absence. Arthur Newell was in the midst of overhauling his beautiful store which is one of the chief attractions, bordering on two of the leading streets. Samuel Murray candidly admitted that had his foresight been as good as his hindsight he would have surely been at Minneapolis. Realizing what pleasure and profit he missed he has already made arrangements for attending Boston, accompanied by Col. Sharp, his aid and grower for twenty-five years, and who produces the grand specimens of Ananassa sativa variegata and fancy-leaved caladiums embellishing the fine window of the city store. Miss Hayden had just returned from a month's vacation to her home in Verdant, Wis., in time to put the finishing touches on some immense floral pieces for the obsequies of a past grand Masonic master of the state. The jewel of office was a work of art. The numerous friends of Mr. Murray will be glad to know he has greatly improved in health of late. There is a reported scarcity of Dracaena Sanderiana for fall use.

Secretary Beneke, of the St. Louis Florist Club, informs us that the Mid-continental Flower Show which was to have been given by the Coliseum management is called off for this year owing to the withdrawal by the Florist Club Committee of their support.

CHICAGO NOTES.

The Lake County Agricultural Fair is being held at Libertyville, Ill., three days this week and is better than ever before.

Winterson's Seed Store received such an unfavorable report from its importer regarding the supply of immortelles this season that they immediately cabled their order to secure stock. Prices are said to be high.

All the French bulbs are now here, including Paper White narcissus, fuchias, Chinese lilies and Roman hyacinths which are said to be very scarce. Lilium candidum is expected this week; Harrissi and Formosum are now here. Dutch stock is due about the middle of the month.

The Luxemburgers, composed of market gardeners and florists of the North Side, held their tenth annual Schobremesse at Eberts Grove, Rogers Park, Sunday and Monday. The display of flowers, fruit and vegetables was very large and was viewed by 8000 people. The festival is pronounced the best ever held here.

A member of a large firm picking and shipping galax leaves recently told a Chicago wholesaler that the export orders are now growing so rapidly that almost his entire stock is sold abroad. At this time the supply of bronze leaves is very short and the price has advanced from $1.50 to $2.00 per 1000 in Chicago.

The Municipal Art Committee of the City Club is winning many victories in the fight it is putting up against the billboard nuisance, and many large boards have been ordered down on the main thoroughfares. The latest aid in the fight is the placing of nine inspectors who have a card index system of every billboard in the city and its history.

Personal.

Mrs. E. H. Horton started on September 2 for a Georgian Bay trip.

Miss Paradise, of A. L. Vaughan Co., is having a second vacation in Indiana.

A. F. Longren and C. Pruner have started on their fall trip in the interests of Poehlmann Bros., florists' supplies and plant department.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Washburn and little son are visiting relatives in Riverside and Hinsdale, Ill. Mr. Washburn has made his home in California for the past year and his health has been much benefited by the milder climate. They expect to remain about a month.

Traveling salesmen are always welcome in Chicago and last week brought an unusual number. Among them were noted Skidelsky, Karins, Knickman, Fotheringham and Fancourt. Other visitors were Mr. Wright of Wright's Flower Shop, Los Angeles, Calif., and J. W. Furrow, Guthrie, Okla.

OBITUARY.

Charles Akehurst.

Charles Akehurst, aged 85 years, died at his home in Baltimore, Md., on August 22d. He was formerly the head of the firm of C. Akehurst & Son, but retired several years ago. A widow and several children survive him.

Frank Zetter.

Frank Zetter, of Rochester, N. Y., died August 23, aged 61 years. He was in charge of P. R. Quinlan's greenhouses for over 25 years, and was familiarly known to nearly all the traveling men. He is survived by his wife.

John George Strodtbeck.

John George Strodtbeck, a retired florist, died Friday after a long illness at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Sophie Reitz, 745 Palmetto street, Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Strodtbeck was 71 years old and leaves his wife, a son and six daughters.

William Henry Maule.

Like a bolt from the blue sky comes the news of the sudden death in New York City of William Henry Maule, the well-known seedsman of Philadelphia, on Wednesday, September 3, while on his way home with his wife from an auto tour of the Berkshires. Mr. Maule came of a distinguished family and was reputed to be a millionaire. He was a most unique and original character and recognized the world over as one of America's greatest seedsmen. His age was 56 years. Death was due to apoplexy.

BOSTON A mild ripple of business is detected this week, but not sufficient to affect selling prices in the least. In fact, any attempt to "jack up" values to normal levels results in an immediate cessation of the demand. There is an unprecedented call for lily of the valley, but it cannot be pushed above the figures prevalent all summer. American Beauty roses are plentiful and are good enough to warrant a better price than it is possible to realize on them. Gladioli are a burden on all sides. The market is so overloaded that buyers are almost out of the possibilities and no price is refused by the dealers. Asters have been much injured by the recent rains and sweet peas have suffered from the same cause and are not worth picking. The demand for cattleyas is far in excess of the available supply just now.

BUFFALO The recent rains came just in time to save the late branching asters and also helped the gladioli along. Good stock has taken well and prices have been better than in previous years up to this time. Roses have been in good supply. Milady, Ward, and Kaiserin are good and Beauties have taken well. Lily of the valley and lilies are in demand. Trade has been good and the market well cleaned up except on gladioli of ordinary and mixed quality.

CHICAGO The last days of August added to the very fair record of the last summer months of the season. Shipping was especially good and Saturday and Sunday were both days in which good stock moved off rapidly, followed by Labor Day, when everything first-class cleaned up. With the coming of September a hot wave came also, and today (Sept. 2) business is confined mostly to shipping. The scarcest flowers in the market are white roses and lilies, which are included in practically all of the out-of-town orders. The flower too much in evidence is the gladiolus which sells for so much less than the bulbs cost that it is impossible to imagine anyone growing the poor, off-colored varieties year after year always with this same result. Even the three best varieties are nearly at a standstill this week. Young carnations now have stems from seven to twelve inches long and the blooms are of very fair size. Roses are apt to come a little open these hot days but plenty of good stock for the season is seen. Late asters are proportionately late with the early ones. Sales on these seem generally satisfactory. Smilax is very scarce and unusually high, while plenty of asparagus is to be had.

CINCINNATI The market has taken on a firmer tone during the past week and there is apparent a more active demand than we had a week ago. Shipping business is relatively better than local business. In roses excellent Beauties of all sizes are to be had. The supply of other roses, including Killarney, Ward, Taft, Maryland, Ivory and Richmond, is fully adequate. The choice grades meet with the readiest sale. Good asters are now available in quantity and have been meeting with a very good market. Lilies are in good supply and clean up tolerably well. The very limited quantity of lily of the valley that comes in is selling nicely. Gladioli are still in a heavy supply and some excellent dahlias have made their appearance. Greens are, with the exception of smilax, in a more than sufficient supply.

NEW YORK There is not much thus far to indicate the near approach of the fall season with its appropriate activity in flower buying. So long as desirable weather conditions continue the public have but little interest in store flowers and so there is no likelihood of any noticeable revival just yet. In the meantime growers are perfecting their stock and a steady improvement in quality of roses, carnations and other standard material is in evidence. Asters dominate the situation at present. They are everywhere in enormous quantities and many of them are very fine. Those that are not are a difficult proposition and the prices realized are unquotable. Gladioli are now waning and sweet peas are no longer a factor. Cattleyas, oncidiums, Odontoglossum grande and Dendrobium formosum giganteum are the principal components of the orchid stock. Dahlias are beginning to come in quite heavily.

ST. LOUIS The market has been in a bad way during the past week, not much doing and the weather very hot. The growers are praying for rain as the field stock is burning up. Most of the retailers say the last week was one of the dullest of the month. The market is made up at present of roses, asters, carnations, lily of the valley, tuberoses and a lot of poor outdoor truck.

A BALTIMORE DEAL.

Charles E. Meehan, vice-president of the S. S. Penock--Meehan Co., who has just returned from Baltimore, announces the purchase by his corporation of the Baltimore Florists' Exchange, the co-operative flower market of that city, a successful organization whose original five-dollar shares have recently been sold at three hundred. The consideration is not stated, but it was in cash and must have been high to have tempted over 90 per cent of the shareholders to sell out of a highly lucrative proposition. The concern will be run as one of The Wholesale Florists of Philadelphia's chain of establishments, supplementing those already established in Philadelphia, New York and Washington and putting Baltimore in touch with the most up-to-date metropolitan markets and method of wholesaling cut flowers.

GEORGE C. WATSON

Malcolm Lamond has been appointed head gardener for the city of Oakland, Cal.

PERSONAL.

Fred E. Palmer of Brookline, Mass., is the Progressive candidate for senator in his district.

Carl S. Knopf and Miss Florence Nelson, both of Los Angeles, Cal., were married August 20th.

Oscar Prager, horticultural expert for the city of Oakland, Cal., has returned from a three months' trip to Europe.

William J. Patterson of Wollaston, and Miss Westwood, will be married at the home of the bride, Jamaica Plain, Mass., on Sept. 12th.

Harry A. Barnard, representing Stuart Low & Co., has arrived in New York on his annual American tour. His address is Hotel Albert.

Paul A. Rigo, head salesman for Henshaw & Fenrich, and Ethel C. Wilson, both of New York city, were married on Wednesday, Sept. 3d.

Boston visitors: John Young, Secretary S. A. F., New York; Jos. Fuller, Leominster, Mass.; A. E. Thatcher, Bar Harbor, Me.; Edw. Kirk, Bar Harbor, Me.

H. C. Irish, of the landscape firm of Muskop & Irish, St. Louis, has gone to Ames, Iowa, where he will stay for the next six months to teach a class in landscape gardening at the Iowa Agricultural College.

Theodore Wirth, of Minneapolis, president-elect of the S. A. F., is in the hospital with a broken leg and other injuries caused by being struck and run over by an automobile. HORTICULTURE extends deep sympathy and wishes for a speedy recovery.

Joseph Kelley, landscape gardener for Messrs. Wallace at Colchester, England, who has been visiting in this country for the past month, sailed for home, September 2, on the Franconia, from Boston. Mr. Kelley had been ill for some days previous to sailing and was unable to fully carry out his plans.

Jackson Dawson, of The Arnold Arboretum, personally beloved and professionally recognized as an exponent of practical horticulture without a peer, was elected president of the Association of the Nineteenth Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, Civil War Veterans, at Fall River, Mass., on August 28. No high honor was ever more worthily bestowed.

DURING RECESS.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The Chicago Florists' Club had an ideal day for its annual picnic, which was held on August 31 in Ehrhart's Grove. A little lower temperature would have been acceptable, but the heat did not mar the pleasures of the day and the program of events, as arranged by the sports committee, F. Potacka, E. Ollinger and E. F. Winterson, Jr., was carried out and enjoyed by all. The final event, around which the greatest interest centered, was the ball game played between the Wholesalers and the Retailers, commanded by E. F. Winterson, Jr., and E. Ollinger respectively, and was a victory for the Retailers. Among the other contests Mrs. T. Waters won the honors by distancing all others in the married ladies' race, while Frank Potocka proved that he could run a little faster than the other fat men. A fine photograph of the company was secured but too late for use in this issue.

IN BANKRUPTCY.

William Hagemann & Co., 30 Church street, New York City, made an assignment on August 27 to Theo. M. Crisp. Paul Kase, president of the corporation committed suicide on August 19, as recorded in a recent issue of HORTICULTURE. The company was incorporated on April 30, 1909, with capital stock of $50,000, and a financial statement in December, 1911, showed assets of $119,000 and liabilities of $47,318.

FORESTRY TOPICS.

Addresses by forestry experts at the State House, a demonstration of methods of attack on the leopard moths on Boston Common, by J. W. Chapman, city entomologist, and a trip to the estate of Gen. Stephen M. Weld at Dedham, where scientific forestry management is practiced, were included in the program of the recently-organized Massachusetts Tree Warden's and Foresters' Association, at their meeting in Boston, August 21. Prof. George E. Stone of Massachusetts Agricultural College presided at the morning meeting. Gov. Foss spoke of his personal interest in forestry. State Forester Frank W. Rane discussed "Moths and Forestry Practices," Asst. State Forester H. O. Cook spoke on "Forestry Management."

R. G. Pierce, employed by the Federal Government and the state to study the chestnut blight in Massachusetts, pointed out that the fungus which is destroying chestnut trees was first found in New York in 1904, and on August 21, 1913, it had been reported from 178 towns in Massachusetts. Mr. Pierce said the disease is so widespread that it cannot be stopped, but the blight can be checked and the life of chestnut woods prolonged.

PLANT QUARANTINE DECISION NO. 4.

The Federal Horticultural Board recommends that regulation 7 of the rules and regulations for carrying out the Plant Quarantine Act (37 Stat., 315), as amended March 4, 1913, published in circular No. 44, office of the secretary, issued May 26, 1913, be amended, to take effect as amended on and after August 1, 1913, so as to read as follows:

Each certificate and copy certificate shall give the date of inspection; name of the grower or exporter; the district or locality and the country where grown; a statement that the stock has been inspected by a duly authorized official and found, or believed to be, free from insect pests and plant diseases. The original certificate shall be signed and sealed by, and the copy certificate shall bear the seal of, the responsible inspection official for the country of origin.

Permits may be canceled and further permits refused for the importation of nursery stock from any given country whenever such stock, in the judgment of the Federal Horticultural Board, is found to be so infested as to plainly indicate that the foreign inspection is merely perfunctory, and such countries shall thereafter be classed as countries which do not maintain nursery stock inspection until satisfactory evidence is presented to show that the regulations of the board have been complied with.

Lists of officials in foreign countries authorized to inspect nursery stock, giving their names and official designations, will be furnished to collectors of customs through the secretary of the treasury.

When you talk of bubbles of light, etc., there is nothing to compare with the LUTTON HOUSE both as to durability and cost of maintenance. Our frame is entirely galvanized, even the nails, screws and bolts. On completion the house is treated with aluminum, producing a bright, shimmering finish so conducive to good growing results. No necessity for the expensive cost of repainting every two years to keep your house in presentable condition. The LUTTON reputation has been established on such facts as these. Our method is patented and if you don't get the LUTTON HOUSE you are not receiving honest returns on your investment. Our figures may be a little higher than others as our work costs more, but taking everything into consideration, it pays to do good work. We are ready for you at any time.

Kroeschell Replaces Cast Iron

Your No. 12 Kroeschell Boiler which I purchased last fall is heating 38,000 sq. ft. of glass. I have no trouble in the least to keep 60 to 70 degrees in the greenhouses in the coldest weather.

Your boiler is doing the work for which I formerly used three cast iron sectional boilers, but I would recommend the Kroeschell to anyone wanting to heat their greenhouses with the least trouble.

The First Rays Make Most Growth

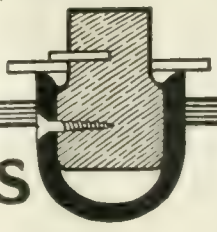
THE fact that in the first few hours of the morning, plants make more growth and better growth than in all the rest of the day, is a very vital point to have in mind when deciding on buying a greenhouse.

The lighter the construction of your greenhouse is, the quicker and stronger will be the growth. The greater will be the returns on your investment.

U-Bar Greenhouses have a complete galvanized aluminum painted steel frame, that makes them not only the lightest houses built, but rigid, enduring, and low in up-keep costs.

The first rays and the last rays of light count with U-Bar houses because their extreme lightness permits the greatest amount of light to reach the plants.

Graceful and attractive as the U-Bar construction is, its efficiency is after all, the thing.



They cost more but they are worth more, because results are more and cost of maintenance less.

We tell you these facts as a matter of protection.

Send for catalog or send for us—or both.

THE REASON WHY

The fact that we sell many more lily bulbs to florists than any other firm in the World is of little consequence. But the reason why this is so, is important. It is because the bulbs have given better satisfaction on the average than any other brand known. There are no better lily bulbs grown anywhere in the World than Horseshoe Brand Giganteum—due here very soon. Now is the time to order if you have not done so before. Prices as follows:

Size 6-8 $16 per case of 400 Size 7-9 $18 per case of 300
Size 9-10 $22 per case of 200

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

LIBR NEW BOTAN GARD

Get Your Compost Supply

Any time within the next six weeks is a good time to lay up compost for next season's use. Select some loamy pasture and cut the sod about four or five inches deep. This can be built up into square piles five feet or more high, placing a layer of well rotted cow manure between each layer of sod. There should be at least one-third of manure to two-thirds of sod. Before hard frosty weather sets in it should be chopped down and turned over, to hasten decomposition. With the winter's frost and snow this compost will be in a fine mechanical condition by next spring. Plenty of sod is the foundation for success in all horticultural operations under the glass.

Lifting Shrubs for Forcing

These should be lifted now as greater success will follow potting up now than a month later. Shrubs potted now will have several weeks in which to form fresh root fibres before the winter comes. Use pots or tubs that will just hold them conveniently. Give them a good, strong compost, say to three of fibrous loam use one of manure and give each pot plenty of drainage. Work the compost well in and around the roots. Set them where they can have shade for four or five days; but after that they should be given a place where they can have full sunshine. Extra care will have to be exercised in watering as some will dry out more quickly than others. When the weather becomes cold in November they can be placed where their pots will not break, but keep as cool as possible.

Making Outside Lily Beds

Those who intend to make up new beds or replant old ones can plant any time now and up to November. The best way to make a lily bed is to first throw out the soil to the depth of about 15 inches, and on the bottom place a 5 or 6-inch layer of sand and leaf mold to insure perfect drainage. Fill in on this loam any old manure mixed at the rate of two-thirds loam to one-third of manure. This can be filled within about six inches of the top of the bed. On this set the bulbs, leaving twelve inches between each bulb and cover with about an inch of sand all over, finishing with loam up to the top of the bed. When the ground has formed a frozen crust of about half an inch, spread four or five inches of forest leaves all over the bed and when the weather becomes colder, place about four inches of horse manure over the leaves. This protection will keep them in good order through the winter.

Nephrolepis

Ferns of the original Boston type, as also some of the newer forms, that were planted into benches last spring, have done very well and are now a mass of erect, sturdy frondage. It is now time to work this up into salable form, if not already taken in hand. It is only when afforded sufficient time, after being made up into specimen plants in the transfer from bench to pot that these ferns become the best of marketable decorative stock. A good compost is three parts fibrous loam, two of leaf mold and one of well-rotted and sifted cow manure. See that the pots are well cleaned and have good drainage. One of the surest ways to kill a fern is to let it wilt from being too dry at the roots. Another way but a trifle slower in its workings is to keep it in a soaked and soggy condition for any length of time. This suggests the exercise of watchfulness in the watering of ferns of all kinds, but Boston in particular during periods of abnormal weather conditions wants care in this line.

Transplanting Large Palms

When very large plants must be transplanted the work is usually put off until September, this being considered the best time for all such operations. However, one should not wait until the roots assisted by the decaying wood have fairly consumed the tubs or boxes, and eaten their way through the crumbling wood. When repotting large palms, make the compost rich, say to three of chopped sod use one of well decayed manure, and about a five-inch pot of bone meal to every barrow load of soil. By making use of properly rigged tackle the plant is raised, the new tub placed under it, the plant let down into it, worked about until it is exactly in the center, straight up and down and just right as to the depth in the box, and now the new soil is rammed into the remaining space all around, after which a thorough soaking will complete the job. Keep your palms clean by examining them every ten days and when needed giving a thorough cleaning to prevent insects from gaining a foothold.

Starting Fires

There are quite a few florists who have had their fires started by the end of August, but there are others who do not start them until the last thing. We have now come to the season where we have the chilly nights and the majority of plants will need fire heat right along now. There is no good in trying to save coal at the expense of growing stock, for when they once get a check they seem to hold it well into the new year, so run a little heat in all your houses as it makes the atmosphere better.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Cattleyas; Eucharis; Cyclamen; Hydrangeas; Jerusalem Cherry; Wintering Acacias and Genistas.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

George H. Penson

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Penson. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Shading

The commencement of another week will find us in the middle of September with nearby "Indian Summer" days and the fall not very far distant. The sun is relinquishing its power each day and soon the time will come around when we cannot see too much of it. Any shading that was put on the glass in the spring or summer months to make existence more tolerable for our subjects housed underneath should either be reduced in thickness or removed entirely as the case calls for. In this department most of our hardwood subjects will be preparing for next season in the way of ripening up wood, an essential process to obtain the best results, which will require all the sunlight that is to be had. Vineries that were shaded early will have nearly all the shading worn off with the weather; better yet if it is all gone but the chances are some still remains, in which case have it removed. Any houses that still have ripe fruit hanging, and the season has still to be prolonged for them, must perforce be left for a time but let it come off immediately the last bunch is cut. Young vineries, too, should have all shading removed; they will stand all the sun we shall get now. Help it off the late house, too, especially over such varieties as Gros Colman and Barbarossa. These will often show a reddish tint when ripe if not given plenty of sun when finishing.

Tomatoes

Lose no time in getting the tomatoes into their permanent quarters. Plants going in now will have some of their best fruit for the holidays and succeeding months. Any fairly rich open soil will grow them, coupled with the requisite care and attention. Where a large quantity is to be grown on wide benches it will pay to give them room. Crowded plants in the winter time are near worthless. 2 ft., 3 in., by 18 in. will be found enough distance for the general run of benches, but be governed by the width and give the plants the greater distance from east to west so that the sun's rays can penetrate between them. See that the plants are not dry at the time they are planted.

Lettuce

Lettuce can be protected from early frosts in the gardens similar to bush beans, which should be practiced as long as possible. It will be a long time before spring again and the strain on frames and the vegetable house is no light one all the long winter months. Lettuce in the cold frames to furnish a supply before the very severe weather sets in should now be growing nicely. Encourage it in every way possible, chief of which is a loose surface-soil so that the air can penetrate and sweeten the soil. If the soil was enriched with a dressing of bone meal no feeding will be needed. Keep the plants as hard as possible which will fit them for any cold snap they may have to pass through.

Bush Beans

Continue to make regular sowings of bush beans every ten days or two weeks to keep up a continuous supply. If only half a dozen rows are put in at a time they will more than repay the extra trouble. By sowing a whole bench, more than enough will be on hand for a week and then a shortage will be experienced until the next bench comes in. The case is reversed with spinach, which also can go in now. The leaves of this are picked and more will replace them, which makes the supply from any one sowing much longer than with the beans.

Gathering Late Apples

This subject may not come under the heading at the top of the page but it is one that will concern most readers. These late apples invariably are for "Keeps" and, although money will buy more if these go wrong, it is poor satisfaction to know that they went wrong through carelessness at the time they were gathered. The fruit room furnishes a pretty sight through the winter months with each variety staged by itself and happy is the man who can look them over and say—"all's well." Granted, a few will go wrong under the best management, but there's a limit to all things, including bad apples. Nowhere should the big red-lettered labels "Handle with Care" be more in evidence than at the time late keeping apples are being gathered. It is the bruises they receive before reaching the fruit room that causes so many to decay prematurely. Gather and store them when dry and without bruises and they will keep as long as is claimed for them.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ružička

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Weeds Around the Houses

With more rain, which we have been having, the weeds all around the greenhouses will flourish as they never did before, providing they are allowed to do so. Even in spite of all the work that may have to be done inside it will pay the growers to spend so much time every week on the outside of the greenhouses. The place that can boast of a lawn will generally boast of the highest dividends. The cleaner the place on the outside the easier it will be to keep it so inside, for the weeds will not be harboring insects of a hundred different species, and plant diseases, which are bound to affect the roses in either direct or indirect way. Therefore clean up.

The Coal Bin

NO, it does not pay to say that there is time enough to worry about the coal when it gets cold. The progressive grower will have his coal ordered and in the bins long before the winter sets in. That is why the place pays better, for everything is done when it should be and results show up accordingly. The boilers, also, should be in very good shape in order to be ready when they are called to do duty. In case the whole heating system has not been overhauled during the summer months it will pay to go over all the pipes at once before much heat is used, as all the pipes will then be hot and work can go forward only with the greatest difficulty.

Tarring Roofs of Worksheds

This is another item that is not exactly rose growing, and yet it has considerable to do with it. When the winds blow in the winter many roofs are torn up and it costs a good deal to repair them. Much of this damage could be avoided if the roofs were tarred once in a while. The best time to do this is while the weather is still warm and the roofs perfectly dry. Apply the tar hot, and then sprinkle some sand to dry the tar, at the same time making a very durable coating for the roof.

The Night Temperature

Now that the nights are getting to be quite cool, the night temperature should receive careful attention, or mildew will be likely to start in. It is best not to let the houses drop down too low, for the thermometer often runs up a good deal in the daytime. Do not close the ventilators altogether at night. It is much too early in the season to begin this kind of work. Better leave on at least a crack of air, using artificial heat to hold up the temperature, if necessary. About 64 degrees F. is right for most of the roses now in cultivation, and the roses will grow much quicker if run this way. Then, too, the houses will run up in the daytime, and it does the roses no good to have too great a difference between the day and night temperature.

BRITISH HORTICULTURE.

At the annual meeting in London of the Horticultural Trade Association, Wm. Cuthbertson of Dobbie & Co., Edinburgh, was unanimously elected president.

A New Tomato.

Amongst the exhibits at the show of the Royal Horticultural Society on August 26 was a new tomato, Buck's Tresco, shown by Chas. H. Buck, of the Tresco Nursery, Ipswich. The fruit is of a suitable size for commercial purposes, well colored, and of excellent shape, whilst the flavor is everything that can be desired. The sample trusses indicated that the new tomato is a heavy cropper. Each plant usually carries not less than 28 pounds of fruit under ordinary culture.

Gladiolus Show in London.

At the summer show of the National Gladiolus Society, held in the Royal Horticultural Hall, London, a first-class certificate was awarded to Electra, a useful scarlet, with the lower petals containing a tinge of white, shown by P. Hopman & Sons, Hillegom. Awards of merit were allotted to the following: Prince of Wales, salmon with a yellowish centre, from C. van Zanten, Hillegom; Mrs. Frank Pendleton, flesh pink with dark centre, from Firma Vos Mz, Sassenheim, Haarlem; King of the Blues, dark blue, from K. Velthuys, Hillegom; Pink Perfection, soft pink, from P. Hopman & Sons, Hillegom; Libesfeuer, scarlet, from De Ruyter, Noordwijk, and Loveliness, creamy white, from the last named grower.

BLACK SPOTS ON CARNATION FOLIAGE.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

I am sending you carnation leaves affected with black spots. The plants are benched for some time. We have sprayed with insecticide but it seems to have no effect. We would be very much obliged if you could tell us what it is and what we could use to stop it.

Yours sincerely,

Long Island. A. R.

The sample of carnation foliage which come with foregoing is, we think, affected with a fungus arising from a heavy mulch of cow manure, which will appear a week or so after mulch is put on. As it ripens, these spores (if that is what they are), are thrown out on the foliage or even the bench boards and stick there. No doubt Bordeaux would help in spraying. In answering the query, we would ask if cow manure, fresh, was used as a mulch? We don't think the fungus propagates on the carnations, and, aside from looks, hardly think it dangerous.

FRUIT AND NUT GROWERS TO MEET.

An event of national importance to fruit and nut growing interests of this continent will occur in Washington, D. C., November 17 to 22. On this occasion the American Promological Society, The Society for Horticultural Science, The Eastern Fruit Growers' Association and the Northern Nut Growers' Association will meet as a unit event designated as Fruit Week. The programs and business of the separate organizations will be conducted independently in the same building, while all exhibits will be displayed in common, though entries shall be made through the respective bodies, thus keeping the identity of each intact.

Ample cold storage space has been provided near the meeting place and persons contemplating making an exhibit of perishable fruits may forward material well wrapped and packed to the Washington Market Company, who will care for it at a very nominal charge. All packages should be plainly market "for the American Pomological Society." Requirements for exhibit space should be filed before October 15 with the secretary of the Pomological Society, who may be addressed at 2033 Park Road, Washington, D. C. Application for entry for Wilder medals should also be made to the secretary of the society not less than ten days previous to the date of meeting.

Scentless musk?

We have received a communication from Mrs. Francis King calling attention to a letter she had received from a lady in England—Miss Jekyll—asking whether the "musk plant," Minulus moschatus had been known to lose its scent under cultivation in this country. Miss Jekyll states that "during the last two or three years it has entirely lost its very sweet scent in English gardens." We notice that this question has already been pretty well threshed out in one of the English horticultural journals, in which the correspondents do not all agree that any change has come over the musk plant. In this country, of which it is a native, we do not think musk is generally regarded as a "very sweet scent." It is grown more or less, all around, and so far as we have noted, has lost none of its characteristic odor. If any of our readers can give any information on the subject we shall be glad to publish it.

"Show me"

Our Philadelphia correspondent, in his notes in this issue on the recent dahlia show at Wanamaker's, tells us that made-up designs and baskets showing many different effective ways of using the dahlia were a feature. Our horticultural bodies giving public flower shows can take a useful hint here. John Wanamaker is recognized as one of the most clever and successful advertisers in the business world. One of his objects in giving this dahlia show was undoubtedly to increase the sale of dahlias and so with that end in view he goes further than to merely display the various varieties in monotonous rows of bottles or vases, and proceeds to whet the public interest by showing them the many uses to which these flowers may be put and how to produce the best decorative effect by their use. Of course, where a horticultural club or society has for its sole purpose the demonstration of skill in the production of fine material these suggestions have no application. But if a part of its aim in life is to increase the public interest and help make the use of flowers more general about the home and elsewhere, then its opportunity and its duty are plain enough. The people are ready to be shown how.

Publicity

The question as to what has become of the "publicity" boom has been repeatedly asked of late. We have noticed, however, that those who propound this question are not always of those who have ever shown any excess of zeal to contribute of their time or their means towards any such organized movement for the general good. Any one in close touch with club and society activities soon has the conviction forced upon him that a very large proportion of his fellow florists are not averse to letting the other fellow do the work. The whole aim of "publicity" is to increase the sale of flowers and plants, not necessarily on holidays and special occasions that already consume about all that is offered at a normal price, but on every day throughout the year. What is first needed to bring this about is that the rank and file of the trade shall be in sympathy and ready to extend support and co-operation as far as lies in their power, and that then the best talent in the profession be enlisted to formulate and put into operation some broad-gauge systematic plan of action. This is more easily said than done. Constructive force and executive ability of the highest order will be indispensable in the initiatory period especially. We have no doubt that the daily consumption of florists' flowers in every part of this country could be quickly doubled and trebled and then doubled again by the expenditure of the right kind of energy in the right way, with a well-equipped and efficient S. A. F. department as a basis. Very little permanent benefit can be expected

REPORT OF SCHOOL GARDEN COMMITTEE OF S. A. F.

By Benjamin Hammond.

In the city of Milwaukee there is a beautiful ornamental park on Grand avenue, in which is a monument of George Washington. At the foot of the pedestal stands a mother and her young son, the mother pointing upward to Washington. This is an object lesson of the first order, inspiring the child to high ideals. Home gardening in Milwaukee is being well looked after and the results in that direction have set an example country wide. The work of the school garden is an economic incentive that is producing valuable results; the home garden transforms many a barren lot into a bit of productive land, carrying with it habits of industry and thrift.

The florists of America scattered the country over, in the smaller cities and villages, are a local object lesson to inspire the growth of practical beauty. The products of the greenhouse, large or small, are visible in the cheering and beautifying of home, school or public occasion. Your committee, realizing this important work, has as far as lay in its power, aided in stirring up this spirit by sending an illustrated circular letter, nicely printed, to every superintendent of schools where a member of the Society of American Florists resides, and to each commissioner of education in every state. The school garden work is enthusiastically done in many cities. Here in Minneapolis and St. Paul will be found notable examples of school gardening at its best. In Milwaukee our committee-man, Mr. Whitnall, has made a mark in beautifying plain places. In Washington, D. C., 30 years ago and less, it was unkept and untidy, today it is largely a "tidy town." One woman was a prime mover there, Miss Sipe, and the government department followed suit. In Cleveland, Ohio, Miss Miller has done more, I believe, to improve plain home surroundings by her school garden work than Mr. John D. Rockefeller with his huge benefactions.

At Wilkesbarre, Pa., is another example. Mr. Seybold, who, at Baltimore, helped start the school garden work in that city, is now transforming Wilkesbarre. In Georgia, in the city of Athens, teachers for other schools are being trained as time will permit, and this work wherever it is done starts a spirit of local leadership in tidiness and beauty. Wherever you find the taste developing among the people for tidiness, there comes with certainty the demand for flowers. The larger cities have led off in this work, and, of course, the cities are the great commercial markets for flowers, and the school garden and the home garden create a desire for these beautiful products of the florist's vocation.

Children who may never make professors or bookkeepers would take an interest in this work and stick to it, developing mentally along that line of practical benefit, without doubt, for future years. In Canada the value of school garden work is probably more appreciated than in the smaller towns of the U. S. At Guelph, Ont., attention is given to giving the teachers some personal instruction to be used in their professional work. In Louisville, Ky., much work has been done in flower growing, especially bulbs, hyacinths, tulips, narcissus, daffodils. In Philadelphia, work in the school garden line is keeping up. William Penn's original plan was to make and keep his new town a green town where sunlight may shine and comfort and peace prevail. In 1912 over 92,000 children attended these gardens. At Rock Hill, S. C., the teaching of school garden work and mill hands how to make gardens, is being pressed by J. L. Carberry, under direction of the U. S. Department of Plant Culture. In Rhode Island at the State College, Kingston, Ernst K. Thomas is in real earnest in developing school and home gardens. He advocates flower borders for each vegetable bed, and in a school garden plot puts a flower bed in the center. At Hartford, Conn., in a tour of the parks, recently, evidence was visible of the home culture of dooryards and the opportunity for the little folks to learn how to make gardens for flowers, etc.

The Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco is planning to have a grand showing of school gardens, and in all this work no man stands in more effective position to uplift his community than the member of the Society of American Florists. The school garden fosters the activities of child life; the home garden certainly develops the sense of ownership and respect for private property. This we witnessed in our own community, and no florist's establishment ever did a town anything but good. These examples here cited are only one here and there, picked out from a mass of correspondence, showing the interest in this work. As has been said the committee thus far has simply gone as far as practicable in suggestions with the school men in charge of the local schools to have an eye on a grand good work, that is. School Gardening, wherever it may be taken up.

Smith of Fredonia; secretary, John Watson of Newark; treasurer, Horace Hooker of Rochester. On the executive committee are J. B. Morris of Dansville and John Rice of Geneva.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

The opening meeting for the new season held in Grand Opera House headquarters on Monday evening, September 8, was a very gratifying one in attendance and interest, about fifty members being present. Reports were made by entertainment, outing and transportation committees and Secretary Young gave an enthusiastic account of his experiences in Minneapolis, full details of the trade exhibition and outdoor planting, after which the thanks of the club were extended to the Minneapolis Florists' Club and Park Commissioners and a telegram of sympathy to Theodore Wirth on account of his accident, was voted. H. A. Bunyard on the outdoor exhibition; Leonard Barron on the gardens of the Northwest; Frank Traendly on the hospitality extended to the Convention ladies; M. C. Ebel on general topics, including insects; John G. Esler on recreation; Joseph A. Manda on the sports; Chas. Lenker on Sulzer's veto of the Cornell Bill, and Max Schling on the interests of the retail dealers, all together made a pretty lively program. The Convention testimonials were uniformly eulogistic in the highest degree.

The death of John B. Nugent, Sr., was reported and a committee on resolutions was appointed, consisting of W. F. Sheridan, John Young and F. H. Traendly.

A brilliant exhibition of gladioli, dahlias, etc., was made by Messrs. John Lewis Childs, Thos. W. Head and C. H. Totty, to each of whom the thanks of the club were voted. Mr. Totty showed the new early outdoor chrysanthemum Helene

FLORISTS' CLUB OF WASHINGTON.

Stating that the Minneapolis convention was by far the best that he had ever attended, William F. Gude entertained the members of the Florists' Club of Washington with a very interesting account of the proceedings and of the various entertainments provided for the florists and their families The remarks of several other members of the Club who have just returned from vacations spent in Boston has set the others to planning to take in the next convention to be held there and a good representation from this city may be expected. The Secretary was instructed to convey to Mr. Robert McLennen the congratulations of the club upon his having attained the highest individual bowling score at the convention and the hope that he may repeat the performance next year. This is an added incentive to the local bowling club, of which he is a member, to do their best with the hope of winning the team prize.

Upon adjournment refreshments were served and the evening proved a pleasant one regardless of the extreme heat which kept a number of the florists away. N. L. Hammer acted as secretary in the absence of Mr. Mayberry, who has, accompanied by Mrs. Mayberry, been spending a short vacation in Maryland.

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

The next regular monthly meeting of the club will be held at Horticultural Hall, Boston, on Tuesday evening, September 16, 1913, at 8 o'clock. The subject of the meeting will be "Convention Echoes," with short addresses from President Farquhar, of the S. A. F., Vice-president-elect Patrick Welch and other prominent club members who attended the late Minneapolis Convention. There will be considerable other business of importance and it is hoped there will be a large attendance at the coming meeting to open the fall campaign.

Obituary

William Henry Maule.

Big-hearted, high-minded, keen-sighted, shrewd, far-seeing, impetuous, impulsive, cultured, kindly William Henry Maule has gone from our midst in a flash—and left us all lamenting! To me he was an ideal of all that was fine and noble in our profession. He came of the sturdy Anglo-Saxon stock that made Pennsylvania famous in the days of the making of this mighty nation, and nobly he upheld the glorious record of his ancestors in every walk of life! GEORGE C. WATSON.

In the death of William Henry Maule the American seed trade has lost not only one of the most prominent, but also one of its most popular, useful and progressive members. I loved and admired William Henry Maule and am proud of the fact that he loved me—as he did his other close friends—for whom he would have gladly made any sacrifice. With nine other close personal friends as honorary pallbearers I followed his body to its burial this afternoon in the beautiful grounds of the Church of the Redeemer. We ten who were among those who knew him best realize that his place can never be filled and that with his widow, daughters and brother we shall feel his loss as long as we may live. He has passed into the "great beyond," and deeply as we may sorrow he would be quick, could he speak, to say that while living it is our duty to look forward, not backward, and that while on the earth each should do his "level best" towards helping our day and generation—and this, not for hope of reward, nor fear of punishment. The world is poorer today that William Henry Maule is with us no more. I only wish that many more could have known him as intimately as I and a few other close friends in the seed trade. The trade would be better for such knowledge.

It is only a few years before we all must pass over into the "great beyond." Meanwhile, let us have that broad charity that will excuse each other's failings and strive earnestly, as did William Henry Maule, to help one another, realizing that "we pass this way but once."

W. ATLEE BURPEE.

The sudden and unexpected death last week of Wm. Henry Maule, caused a shock and gripping of the heart to many a member of the American seed trade. The Grim Reaper has levied heavy toll on the American seed trade in the last few months—Frank L. Emerson, A. L. Don, Wm. Ewing and now Mr. Maule, have all "bowed to the "boatman's call" within the past six months.

The writer has had a long, though by no means intimate acquaintance with Mr. Maule and therefore will not attempt even a brief biographical sketch. This item is intended as a small tribute to the memory of a leading member of the seed trade of this country.

Mr. Maule was a man of very marked and strong personality, a fine type of the forceful, aggressive, yet frank and kindly business man, broad gauge and tolerant. He would often relate some marked success of a competitor with as much apparent enthusiasm as if it were his own. The loyalty of his employees, and particularly those who frequently came into close contact with him, was often noted and though blunt and sometimes severe in criticising negligence or inefficiency, he was most appreciative of devotion and loyal service.

Mr. Maule though for many years a member of the American Seed Trade Association—we have been informed he was a charter member—was not personally very well known to his fellow members, and particularly to those who have joined the association within the last decade. Fifteen to twenty years ago, or even further back, Mr. Maule attended the conventions of the Association quite regularly and took a prominent part in the discussion of all important matters, and is well known to the older members of the association. Though perhaps not so well acquainted personally with the seedsmen of the country as many others, his name was almost as well known as any seedsman of the past quarter of a century and his customers were intensely loyal, a fact which may be explained on the ground that he never knowingly allowed to be sent out anything not of the best quality and germination., Any one really having goods of a superior quality, if he could convince Mr. Maule of the fact, found in him a liberal buyer and loyal customer so long as quality was not permitted to deteriorate. Taken all in all, Mr. Maule reflected conspicuous honor and credit on the seed trade, as he would on any business in which he had engaged. His being a personal business, he having no partners, we have not learned what instructions, if any, he has left for continuing it.

To the widow and family we extend our earnest sympathy, and believe we voice the practically unanimous sentiment of the seed trade at large.

John B. Nugent.

John B. Nugent, Sr., died at his home in New York City on Saturday, September 6th, at the advanced age of 91 years and 5 months. Mr. Nugent was born in the County of Meath, Ireland, April 8, 1822. He came to this country in 1872 and started in the florist business at 69th street and Park avenue and continued uninterruptedly in active business until about three years ago. He was a member of Monitor Lodge, No. 528, F. & A. M., also of 73rd Street Presbyterian Church and the church and the lodge held funeral services jointly on Monday night, many florists attending and numerous floral tributes being sent. Interment was at Woodlawn on Tuesday. Three children survive him—John B. and Wm. F. Nugent, both of whom are in the florist business, and one daughter Mrs. Marian Griggs.

JOHN B. NUGENT, SR.

There are seven grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

One only needs to look on the portrait which accompanies these lines to know what manner of man Mr. Nugent was. His sterling manly character is read in every lineament. A man beyond reproach, he was universally respected. He rounded out a long, useful and benignant life.

W. H. Sarvel.

W. H. Sarvel, a wholesale grower of Kansas City, Mo., took his own life on the morning of Thursday, August 28. Nervous breakdown from overwork is believed to have been the cause.

Officers—President, Chas. C. Massie, Minneapolis, Minn.; 1st vice-president, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, N. Y.; 2nd vice-president, W. F. Therkildson, Palmsville, O.; secretary, C. E. Kendel; assistant secretary, S. F. Willard, Jr., both of Cleveland, O.

Clarinda, Iowa—The A. A. Berry Seed Co. are erecting a four-story warehouse, 30x60.

Gilroy, Cal.—The Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co. expect to move here from San Jose next November.

Waterloo, Iowa—E. S. Quinn has resigned as vice-president of the Griswold Seed Co., at Lincoln, Neb., and will become manager of the Galloway-Bowman Seed Co., here.

A. W. Brill of Long Island writes that the early prospects were for an enormous yield of cabbage seed, but the dry weather and green lice set in just before harvest time, with the result that they got only about one-quarter of the crop expected, and now they are refusing every day to quote prices on large lots.

J. J. Wilson, who for the past fifteen years has been connected with J. M. Thorburn & Co., during half of which time he was secretary of the corporation, has started a new concern, incorporated in the State of New Jersey as the J. J. Wilson Seed Co., Mr. Wilson being president and active manager of the new company, which has opened for business at 79 Orange St., Newark, N. J.

Th Weekly News Letter, published by the U. S. Department of Agriculture under date of September 10, 1913, states that a number of shipments of orchard grass seed have recently been imported into the United States which contain only about 25 per cent. of orchard grass seed, the balance being mostly chaff.

The import price of this seed is such that it cannot be recleaned but must be sold either in the condition in which it is imported or mixed with other seed. There is enough seed contained in these shipments to seed approximately 10,000 acres, and not more than a quarter of a stand can be expected where the low grade seed is sown.

Theodore Wheeler goes as manager of the greenhouses of Mrs. A. D. Trumbull at Carbondale, Pa.

S. W. Carlquist of Ethelwynd Gardens, Lenox, Mass., is taking a trip to Niagara Falls for a few days.

Wm. Livesey has sold out his florist business in New Bedford, Mass., and has gone to San Diego, California.

Arthur S. Parker, of Stoneham, Mass., a well-known florist in the Boston market, is to be a candidate for the legislature on the Progressive state ticket this fall.

George Cartwright, manager of the Boston Flower Exchange, was presented with an oil portrait of himself, life size, by his friends in the market recently. P. W. Firth was the artist.

Thos. G. Williams, for some time past with H. H. Battles, Philadelphia, and formerly foreman at the John H. Taylor rose houses, Bayside, N. Y., has accepted a position with Peirce Bros., Waltham, Mass.

The engagement has been announced of Miss Alberta R. Billingham, of Jamaica Plain, Mass., to Mr. Hubert M. Canning, of Brookline. Mr. Canning is in the employ of Olmstead Bros., the well-known landscape gardeners.

Pleasant tidings come from Minneapolis that Theodore Wirth is getting along nicely after his accident. Personal letters received from him are in a very cheerful and optimistic vein and that goes a long way towards recovering from any physical ill.

The announcement, in this issue, that John Young, the popular secretary of the S. A. F. and New York Florists' Club, is about to re-enter the wholesale cut flower business in New York will be received with general approval by the trade. Mr. Young has had a thorough experience in the commission field, knows the market, knows the goods and knows the men who produce the goods and those who use them. With all this equipment and the good will of the floral trade everywhere, Mr. Young should build up a winning business and we hope to see him make a success equal to that which he has achieved in society work. Of wholesale florists in New York City, it may be said, "Their name is legion," but there will always be room at the top.

Boston visitors: Dan MacFie, superintendent of gardening at Sage Foundation Homes Co., Forest Hill, N. Y.; Harry A. Barnard, representing Stuart Low & Co., Enfield, Eng.; M. H. Walsh, Woods Hole, Mass.; J. Berg, representing Lion & Co., New York.

St. Louis visitors.—Martin Reukauf, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; J. J. Karins, of Dreer's, Philadelphia; H. Wenderoth, of Nick Wapler; S. Seligman, of Wertheimer Bros.; J. Buback, of Schloss Bros.; M. LeVine, of Lion & Co., and W. Dykes, of Ed. Jansen, New York.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

The property at 14th and H streets, occupied by Z. D. Blackistone as a florist store, has been sold and the building will be demolished to make room for a modern office building.

William Marche reports having spent a very pleasant three weeks' vacation, accompanied by his wife and child, at Asbury Park, N. J., and a visit to New York and Philadelphia where he picked up a number of good ideas.

Mrs. Coffman, formerly at F. H. Kramer's F street store, has gone to Parkersburg, W. Va., where she will take up duties in the store there in which she has an interest. Her son Harold, who was with Gude Bros., is with her.

The Senate, as a Committee of the Whole, has agreed to amending paragraph 599 by the insertion after the word "seedlings" on page 149, line 22, of the words "four years old or less." This paragraph now reads: Bulbs and bulbous roots, not edible and not otherwise provided for in this section; all flower and grass seeds; coniferous evergreen seedlings four years old or less; all the foregoing not specially provided for in this section. This paragraph is within the Free List.

The Department of Agriculture has decided to maintain the quarantine which it some time ago placed on imported plants, fruit and seed which have been found to carry destructive insects and plant diseases. The Mediterranean fruit fly has resulted in the placing of a ban on Hawaiian fruit shipments, because the small headway made by this insect in the United States led the Department to believe that its spread would be a menace to the fruit and vegetable growers of the country and to the horticulturists. The latest quarantine established, which the Department shows no inclination to remove, prohibits the shipment of fruit from Mexico. The discovery of the "Mexican fruit fly," a dangerous pest, was responsible for this quarantine.

The eighty-second annual exhibition of the American Institute will be held in the Engineering Building, 25 to 33 West Thirty-ninth street, New York City, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, September 23, 24 and 25. Liberal prizes are offered for dahlias, orchids, gladioli, annual and hardy herbaceous flowers, ferns, palms, floral novelties, fruits and garden vegetables, etc. Prize schedules may be obtained from the secretary, 322-324 West 23rd street, New York.

CHICAGO NOTES.

C. A. Samuelson has returned from a western trip, which included an inspection of his apple orchards.

The Cook County Florists' Association held its annual picnic, September 7th and a glorious time was enjoyed.

Visitors: S. R. Welch, of Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, Ohio; H. Philpott, Winnipeg, Man., Can.; Sam Seligman, of New York, is still in Chicago, being detained by illness.

The preliminary premium list of the Chrysanthemum Society of America in conjunction with the Horticultural Society of Chicago and the Chicago Florists' Club, has been received here. The exhibit will be held at the Art Institute, November 5, 6, 7.

Some changes in the retail stores of the "Loop" are coming with the advent of the fall season. In the window of the Muir store on East Monroe street hangs a "For Rent" sign and the store now occupied by another florist is being advertised by the renting agent.

Starved Rock, a special feature in the newly acquired State Park of Illinois, and so called because of the fate of a tribe of Indians who lost their lives upon its summit, was the scene of a patriotic celebration, September 7. Flag poles were set and flags raised to their places while flowers were thrown into the river below in honor of the soldiers of 1812.

The American Importing Co., of So. Dearborn street, thus far known only through their specialty, gold letters for florists, have so increased their business that they now announce themselves as a general florists' supply house. They are putting on the market a new letter known as Mother of Pearl, which is very handsome and the firm announce themselves as willing and anxious to send samples to all in the trade. See their advertisement in another column.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES.

Edward Reid left on a three weeks' business trip through the southern states on the 9th inst.

Our old friend Raymond Kester, late of Pennock Bros. and the Hill-Heller Co., paid us a visit last week in company with his partner, Mr. Hardin. They are getting ready to open a flower store in Williamsport, Pa., under the title Kester & Hardin. The location will be at 213 West Fourth street, and they expect to be ready for business by the 20th inst.

The Wanamaker store gave a dahlia show this week which attracted good crowds—probably ten thousand a day for six days. About two hundred varieties were staged, these all coming from the Peacock Dahlia Farm in New Jersey. No flowers were sold but orders were taken for spring delivery. This event was undoubtedly a good boost for the dahlia in addition to being good business for Wanamaker and Peacock. Made-up designs and baskets showing many different effective ways of using the dahlia were a feature. Palms and ferns were freely used among the flowers to break the monotony.

Visitors: Wm. Rehder, Wilmington, N. C.; Raymond Kester and R. H. Hardin, Williamsport, Pa.; S. McClements, Randolph & McClements, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Mrs. C. M. Perry, Phoebus, Va.; Antoine Leuthy, Roslindale, Mass.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Business is not showing any great advancement as far as demand goes, but the outlook is satisfactory in all respects. Quality of most items on the regular flower list is improving with the cooler weather and September Morn seems to exercise a healthy effect on the product generally. New carnations are just beginning to take their place in the market. Flowers are good and foliage clean, but stems are still too short for good work. Chrysanthemums are in; only a few, however, and mostly yellow. There is a clamor for cattleyas, but few are to be had. There will be a surfeit soon, though. Gardenias are beginning to look pretty good, but there is very little call for them. American Beauty roses are in good quality; sales very moderate. All other roses are abundant, with quality inferior and values very low. Special roses would sell just now, but they are not to be had and the low grade stock which is 90 per cent of the receipts is not wanted. Asters are overloaded on all sides; prices unquotable. Same holds true of gladioli, but these are rapidly decreasing in numbers. Sweet peas are useless, as a rule. Lilies and lily of the valley normal.

BUFFALO The market was filled up on everything the past week and the outlet was blocked especially on gladioli and ordinary asters. The best quality of asters are on and have taken well but the shorts have accumulated and very little will be realized on them. Roses are coming in heavier each day and there is an oversupply on short-stem stock. The medium and select blooms have taken better. Lilies have shortened up. Lily of the valley has cleaned up well this summer. There is a quantity of garden stuff but very little demand at this time.

CHICAGO The first week in September was one of extremes in temperature, making a new record for hot weather, followed quickly with another for cold. Flower sales are always quick to respond to weather conditions, especially locally. Shipping trade has been unusually good for most of the summer months, owing doubtless to the lack of rain in the country generally. Carnations are increasing daily in quantity, but the increase in length of stem is as yet not noticeable. Eight inches is a fair average. All the varieties of roses generally grown may now be found somewhere in the market, the Killarneys, Richmond, Rhea Reid, Bulgarie, Sunburst and Ward, and now comes Milady in its first season here, with its rich velvety red color and full petals making it a favorite one. Aster season gives no indication of being on the wane, but all the late varieties are coming on and prices holding firm. American Beauties are only keeping up with the demand, the cool days holding them back a little. Harrisii lilies are still in short supply, while rubrum have about disappeared. Gladioli are out of the race, the great bulk poor in quality and all unsalable. Tritoma is with us again, as brilliant as ever. Smilax continues scarce; all other green plentiful. Some fine large

Special Attention to the Shipping Trade

TO GROWERS

Having decided to resume business as a WHOLESALE FLORIST, I wish to notify my friends that I have secured the store—53 West 28th St., New York, which is well adapted to the requirements of a wholesale florist's business, and is

In the centre of the CUT FLOWER MARKET DISTRICT

Consignments of stock are solicited and consignors are assured that their consignments will be handled with a full knowledge of market conditions and to the best advantage.

An experience extending over 25 years in the cut flower commission business, justifies me in the assertion that all consignments entrusted to me will have the same attention that growers themselves could give to their products in open market, plus the assurance which comes from an intimate knowledge of the trade and trade conditions in New York.

Our facilities are such that consignments, great or small, will be well cared for, and the handling of all flowers will be in the direction of the best returns to be offered by the market.

Flower Market Reports

asters, grown in Winnipeg, Man., Can., were shown in the market. They compared favorably in every way with the best grown here. Among the best this week are the old favorites, Rose King and Violet King, with petals of the quill type, and the large shaggy Krego, both of which are quickly bought up.

NEW YORK

Business begins to show some faint signs of returning animation. It has been the longest, dreariest, dull summer that the flower trade of this city has ever passed through and the revival cannot come too soon, although not much can be hoped for as long as salubrious weather continues and makes auto touring a pleasure. Quality is gradually working up on roses, carnations and some other things. The heavy burden of asters, gladioli and dahlias is in the way, however, of any appreciation in value of indoor material except cattleyas, which are very scarce and longiflorum lilies, which are less overstocked than they have been. Lily of the valley has been a good seller all summer.

ST. LOUIS

The local market was in bad shape during the last week. There was entirely too much stock and the demand was slow, so a great deal of stock had to be dumped. Quality in roses is becoming much better. Carnations are still small and short in stem. The great glut of the week was in asters, gladioli and tuberose stalks and cheap prices prevailed on all these.

CINCINNATI Last week proved a fair one. The supply of stock was large but the demand took up a large part of it. The call ran more toward seasonable blooms, as asters, etc., than to roses and the like. The supply of roses continued large with only a small percentage of fancy stock. The good choice blooms sell fairly well while short and medium grades find a rather slow request. The call for Beauties is rather good. Asters are in good supply. Most of the receipts are of a high quality that sell very nicely. Gladioli are on the wane but still have an active demand for the best grades of stock. Dahlias are coming in strong but up to the time of this writing have not acquired any tremendous popularity. Easter lilies are very short of the call for them and if more had been available in the past several days they would have cleaned up easily. A good many rubrum lilies are offered. Smilax is on the short side of the market.

PHILADELPHIA There was a great deal of mortuary work last week, especially among the 400. Many prominent Philadelphians were in the New Haven wreck, and in addition there were quite an unusual number of distinguished citizens who fell before the Great Reaper. This had its effect on the flower market, but there was plenty of stock for all demands. Asters and dahlias are now the prominent features. Gladioli still in fair supply. The first flakes of the chrysanthemum storm now falling—Smith's Advance and Golden Glow, mostly—quality very good. Nothing new in roses or carnations. Orchids still very scarce.

WASHINGTON Business thus far during September has been fairly good, showing an improvement over August. While asters are about at an end, dahlias are beginning to come into the market in such quantities as to make them a wearisome sight. The new crop American Beauty roses are exceptionally fine as to color, foliage and stem. Yellow and white chrysanthemums are quite abundant. Carnations are coming in with stems so short as to make them practically worthless. Orchids are not very plentiful but gardenias have been available throughout the year, something never before accomplished in this city.

The Boston Flower Exchange had its annual auction sale for choice of stalls, on Saturday, Sept. 6, at the new market in Winthrop square, Boston. There was a very large attendance and the sales were eminently satisfactory to the board of directors and everybody else concerned. A very promising outlook for the coming season seems assured.

CONSERVATORY PROBLEMS

EVERY conservatory problem is a different problem, simply because practically every house is different.
The mere fact that they should always be located on the southward side of the house oft-times makes a very arbitrary conditions difficult to overcome.

We have been particularly successful with conservatories as a result no doubt, of our long years of greenhouse building experience.

Send for our catalog which shows many interesting examples of both.
